The Best Proposition!

Looked at any way you please, no line of goods holds out the same inducements to the Grocer as

UPTON'S
Jams, Jellies and Marmaade

First, they are made from the finest fruits in the world---Canadian Fruits---selected by experts and preserved and bottled in an up-to-date, sanitary factory, which is a model of cleanliness. Second, the "Upton" line never 'sticks,' because our extensive consumer advertising has created a demand for these goods; and third, selling "Upton's" specialties invariably leaves a satisfaction and profit margin behind that makes trading pleasure.

Are you featuring "Upton's" If not, fall in line with the 'wi ones.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

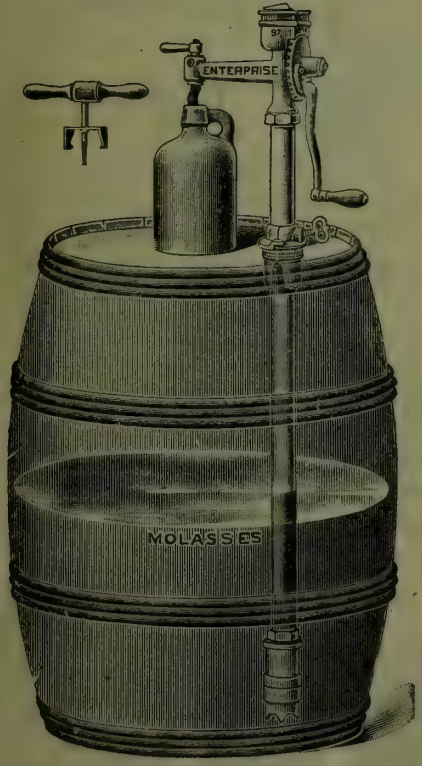
After typhoid or scarlet fever, anaemia, pneumonia, grippe, or any exhausting disease, Doctors recommend

Brand's Essence of Beef

It is a clear, amber-colored jelly and can best be taken in this form, though it is easily assimilated in any manner the Doctor orders.

The merits of Brand's Essence of Beef have been attested in all countries of the world, and, wherever introduced, it has found a ready sale.



Brand and Co. are at present actively engaged in bringing this preparation before the medical profession of Canada, and already grocers in many parts of the country are receiving enquiries for Brand's.

Grocers Ventilate Their Hardships

Tell About the Inconsistencies of Human Nature and Particularly of Women—It was Before the Association Meeting Began—Incidents From Real Life—One Dealer Acts as Private Banker—Another is Asked for Assistance to Put Up Stove Pipes—Poor Pay Customer Leaves Owing $30.

"Well sir, you can't beat some people;" began one of the members addressing the others as they quietly entered singly or in couples prior to the opening of the association meeting, "you can do a customer a good turn ninety-nine times and if you do not just please her on the one-hundredth she will forget or ignore all that you have ever done for her in the past.

"There was one family that I well remember; they were fairly well fixed financially but were often short of ready cash. They lived only a few doors away from the store and often when goods from down town were sent C.O.D. they would send the delivery man over to the store. I paid the bills and with the monthly account that I sent in I included the sums which I had paid out as the family banker.

"I know some of you may think that I was too attentive, but they were one of my best customers. When at times they overlooked this service to complain about some imagined grievance, I reminded them of what I had done and of the good relations that were existing and often little difficulties were thus smoothed over."

Helped to Put Up Stove Pipes.

"That's something like a case I had," laughed another member. "One of my customers was so dependent upon me or had grown so accustomed to asking for advice and assistance that she even asked me to send over my driver to her house to help her put up stove pipes. Now that's a fact. But, I too, believe that it is this service and rather strange relationship that keeps trade, for grocers like some of us, from going down town. It is not to be supposed that we can do these things continually but what I maintain is that there is a certain place for sentiment in the business of the small grocer in a residential district and that it really cements the business."

Wanted Loan Without Security.

Another grocer had still a different experience.

"I lost a customer not long ago by doing a good turn for the family. The husband was going to New York and being temporarily short of cash asked me to loan him $50. He said he would receive all he required when he reached his destination and that my loan would be greatly appreciated. I knew they were good for many fifties but I suggested that some kind of receipt be given me. He suggested that it was hardly necessary, but I gently insisted in order to protect myself, as fifty dollars meant more to me than it did to him. Well, it was only the next day that the wife came in and asked for her bill. I was informed that my asking for the receipt had questioned their integrity or probably their false pride. At any rate they did not appreicate my carefulness. I explained to the wife that supposing her husband met with an accident and was killed I would have nothing to show that he had borrowed the money from me. It was to no avail however. Some people are cantankerous, to say the least."

The Inconsistency of Woman.

"What beats me," remarked still another of the grocers, "is the nerve of some women who ask me to let them use my telephone to order, as I afterwards find out, goods that I have in the store, but which may be offered at a bargain price that day down town. I would like to find out the best way to deal with that question. It is too late after they have given the order to remind them of my goods and in addition they nearly all buy the most of their groceries from me. Now and then they snap up a bargain, and it is this that riles me. However, I generally say nothing about it, for I do not want to lose the trade they are giving me."

Lost a Poor-Pay Customer.

"I lost a customer this week and I am beginning to think that I have done a good stroke of business thereby," came from another of the trade. "She owes me a bill of about thirty dollars and has always been a poor pay. I am a little afraid she may not settle up in full. If "What's-His-Name" has as much trouble as I have had, he will soon be sorry he began giving her credit."

"Well, don't you think," interposed one of those who thus far had been unheard from, "that you should tell Blank that this woman is not the best kind of customer and that she owes you thirty dollars?"

Favors a Credit Bureau.

"Why, I don't know him personally," was the reply. "Besides, he is not a member of the association and from what I can find out he refuses to consider the question of joining. I believe in this system of a credit bureau or whatever you call it, but we have none in this town excepting whatever we take upon ourselves to tell one another. What I am going to busy myself about is getting that thirty dollars. Blank can look out for himself."

Far in The Future.

There was silence for a minute and it was evident that conversation was beginning to lag. Someone said: "Things are not what they should be with us grocers and I'm afraid it will be after my time when they are." That concluded the discussion for the time being as everyone realized the truth of the parting statement.

Wholesalers are Curtailing the Terms of Credit

Victoria, B.C., Jan. 5.—Last month nine British Columbia wholesalers decided to curtail the terms of credit to their customers and sent them the following letter:

To the Retail Trade,

Dear Sir,—You are advised that the following arrangement as to TERMS has been agreed to by the firms whose signatures appear below.

Commencing January 1, 1911, all GROCERIES sold shall be due and payable in thirty (30) days from the 1st of the following month, being subject to a discount of one per cent. (1 per cent.) if paid for on or before the tenth (10th) day of the month following that in which they are sold; and if not so settled for, shall be drawn for at thirty days from the 1st day of the month following date of sale, excepting SUGAR and PRODUCE, which shall be sold at thirty days net, and shall be drawn for at fifteen days from the 1st of each month.

Interest at the rate of 8 per cent. shall be charged on all overdue accounts.

Believing that the above arrangement will be advantageous to all parties concerned, we are, etc.

The grocers claim that some wholesalers sell to the railway corporation and have asked the question as to whether this will be placed on the same terms as they.

The dairy and cold storage commissioner of the Dominion agricultural department reports on the experimental shipment of peaches made to Great Britain last autumn that, averaging the shipments to the different markets, the peaches sold in Great Britain for $1.04 per case of 20 to 23 peaches.

The costs to be deducted were inland and ocean freight from St. Catharines, Ontario, 13.6 cents per case, and selling charges in Great Britain, including commission, 9.7 cents per case, leaving a net price of 80.7 cents per case f.o.b. St. Catharines. On these shipments this figured out 13 cents per pound, or about 40 cents per dozen to the shipper.

Grocery Section of Big Department Store

An Old Country Firm Building in Calgary—Almost Half the Basement Devoted to Groceries and Crockery — Separate Shelves for Tea and Coffee—Show Cases and Display Tables For Crockery.

Calgary, Alta., Jan. 5.—The large department store of Pryce-Jones (Canada) Ltd. is now nearing completion. This is an Old Country firm opening out in the west, the entire store being about 200 x 136 feet in dimensions.

The illustration shown herewith is that of the grocery and crockery section, and represents the basement of one half of the store. The half shown is about 100 x 68 feet, interior dimensions, and the grocery department without the stock room, 100 x 50 feet. It will be observed that the plan has been made with a view to supplying conveniences and quick services. The stock room is roomy and handy; the ice for the refrigerator is all handled from the stock room; counters and show cases are plentiful, and mirrors are placed where they will be conspicuous and useful for the women.

Plenty of Room.

It will also be observed that the space for the grocery order department is large, although it may not seem so from the drawing, thus allowing an abundance of room. There is, too, a special shelf for tea and coffee and a special counter for provisions just in front of the refrigerator.

On the right will be seen the large space for offices, and next to it the elevator and stairway around it.

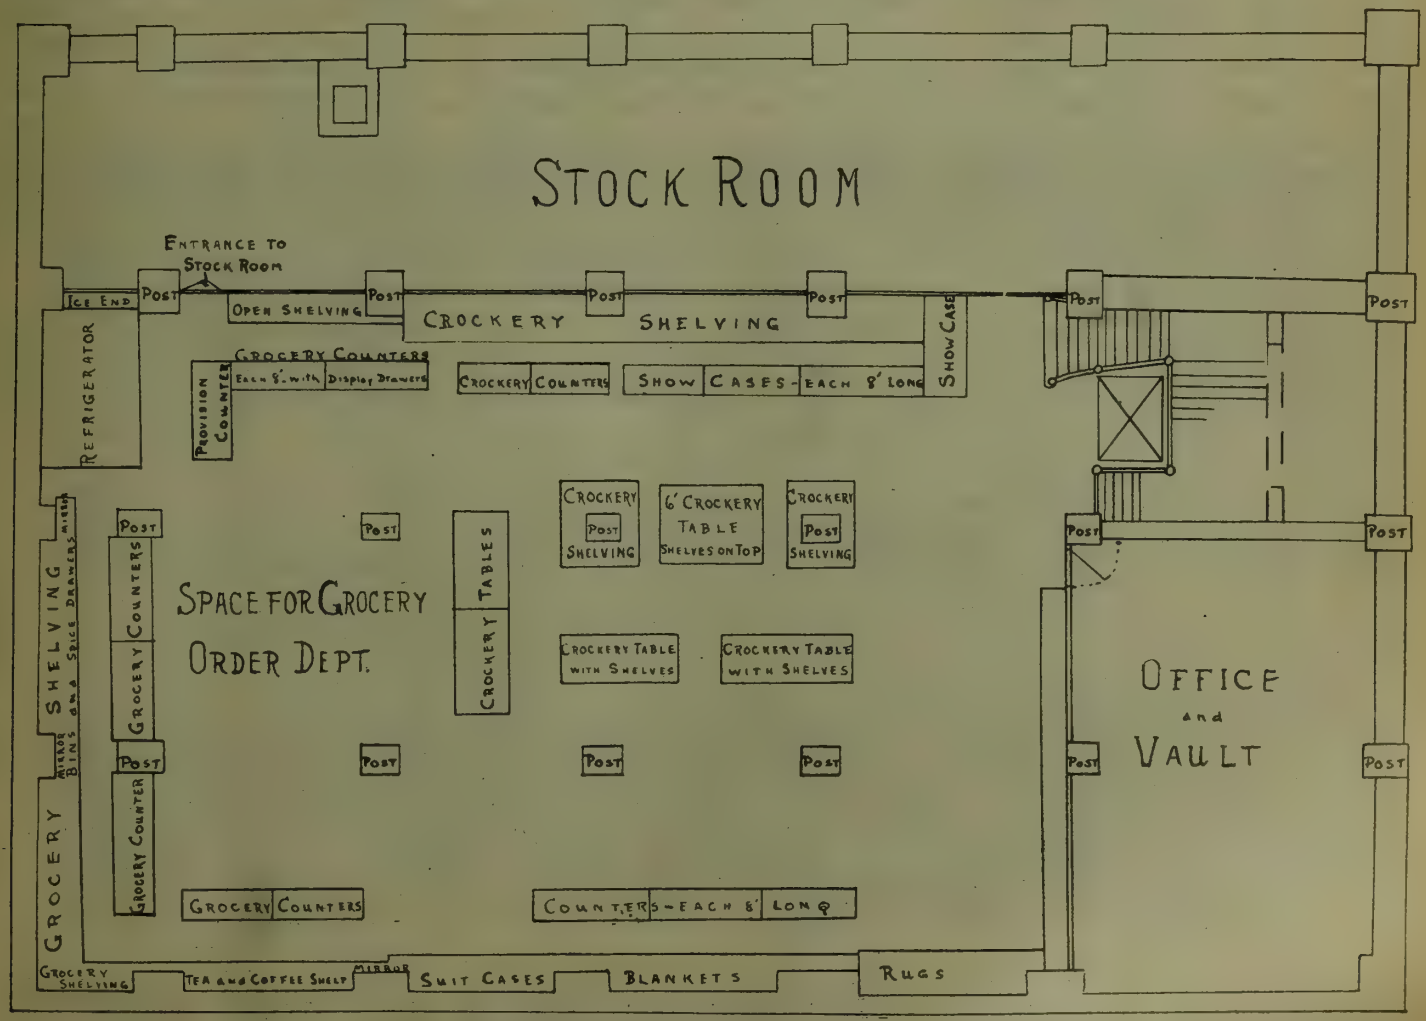
Some of the pillars are utilized by placing shelving around them for crocekry display purposes, and there are also crockery tables with shelves for the same purpose.

RAISE LICENSE ON PEDDLERS.

County Council of Dufferin Supports The Retail Merchants' Contention.

The Dufferin (Ont.) County Council have raised the license fee on peddlers in that county. The yearly fee has been raised to $300 for a team, $200 for a one horse rig, $50 for a push cart and $30 for a pack or basket. The new by-law was only passed after a very spirited discussion, a tea merchant who does an extensive trade in that county having had a number of friends in the council who raised objections to its passage. The members of the council, believing that the merchants of Dufferin could supply all demands in both tea and other commodities, passed the new law.

For each infraction of the law, a fine of not less than $30 and not more than $300 may be imposed for each offence. One-half of every fine imposed shall be paid to the party laying the information.



TRADE NOTES.

Mrs. M. E. McDavitt, grocer, New Toronto, has assigned.

M. Harrison, proprietor of the Royal Oak grocery, Victoria, B.C. has sold his business.

R. A. McEwen, of Aylesburg, has purchased the general store of Mr. Ingham at Nokomis, Sask.

The Farmers' Co-operative store, is the name of an organization of farmers who will open a co-operative store in the township of Rawdon, Hastings County, Ontario. The incorporators are:—E. E. Hale, broker; C. N. Reid, carpenter; C. H. Reid, baker; P. J. Scrimshaw, farmer; Lillian Maude Reid, music teacher, and J. P. Hale, merchant. The share capital is $10,000 and the head office of the company is located in Springbrook.

SHORT TALKS TO CLERKS

By An Ex-Clerk

Courtesy, they say, costs nothing, but it is a great asset; and when I say it is a great asset that is awfully true.

You might be thinking in your minds, listening to me, "Well, perhaps some of this stuff he is telling us is true—perhaps all of it is—but I don't think he knows it all." And right here I will grant you that I will never know it all, and I don't mind saying that neither will you!

But just let's stop and think a minute! Let's get down to cold facts. How smart are you? How clever? I will tell you how smart you are. Do you get $10 a week? Then you are just $10 a week smart. You are not worth $11 or you would be getting it. And don't ever forget this point.

How smart am I? Well, I am just exactly as smart as the company pay me, and not a cent smarter. We have to stare in the face sometimes our own weaknesses.

Courtesy means an awful lot in the retail store. Mrs. Blank comes in, she may have a headache, she may feel tired, she may have been out to an afternoon tea, but that is none of our business. She says: "I want a pound of coffee." You know, Mr. Clerk will reach to the shelf, get the coffee, hand it to her; "35c. Thanks!" That is not courtesy! Courtesy means taking your customer in charge from the moment she enters the store, saying to her. "Good afternoon, Mrs. Blank," with a smile, with a bow, the right way to do it, making some pleasant remark.

Don't forget another point; you don't know what is in her mind, and she doesn't know what is in yours, nor does she care. If you are discourteous, abrupt, or short in your talk or remarks, she will remember it. If you are courteous she may not—because she expects it; she looks for it; she is spending her money in your store, and there are lots of other stores to which she can go.

Lost at the Start.

I recall to my mind a case that was brought to my notice not long ago, of a woman I know who had recently moved into a certain neighborhood. She walked into a grocery store near her new home; the clerk paid little or no attention to this customer; he was not just in the mood to put himself out or go out of his way. He walked up to her and said: "Well?" She stated her needs, bought her parcel, walked out. She told me that evening that she would never go into that store again.

This is where lack of courteous treatment cost that house an account worth $40 a month. Think of it! $40 a month, $480 a year! On a basis of 20 per cent. profit, $96 pure profit per year driven away from the store through lack of courtesy!

If you lost only 10 customers a year through this thoughtless channel, that would be $960 — nearly $1,000 every year. And, believe me, there are more than ten customers per year lost this way in many stores.

Now make your comparison! In place of saying to the customer, "How do you do, madam. What can I do for you?" and saying it with a smile on your face. She makes her request. Then say, "I can send these for you. I can deliver them to your house very shortly in place of troubling you to carry them." How differently it would sound to her! And when she gets what she asks for, thank her for her trade. Say, "Thank you very much. If the goods are not satisfactory, please advise us, as it is our endeavor to please all our customers," or something along that line. That is the difference between losing a new customer and retaining one—all the difference in the world, at no expense except a little thoughtfulness.

Now, don't forget the telephone! Many a customer has been driven away by a short, discourteous talk over the telephone, as if you wanted to hang up the receiver the minute you took it down. Remember you many be busy, but she is not. You are in a hurry, but she is not, and she is not supposed to consider your hurry at all. Why? Because you are doing the catering, not the customer; because she is going to leave her money with you. She would appreciate it very much if you would help her in ordering her goods for that day; and as a great deal of trade is done over the phone, this is a very important thing to remember.

Make a Study of Human Nature.

As a rule, every clerk knows to a certain extent the disposition of the customer to whom he is talking over the phone, and should act accordingly. Surely you can study human nature to some extent; study dispositions, and always be courteous. Have an inventive mind, be initiative! Because you are doing—what? You are laying the foundation for your whole future. Don't you think your employer does not notice these things? He does!

And then look at the effect one discourteous clerk may have on other clerks. It is contagious. All bad things are contagious, because they are easy to take on. It is like a drop of sour milk in a can of sweet milk; it ruins the whole can.

And don't overlook another point: The same customer who walked out dissatisfied is contagious to her friends and relatives, and it all hurts, and will always cost the house loss of customers, which means loss of trade.

A clerk to be always courteous wants to feel courteous, and to feel that way he wants the proper amount of rest; he wants to take proper care of his health. He should have at least eight hours' sleep. No clerk can feel the part, and look the part, and stay out late night after night. He is robbing himself of the chance of advancement, and robbing his system of the rest it requires at the end of a day's work. Give your system lots of rest, and you will have a clear eye and a pleasing appearance. Further, you will feel more like taking care of your personal appearance.

Ruined His Chances.

I know of a case where a man from a wholesale house called on a retail store with the intention of looking for a bright assistant in his business. He walked in the store. One of the clerks —and not a junior at that—stepped up to him, and looking at him said: "Well?" The man's reception kind of startled him, and for the want of something else to say, he inquired if the proprietor was in, and the reply was "Naw!"

Well, this fellow didn't have a look-in for that job. Wholesale houses don't want that kind of people. But I can tell you one thing you can remember. I happen to know of the young man who did get the job, and the last I heard he had risen to the position of manager of one of the departments.

Why, you hear every day public complaints of discourteous conductors on street cars, conductors on railway trains, which creates a feeling of animosity against the firm or corporation. And the same thing goes on in many retail stores, even if it be on a smaller scale.

Clerks Are Too Abrupt.

I wish you men could realize the difficulty merchants have, as they outline it to me, in securing the proper kind of employes to take care of their business. As a merchant stated not long ago, when I was outlining to him the work we were endeavoring to do with retail clerks. He said, "Never was there a better cause. It is not like it used to be in the old days. Many of the clerks we get nowadays are too abrupt—in fact, are prone to be 'fresh.' They think the slangy, up-to-date method (as they call it) that makes them laugh in the poolrooms, sounds the same to others as it does to them. It doesn't! It grates on one's ears; it drives away trade."

Your business is to be courteous at all times, and not only keep trade, but bring it to the store.

And as a last reminder: It is not always what you say, boys. It is how you say it.

John D. Gahan has opened up a grocery store at Monckland.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Halifax Dealer Gives Reasons Why He Quotes Priecs When Advertising—Losing Money Through Leakage in Coal Oil Tank — A New Store Containing Many Modern Ideas.

Believes in Naming Prices.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 5.—"I always place prices in my advertisements," states a local merchant. "Customers must know the prices before they buy and they might as well know them before they enter the store as after. A customer is more likely to be attracted, knowing where the article may be had and the exact price that must be paid for it.

"Some merchants seem to be afraid to expose their prices to their competitors, but I am not, for I believe the price advertisements are the kind that attract the customer if the prices are reasonable. If prices are so high that you do not want to compare them with your competitors there must certainly be something wrong and it is the merchant's duty to find the explanation of the high price."

Money Lost in Coal Oil Leaking.

Brandon, Man., Jan. 5.—A local grocer expressed the view that a great deal of the profit in many grocery stores is greatly reduced by inattention to the smaller details. He spoke especially of one article which he has been carefully keeping track of lately, namely, coal oil, and which he found was giving him little profit on account of clerks allowing the top of the coal oil tank to remain open and allowing a great deal of the oil to evaporate. He spoke of other matters such as taps not tightly closed, breaking of package and bottled goods and several other things which in themselves may not amount to a great deal, but which when combined make the profits smaller.

The large leaks in business immediately attract attention but the smaller ones may go on for a long time before they are detected and remedied.

Getting Rid of "Dying" Stock.

Collingwood, Ont., Jan. 5.—Prentice & Sproule, grocers of this town, make it a point to take stock once a year. In doing this they omit anything they consider to be dead stock, which does not, however, amount to a great deal since they strive to keep everything of this nature cleared away. If they find any line sticking that is all right they devise some plan to bring it to the front and push the sale of it even if the price has to be reduced.

New Store With Modern Features.

Norwood, Ont., Jan. 5.—The interior of the new fireproof grocery establishment of J. L. Squire which was under construction for some time has been completed. It is 115 feet by 28 feet in dimensions.

The front entrance is rather of an imposing character. The large plate glass windows with their reflecting prisms and mirrors together with the white tile flooring afford excellent advantages for the displaying of goods. The interior of the store is finished with metallic ceiling, hardwood floors and varnished woodwork. A special department has been provided for the meats and dairy produce, its counters and surrounding walls being covered with white marble and tile. A rest room and demonstration department have also been provided for. The most modern appliances have been installed, including a large refrigerator, meat slicers, computing scales and cash register. The hot water system is used for heating, the radiators are fitted under an extension in the counters. There is also a neatly constructed office with vault adjoining. The cellar and store house are of cement and are conveniently arranged for the stocking of goods.

Mr. Squire's former establishment was burned during a big fire which swept a block on the west side of the main street last May.

The above window was one of those dressed by E. J. Kirk, of Kirk Bros., Bracebridge, Ont., who have had some very handsome displays in the past. It represents a large basket laden with fruits and trimmed with holly and Christmas stockings. The handle of the basket is bowed with a red material to represent ribbon. The bottom of the window shows an abundant display of seasonable goods neatly arranged. This suggestion might come in handy next December, so that it ought to be given a place on each dealer's window dressing file.

Pathfinders of Commerce at a Banquet

Friendships Formed at Alton, Erin and Oakville Renewed Once Again—Constitution Drawn Up—Some Splendid Post-Prandial Speeches on Loyalty, Labor, Reciprocity and Other Great Problems—Wit and Wisdom Abound.

Staff Correspondence.

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Wherever two or three drummers are gathered together there will ye find fun also. On the last night of the old year but one, the Drummers' Snack Club assembled its worthy members at the Walker House, and at a profitable and pleasing entertainment and banquet, easily upheld the standard of all its past social achievements. It can be truly said that there was fun and profit; for amongst the merry group of knights of the grip there were displayed the humor, the wit and the calculative mind so common to these—well let us say "pathfinders" of modern commercialism, to steal the happy expression of one of their number.

Everything from reciprocity, and development of natural resources down to the more frivolous remarks about the defence of the boarding house and its association to patriotism, was expatiated upon by the group of cross-country trade runners and optimists.

Then there were songs and storiettes from some of Toronto's most talented male artists, whose musical abilities have been vocally developed and who also must have taken a turn or two on the vaudeville stage.

Throw Precedent to the Winds.

Prior to the banquet and subsequent performance, a meeting of the club was held in an upper room, where the chief business transacted was the formation of a constitution for the body which has hitherto been governed by precedent only. During this meeting, the sad news arrived of the death of C. C. Weese, of Lindsay, a member of the club always conspicuous at the annual summer outings and a warm friend of everyone. A wreath was sent as an expression of the kind regards felt towards his memory.

President John Wildfong was master of ceremonies—that meant some arduous duties, but these nevertheless were expeditiously performed. During the course of the banquet itself, little happened to be recorded here, for obvious reasons.

Was Out Rather Late.

Aside from an occasional trip to answer a telephone call on the part of Walter Madill, alleged to be from his wife who was expecting him home,—for it was after seven o'clock—and a few score of stories picked up by Sol Walters on his travels and related by him, nothing of any account occurred.

The customary honor having been done to the King, Michael Malone, one of the main orators of the club proposed the toast to "Canada" in his usual facile manner. He spoke of the vastness of Canada from ocean to ocean at the same time indicating by gestures that he was discoursing on or giving an object lesson about the art of swimming. Next he painted a beautiful mind picture of the coming of Canada's pioneer band, of how they beat back the forests—evidences of which are yet to be seen from the stumps—and with iron wills and muscles cultivated the virgin soil.

"Are we going to be worthy of our predecessors?" he inquired amid tumultuous applause.

Then came Jack Charles to respond. His sunny face was compared by several to that of the happy-looking pasteboard individual in the refreshment stands used to advertise coca-cola. He had only the time he intimated to touch upon the fringes of all he knew about Canada. The subject was too big to consider fully in the space of a few minutes and these were cut cruelly short by a motion of Sol Walters which in effect meant that the hot-air be excluded. It was John W. Charles who associated the term "pathfinders" with commercial travelers and as an illustration he told of a certain brand of soap having been planted at Khartoum, Africa, just after the battle. (Little doubt that it was needed, perhaps more than anything else). The speaker was opposed to militarism, reciprocity with the United States, but in favor of it with Britain. Then after an oratorial triumph about Canada as the last great "melting-pot" of the world; about broad fields and freshly turned soil, etc., he sought a more solid foundation.

Jack Charles as a "Pathfinder." The Gun is for Providing Venison and Turkey as he is Opposed to Militarism.

A Father Proud of His Sons.

George Smye, Hamilton, stood sponsor for the toast to our "Manufacturing and Commercial Interests," and William Algie, Alton, Ont., the father of the Snack Club, replied. His address would have done justice to a royal occasion without any exaggeration. He modestly compared his ability to talk about the subject, to the small boy who tried to lift the prize pumpkin at the fall fair and found it was too much for him. He appreciated the reception accorded to him and he added, "I appreciate it all the more because I know that every —— one of you mean it."

The knowledge of having to reply to this toast had been a little surprise to him when he came into Toronto. So he had gone off to a corner by himself and "staked out a few ideas; a few pegs on the claim as it were." He told a story about the Sunday school boy who, when the long-winded superintendent after an hour's address asked, "What now shall I talk about?" answered, "about five minutes," and hoped history would not repeat itself.

In a philosophic mood he referred to the satisfaction he had had in life. When he comes face to face with the grim reaper, he will say to him: "Your welcome to the rind of the lemon, I've got all the juice." He didn't know or care much about the future, but he has cinched the past.

"Commerce, agriculture, mining, lumbering, etc., all make an independent country; the prosperity of the one reflects the prosperity of all. Some say we have to live on one another, but if that is so, then cannibalism is the ideal state of life."

Homes Make Patriots.

"Few of us would care to shoulder our rifles in defence of a boarding house," remarked Mr. Algie, after saying that homes made patriots.

He considered that the great product of any country is its people. "One time there was a Highland Scotchman of powerful physique, who had raised a family of seven strong and sturdy sons. An eighth arrived, but it was of a puny type and not likely to produce any great physical strength in its life on earth. However, at the age of 18 months it died. The big Scot was being tendered the sympathy of a neighbor and while he felt keenly the loss of his child he asked with an eye looking into the future: 'After all, would he have made a people?' And that is the great question that should concern each of us to-day," added Mr. Algie.

Glengarry was the scene of another of his stories. Down in Glengarry many of the farms are rather rocky. One day a Yankee was driving along the road close by where a husky Scot was ploughing. The former stopped his horse and after looking over the stony farm, inquired in a none too respectful tone, what was raised here.

The Scot said nothing, but stooped down and, lifting a 500 lb. stone and placing it on top of a five foot fence, replied, "Men, be God."

Mr. Algie was with the manufacturers who recently treked across the continent to see the great west. He told of the vastness of that country which such a short time ago was known as the wild and woolly west. "But there ain't no wild and woolly west now," he replied, "its Canada from coast to coast."

After ventilating his opinion on reciprocity, local option and labor he came back to the good fellowship existing in the Drummers' Snack and the importance of drinking life to the lees, for, said he:

Every sob and every sigh
Is a nail in one's coffin, no doubt;
Every grin so hearty
Always drags one out.

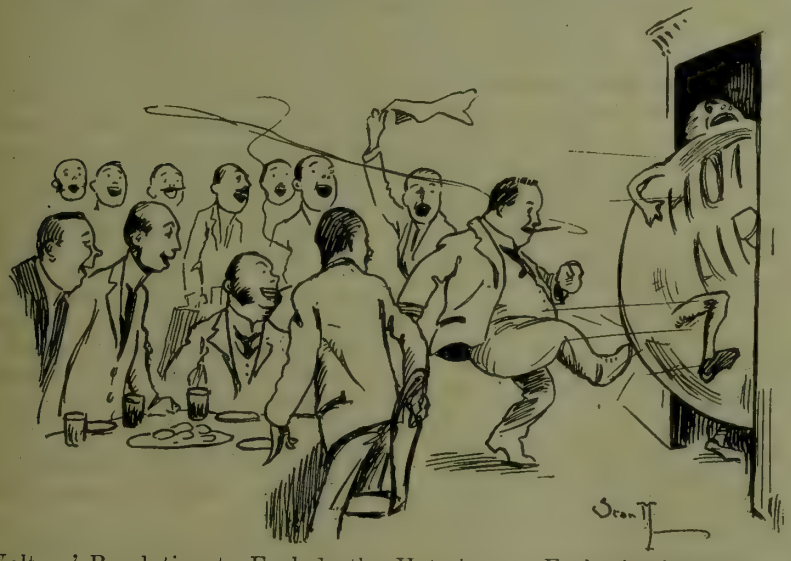
Prowess of the Colonel.

Walter Madill criticized the programme promoters for not allowing him six months to prepare a speech about "Our Club." Col. Stoneman responded by cutting the introduction short in order to give a medley recitation of a unique character. It included perfectly blending sections from, "On Linden when the sun was low;" "Charge of the Light Brigade," "Hamlet," "I'm to be Queen o' the May"; "Any rags any bones"; "Lives there a man with soul so dead," etc.

Was Given Some Money.

Bay Hill, Hamilton, presented Robt. Algie, secretary of the club and a life long member, with an envelope containing $50. Mr. Algie replied feelingly and after this sad occurrence (for presentations are always of a melancholy character), Chas. Silver proposed "Our Guests." Harry Bennett responded with two songs; Jno. Gibson, past president of the C.T.A., with a speech and Supt. Ivens, of the C. T., M. B. S., with an imitation of a common house fly.

Pop Somerville proposed the health of "The Press" and Wm. Meen and C. A. E. Colwell handled "The Ladies."



During the evening a musical programme of a high order was given by Wilfrid Morrison, the boy soprano; Will J. White, Donald McGregor, and Harvey Lloyd.

E. Jules Brazil was accompanist instead of Ernest Bowles, the official pianist, who recently sustained an injury of a broken arm. Mr. Brazil concluded the programme with a clever musical recitation in which he compared Life to a Game of Cards. The merry company then disbanded to meet again at Oakville in July, 1911.

TRAVELERS' ANNUAL MEETING.

Condition of Hotels and Old Age Annuity Discussed.

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Improved hotel accommodation for the traveling public was one of the principal questions considered at the 38th annual meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association, held in Toronto last week. It was introduced by a motion by W. H. Scott and Walter Moore, "that the members of the Commercial Travelers' Association instruct our Board for 1911 to press upon the Ontario Government (1) the necessity that exists, in the interests of the traveling public for the inspection and regulation of all hotels in municipalities adopting local option by-laws; (2) the government's responsibility to the traveling public in permitting municipalities to pass local option by-laws without at the same time making provision for hotels to be under public inspection and control: (3) the duty of the government to assume control of all hotels, catering to supply the public with meals and board, or to enact that all municipalities passing local option by-laws shall assume the responsibility and control of all houses for the accommodation of the public."

Sol. Walters' Resolution to Exclude the Hot-air was Enthusiastically Received.

The question of annuities for old members was also given a great deal of consideration, and will be given further consideration by the Board of Directors during 1911.

The officers for 1911 are:

President—Robert Gemmell; 1st Vice-Pres.—S. M. Sterling; 2nd Vice-Pres.—Jas. G. Cane (acclamation); Treas — E. Fielding; Board of Directors for Toronto—F. J. Zammers, Geo. W. Moore, John Everett, W. H. Scott, C. J. Tuthill, Alex. Cook, J. W. Charles, D. H. MacKay, Jos. Pease.

Hamilton Board—Arthur F. Hatch, E. O. Zimmerman, Chas. C. Smye, H. J. Wright, Geo. M. McGregor.

Berlin Board—W. J. Moody, F. G. Doering.

Montreal Board—Wm. Williamson.

Jas. Sargant is permanent secretary.

MERCHANT OR MONEY LENDER.

By A. H. Harvey.

When a manufacturer sells a merchant or another manufacturer a bill of goods on 60 days' time he is virtually loaning his customer the price of those goods for that time. The customer takes the merchandise loan for granted, and is very apt to seek, by delays and excuses, to extend the original 60 days without interest a much longer time. In discussing this question recently an exchange pointed out that if the buyer were to go to his bank and borrow the money necessary to pay for the goods on the same 60 days' time he would not only have to pay the legal rate of interest but a premium besides, and if he did not meet the obligation on its maturity would have to satisfy the bank that the account was good and collectible, and of course pay interest for the extended time.

Does the salesman realize when he is closing a sale with a customer that he is virtually lending that customer a sum of money equal to the value of the goods for the period that shall elapse before payment is made? And does the buyer realize that in asking for credit, be it for only ten days, he is asking the seller the favor of a cash loan? Unfortunately the salesman is rarely as careful to secure himself on his merchandise loan as the bank would be in making a money loan. And unfortunately the buyer, from his superior height, sometimes fails to realize that when he "favors" the seller with an order he is asking a favor in return.

A realization of this actual relationship between buyer and seller would lead to greater self respect and firmness on the part of the seller, and, what is more important, fewer losses; while there is many a buyer whose attitude toward the seller would be vastly improved by a recognition of this homely truth, and who would steer his course clear of many a dangerous financial rock thereby. The seller is a partner with the buyer to the extent of his sale during the period elapsing until payment is made, and as such has a right to know the financial condition of the creditor. This sense of partnership is rarely recognized by either party to the sale.

A company recently organized and incorporated in California proposes to popularize raisins by a slot machine which is to be put up not only in all places where throngs gather in that country, but in similar spots abroad. The company owns the slot machine device for selling raisins in 5-cent packages automatically.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

RESOLVED!

If there are any New Year resolutions made they should be strictly adhered to. No doubt resolutions made at Easter, in July or Thanksgiving and made with a good intent, are just as good as those at the beginning of the year if they are kept—aye, that's the rub, "if they are kept."

Sticking to a resolution denotes willpower, and the more it is developed the better is the possessor fitted to carry out his good intentions from time to time. Good resolutions should therefore be made frequently.

No one can make any mistake in resolving to operate a cleaner store during 1911 than in 1910. These are the days of microbes and bacteria; doctors say that animals, places and articles are full of them, and animals, places and articles that we never suspected could be so inconsiderate.

The people are being told that cats are among the most dangerous carriers of disease germs; that flies are poisonous; that decayed matter is positively destructive to our constitutions and that fresh air and wholesome food is absolutely necessary to longevity. The people believe all this, whether or not it is true, and are watchful. Therefore it behooves every dealer to look to the cleanliness of his store during the years to come.

Make the resolution now that henceforth cats will be placed on the "blacklist" so far as your store is concerned and that everything tending to give an unclean effect to the store will be eliminated. Water is cheap and so are cleansing powders and brushes—particularly at wholesale prices—and therefore it is a comparatively easy matter to eliminate the dirt. If you make this resolution be resolute in carrying it to a successful finish.

PERSONAL ELEMENT IN BUSINESS

"How is your wife's rheumatism, Mr. Jones?" or "Is your son making good progress at college, Mrs. Smith?" Such is the variety of question which greets customers of a certain Edmonton merchant when they call. He keeps a card index on which are noted something personal regarding everybody on his books.

This same personal element applied in one of its many phases, will do much for any business.

One can never tell when such an interest displayed in someone will take hold and bear rich returns in patronage and good-will.

BUSINESS MEN CHOSEN.

The municipal elections in Ontario this year demonstrated that the electors of municipalities are gradually becoming aware of the fact that business men are the best of men to conduct civic affairs and serve the interests of the people.

Among the many business men elected on Monday, the grocery trade can claim a good share.

The Mayor of Bracebridge, is Peter Hutchinson, a grocer; Thos Haller, general merchant, is the civic leader in Bothwell; Ald. Forth, grocer, was re-elected to the Hamilton council; A. Coulbeck, grocer, is a school trustee in Brantford; in Guelph, G. J. Thorp, produce merchant was elected mayor, and W. D. Bothwell, Barrie, is on the council.

These are but a few of the many grocers and general merchants elected, but it is safe to say that the majority of the civic representatives in Ontario are men engaged in business and many in the retail business. This is getting away from the old idea that only professional men with college training could direct municipal affairs. Apparently it's the man with the business head who is now given the preference.

ADVERTISE IN QUIET TIMES.

Always during the holiday trade, retail dealers give more attention to newspaper advertising than at other times. There are those who believe that they have secured everything there is to get by running an advertisement once or twice prior to Christmas. They do not hesitate to declare that even then they got good results; they are grateful to the publisher of the newspaper for this but they think the usefulness of printer's ink has passed until another holiday rolls around.

"No use advertising in January," is a frequent remark; "business is too quiet then."

This is quite a mistake; the proper time to advertise is the time when business is slack so that the public will purchase more than they did the corresponding month of the previous year. That denotes progress and this never comes to a man who makes no efforts. That business should be increased only at holiday times is an idea unworthy of the poorest merchant. If advertising is a recognized form of increasing business, then the advertising should be a permanent plank in the platform and not periodical.

DUTIES OF THE CLERK.

The clerk owes it to his employer and to himself to endeavor by every means in his power to improve his knowledge of the trade in which he is engaged. It is not sufficient to know the stock in the store. The clerk who is going to make a success of his work is the one who studies the business from every standpoint, who is anxious to assimilate new ideas, who considers methods of salesmanship and endeavors to find ways of reading and satisfying his customers. He should not make it his sole ambition to sell goods, but should strive to satisfy the customers as well so that the trade of that particular person will be placed with the same store in future. To be of real value to his employer, a clerk must know something of the art of effective display, so that the store will be kept bright and pleasing to customers. In fact, there is no branch of the trade that the salesman should not keep in touch with, in his efforts to improve his own insight into profitable and progressive business methods.

This can be done by observation and by reading. "When I was a clerk my employer kept telling me that I should never fail to read the trade papers carefully and digest mentally everything that they said," remarked a Berlin merchant the other day. "I was brought up on The Canadian Grocer, so to speak, and to what I saw there, I attribute a great deal of the success that has come to me since I started out in business for myself. I still watch it closely."

Undoubtedly a great deal of useful information can be obtained by paying close attention to the ideas of other men as reflected in the trade journal. The clerk who is anxious to make something of himself should not neglect this ready source of information relating to all branches of the business in which he has engaged.

A LOOK INTO TRADE CONDITIONS IN 1911

Easier Prices for Hog Products, Butter and Cheese are Anticipated---Sugar Market Not Likely to be High for a Time at Least---World's Flour and Wheat Markets Expected to be Above Average of 1910---Tea Will be Higher---A Good Year Predicted

Some wholesalers' and manufacturers' representatives are inclined to think that a number of food stuff prices have been unnaturally inflated during the past year. This applies, they say, more to the United States than to Canada and they believe that during 1911 there will be a decline of many prices in the country to the south.

The markets there have certainly been high with scarcely an exception. This was caused principally by the shortage in the production of many goods which had the effect of increasing the cost of these goods to the wholesaler and retailer and therefore the cost of living. Sympathising with this state of affairs, and partly due to increased demand, prices of other goods have gone up.

There are those who claim, for instance, that coffee has been advancing too rapidly for they believe there is plenty of it in South America, but that there are market manipulators on the scene. No direct evidence of this, however, has yet been produced. Tea is likely to be higher than it has been for some time, all of which has been previously explained in these columns.

During the near future there is also every indication of a lower market in sugar. The visible supply of raws indicates an increase of more than 382.000 tons above that of last year.

We may expect too, that during 1911 the average price of hogs and hog products will be lower than in 1910. This will be due to a larger production following the high prices of the past year, and so far as Canada is concerned will be a natural condition. But even in 1911 there is no reason to anticipate any over-production. Packers are of the opinion that supplies will be short but that they will not be as short as during the past year and demand should be good. The shortage of hogs during the past two or three years has been so great that it will take some time before supply can overtake demand sufficiently to bring back prices to those ruling ten years ago.

Considering the world's butter and cheese markets, there are those of the opinion that supply will be in excess of the demand this year. One reason given is that Australia has now entirely recovered from the effects of the 1909 drought and that she will have a considerable quantity of butter to export this year. New Zealand will likely be able to export more. The United States and Canada are shipping less and less butter to Great Britain every year but Denmark, Germany, Sweden and Russia are expected to exceed last year's figures.

With regard to cheese there is no likelihood of much cheaper prices although it is the opinion of Old Country produce men that the consumptive demand is apparently decreasing. Should the production increase to any great extent, it is quite probable that we shall see slightly reduced prices.

So far as wheat and flour are concerned, British importers who have studied the situation think that the world's prices will rule higher than in 1910. This is based upon the rapid increase in population in wheat-consuming countries and the growing demand per capita. Of course the weather has to be always reckoned with as well as the relative production of competing foodstuffs, such as rye, potatoes, maize, rice, etc.

But on the whole, there are evidences of easier markets on many lines during 1911; nevertheless since so many things may intervene before the next harvests have been reaped we may perchance be met with different results. Every member of the trade should now begin to study markets and follow them closely throughout the year. This may be the means of staving off losses which always follow the acts of the business man who rushes blindly into his purchasing without reflecting upon the actual conditions of things.

The past year was a most prosperous one. The laboring classes were well supplied with work and money and 1911 is entered with bright prospects. The best merchants the country over report a good year and a grand finish during the holiday time. Collections have been good and money free; and with bountiful harvests—upon which all our porsperity largely depends—and progressive methods, we can only look forward to the best commercial year in Canadian history.

STOCK-TAKING METHODS.

Stock-taking time is now at hand and merchants would do well to give the matter close consideration. The taking of stock is an operation which must be carried out thoroughly if the merchant desires to find exactly where he stands financially at the end of the year. Only by a careful listing of the stock is it possible to accurately gauge the amount of business done, the relative activity of different lines and the possibilities of each department. Stock-taking is the barometer of business; it indicates when all is plain sailing and gives warning when storms are ahead.

Some merchants do things on a haphazard scale. The natural result is that they do not get much good out of it. They are not able at the end to tell just what business was done during the year, nor are they thoroughly acquainted with the stock that is left in the store. Further, the lack of system in stock-taking entails some loss of trade. It is only by adherence to a fixed plan, which makes allowance for attention to customers during the day, that trade is conducted throughout without any undue hindrances.

KEPT TRADE AT HOME.

The story is related of how the merchants in a fair-sized village quietly stamped out a great deal of the mail ordering habit among their customers. From day to day they observed large shipments of freight and express coming into the village from the big catalogue houses for distribution among the people whom they were supposed to serve.

Eventually they became alarmed and after a consultation decided to talk the matter over quietly with their respective customers to persuade them that they could give just as good values as the mail order houses.

This had a splendid effect and resulted in a great deal of the business formerly sent out, being kept at home. Personality gained a victory, and if this phase of a dealer's selling power were more developed, it would mean more business.

TO MERCHANTS AND CLERKS.

The Canadian Grocer invites its readers to write this paper about any merchandising topic. Such communications are acceptable at all times, whether they consist of opinions on trade problems or whether questions are asked. Good photographs of good windows dressed by retail merchants or their clerks, and which are their own ideas, are solicited at all times, as well as good photographs of bright, well-arranged store interiors. Photographs should be such that when reproduced, they show up well the details of a window or interior display.

Promoters Defend the Library Contests

Representative of Association Handling Coupons Claims They are Legal and Cites His Authority—He Tells How the Proposition is Operated and Maintains It is a Good Thing for Towns in Which it is Established—Lasts for 5 Months.

In a recent issue of The Grocer an article appeared relating to the Library Voting Contests in various towns and cities in Ontario. These contests are carried on by the National Library Association, with headquarters at Toronto, and Edward Gledhill, one of those interested in the company states that the contest is a legitimate one and that it does not come under the Trading Stamp Act. In justice to the National Library Association and to Mr. Gledhill, herewith are given his reasons for terming the contest a legal one.

"In the Dominion Statutes of 1906, chapter 146 Revised Statutes of Canada the Trading Stamp Act is given as follows:"

Trading Stamps include, besides trading stamps commonly so-called, any form of cash receipt, receipt, coupon, premium ticket or other device, designed or intended to be given to the purchaser of goods by the vendor thereof or his employe or agent, and to represent a discount on the price of such goods or a premium to the purchaser thereof, which is redeemable either,

(1) by any person other than the vendor, or the person from whom he purchased the goods, or

(2) by the vendor or the person from whom he purchased the goods, or the manufacturer of the goods, in cash or goods not his property, or not his exclusive property, or

(3) by the vender elsewhere than in the premises where such goods are purchased; or which does not show upon its face the place of its delivery and the merchantable value thereof, or is not redeemable at any time.

An offer printed or marked by the manufacturer upon any wrapper, box or receptacle, in which goods are sold, of a premium or reward for the return of such wrapper, box or receptacle is not a trading stamp within the meaning of this part.

Received Legal Advice.

"In our contest the coupons do not represent a discount on the price of goods, neither are they a premium to the purchaser thereof. We have secured legal advice on this and no less than 12 magistrates and crown attorneys have told me that we were within the law. Here is a letter from our solicitors in Toronto which shows you that in their opinion our contest is perfectly legal.

"So far as our profits are concerned, we supply a library of from 125 to 175 books—never less than 125—and these are books of standard writers. We also supply sectional bookcases with from 4 to 10 sections—never less than 4—of good quality. These are all purchased from a furniture dealer in each town or city where we are holding a contest. In addition to this we provide the coupons, pay for an advertisement for 5 months in a paper in each centre, and pay our salesmen.

"Already we are working in Welland, St.. Catharines,. Oshawa,. Newmarket, Barrie, Uxbridge, Orillia, Midland, Oakville, North Bay, Guelph, Berlin, Hespeler, Collingwood and St. Marys, and so far we have not had a single merchant who says he has been taken in. Besides this we maintain that this contest brings people into these towns to do their shopping where otherwise they would send to mail order houses. In one place there is a rural school on the list, and the people from the country in that section are buying altogether in their home town so that they can cast their votes for it."

Some merchants complain that the contest is unfair to those who are not given an opportunity to handle coupons. but Mr. Gledhill says that in a business proposition of this kind everybody cannot be considered. He also states that merchants first called upon frequently reject the scheme, and afterwards when they see it working, commence to kick.

Operation of the Contest.

The contest is worked like this: One merchant in each line of trade is selected in each town to handle coupons. From 10 to 25 are admitted, according to the size of the town, and each pays the sum of $25 or $30 for the coupons and the right to handle them. These coupons are marked in favor of some public or charitable institution or organization, such as firemen's association, a particular church, Y.M.C.A., Orangemen, Oddfellows, etc., and are placed in a ballot box, usually in some drug store. The ballots are counted by a committee of the merchants every little while and the results published. One vote given for each 10 cent purchase is the usual rule, but in one or two places 10 votes are given for every 10 cent purchase.

"The Ontario Trading Stamp Act of 1901 which you quoted does not apply in this case," said Mr. Gledhill; "it is overruled by the Dominion law of 1906 which applies to every province."

Do Expenses Increase?

He further contended that if a merchant did $50 extra business on account of the contest he was making that clear as he would have no extra expenses.

This is questionable for when a dealer increases his sales by any system he has to purchase extra goods, and therefore keep heavier stock; his insurance will be higher; his risk greater; his delivery expenses greater; there will be increased wear and tear on store equipment, and probably the purchase of further equipment will be necessary to handle the increased business. More business means increased service in store help; bookkeeping expenses will be greater; there will be more and larger outstanding accounts and the salaries of clerks and assistants usually increase in proportion to the number of customers they have to handle, and the goods they sell. Again, if the store help is not increased to meet new business, the clerks have not the time to sell goods not actually asked for—they will not be able to use their salesmanship ability to dispose of extra goods—and on this salesmanship actually depends the success or otherwise of any merchant.

While extra business means extra profit if handled properly, yet it also means extra expense if there are to be secured any permanent benefits.

Items Done in Brief for Busy Dealers

Advance of Association Work in British Columbia — A New Strawberry Type Discovered—Bread From a Slot Machine—Canned Eggs Seized by Authorities.

Recently F. W. Welsh, president, Jas. Foran director, and R. P. Dinning, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of British Columbia, visited several cities in that province and succeeded in forming branches of that association in Nelson and Cranbrook, and also interesting other places and paving the way for future organization.

A strawberry of a new type, the Patagonia, has been produced. It ripens first and continues to bear the longest. The berries are large, sometimes weighing an ounce and have a handsome pale flesh, with a very small seed.

Nine tons of canned eggs were recently seized in Jersey City by United States Food Inspectors. This is one of the largest seizures yet made in the crusade against rotten liquid eggs.

A new idea in grocery retailing will be tried in Philadelphia, by an organization, primarily of philanthropic intent. One of the promoters explains the project as follows: "Our stores will consist of a small room with a lot of slots in the wall. If a customer wants 10 cents worth of bread, all he has to do, is to drop a dime in the slot and he gets it. You cannot haggle over the price with the slot machine, nor do you lose time by being waited on." It is unlikely, of course, that this will interest anybody but the very poor classes, as the personality of the dealer is an absolute necessity these days.

Opposition to Merchants in the Contest

Collingwood Has Counter Attraction — Druggist There Buys the Votes and Sells Them Again at Half Price — Turns his Store into a Vote Exchange—The Announcement He Placed in Newspaper.

Collingwood, Ont., Jan. 5.—There is a Library Voting Contest on here and there is also some opposition to it. This opposition comes from a druggist, Dr. Connolly, and the nature of it will be seen from the folowing advertisement he has been using in a Collingwood paper, run in double column space:

WE BUY VOTES

At Dr. Connolly's Drug Store
That is, Votes in the Library Voting Contest
We are Paying
25 cents Per 100 Votes

Also Giving Votes

with all your purchases in drugs, stationery, cigars, tobaccos, pipes, post cards, Christmas Novelties and Fancy Goods, Booklets, Chocolates—in fact anything sold at Dr. Connolly's Drug Store.

One Vote Given With Every 5c Purchase.

This is just double the number of votes you get from any other store.

In fact, Dr. Connolly's Drug Store will be a regular Vote Exchange.

We will buy votes, sell votes, or give votes away with your purchases. That is, we buy votes at 25 cents per hundred. we give votes with all purchases or the money if you prefer it—one vote with every 5 cent purchase—then we may have some votes to sell.

The Original Scheme.

"When you think it over, does it not seem to be a very questionable proceeding for any honest business man to be engaged in, as well as being at least very much like a lottery. (Of course, we do not intend to prosecute any one for being participants in a lottery—we might have to prosecute a lot of people.)

"This is the way the scheme was worked. A stranger, who was a good talker, dropped into Collingwood and told some of our business men a little story. (By the way, if you are looking for a gullible man—go to the merchant. He swallows everything and thinks he is advertising.) This stranger went to some of our—merchants (we will call them merchants) and what he told each one was in effect this:—

"You, Mr. Merchant, have a number of stores in opposition to you. These men, your opposition, have built up their businesses by the ordinary straight honest methods of business, such as keeping their stores attractive, keeping the best goods, using their customers well upon all occasions, etc., but now, Mr. Merchant, if you just come into my Library Voting Scheme you will get a lot of your opposition's customers or perhaps all of them, to come and buy your goods, and then if these customers start coming to your store perhaps they will keep on coming."

"The stranger then collected $30 from these merchants (?) and went on his way.

"Just think of it! He collected $30 each from 22 of our business men, or $660 in all. His total expenses are well under $200—the advertising and printing he did costing him less than $100 and the rest of his expenses while here being much less than $100. For his few days' talking this stranger went out of town with approximately $500 of Collingwood money.

"And the indefiniteness of the scheme—the tickets had no exact value. It was just a matter of who got a certain number to win a bookcase. Any number between 10,000 and 500,000 might be the proper number. If these merchants were at all anxious to give the Hospital or any other institution a bookcase, why didn't they put in about $4.25 each and buy one? Then spend about $2 each on advertising and the whole thing would be done without sending all this money out of town. However, is not so indefinite, but is a straight business transaction. We have given these tickets a definite value outside of their value in a lottery way—this value to be as a discount for cash which is the only legal way in which tickets of value can be given out.

"Now, you smart Alecks of merchants, come up to this proposition. The value we have put upon these tickets has to be lived up to by everybody. Furthermore, according to our Canadian law any customer can demand the value of his ticket at any time—he does not have to wait until he gets $5. or $10 or any other amount.

"It would be as well for you merchants to remember also that there is a liability against each one of you for the value of the amount of tickets outstanding with your name on. If you are thinking of selling out your business, this liability against your business should be remembered, or if you are thinking of borrowing money from your bank it should also be remembered.

"If you want Library Voting Tickets, buy at Dr. Connolly's Drug Store. A ticket of 2 votes given with every 10c purchase—twice as much as any other store is giving."

Having A Busy Time.

Dr. Connolly states that during the day after the first advertisement was published, people began to flock into his store to sell him coupons which he gave out again at half the price of the merchants who are in the original contest.

The Formation of a Consumers' Exchange

Something Similar to Co-operative Movement Going on in Montreal—Reasons Given by an Organizer as to Its Necessity —Curtails Long Credits He Says.

Montreal, Jan. 4.—A number of residents of the Montreal Annex recently gathered together and listened to a scheme prepared by a few business men in their district, which guaranteed to considerably reduce the high cost of living, and thereby save them about 15 p.c. on their week's groceries.

They decided to form a co-operative society called the Consumers' Exchange the working plans of which are:

James Maxwell, late of Fraser, Viger & Co., appointed secretary-treasurer, is to look after the warehouse on 31 Laurie Avenue, see that orders are properly filled and do the buying.

The orders are taken every week from members, and a deposit of $5, $7 or $10 in advance made. Goods are purchased at wholesale prices and charged up accordingly plus 5 p.c. for services.

In order to cover working expenses an entrance fee of two dollars is charged each of the members, the number of whom is limited to 150 at present, although it is expected that this membership will be comparatively larger later on.

Some retail grocers have herein cause for resentment, and quite a number expressed themselves as against the Exchange when sounded on the matter, while others put on a contented look and quietly stated, "Oh! they can't do my business any harm."

The Organizers' Philosophy.

One of the chief organizers when interviewed by The Grocer, made the following interesting statements:

"The average wage earner is facing almost constantly increasing prices without a corresponding increase in his income, and he, in his instinct to survive, is endeavoring to rally new forces to his aid. The most obvious step of course is to buy his goods cheaper, and if he thinks that by combining with his neighbor and buying in larger quantities he can make a saving, who is to blame him for making the attempt?

"The question for grocers to ask themselves is, are their methods so loose or are their profits so large, that a sufficient saving can be made by a combination of people to justify them in supporting such a movement? Few grocers ever save enough from their business to give the general public the impression that the profits are too large. But, are they sufficiently watching the leakage end?

"One of the elements of leakage, viz., high rents for desirable corner stores, is to a large extent beyond their control, because the landlord is able to gauge their profits too exactly and seems bent on only leaving them sufficient to live on or so that they can earn more rent for him. Fortunate, therefore, is the man who owns his own store, and can free himself from the incubus of the landlord.

Weakness Lies in Leakage.

"But leakage, through the careless buying of dead stock or perishable goods or the granting of unwise credit is entirely in their own hands, and just here in their weakness lies the Co-operator's strength.

"If the average grocer would sit down and cash up for the last few years, he would find that a considerable portion of the margin that he has charged on his goods over their cost price has gone in this way without any benefit to himself and at the expense of the consumer who wishes to pay his own way.

"We can hardly blame the consumer for not wanting to support both the grocer and the sponger in the community and if he seeks relief in his own way, it is only because we have failed efficiently to serve him.

"We believe that the established grocer who is conducting his business on sound economical lines need have no fear of any co-operative movement. In England, and Europe and even on this continent, where the co-operative movement has become strong, we find private enterprise with its own individual business along side with success.

"The principle of granting credit to a man not laboring under some misfortune, is wrong. Because a man has a good position with a fair salary attached is no sufficient reason why every tradesman in his eagerness for patronage should encourage him to run monthly accounts and thus always live a month ahead of his salary or as very often happens, two or three months ahead.

Afraid of Losing Custom.

"When such a man loses his position or falls ill he has no reserve force, and he expects his tradespeople to whom he has been paying his money to continue to carry him. This they must to a certain extent do, in order to protect what he already owes them, and in order that they may not get the name of deserting their customers in time of trouble.

"When a tradesman sells his goods for cash, he can afford a smaller margin of profit and when his goods leave the shelf he has the money to replace them. A can of tomatoes on the grocer's shelf is worth a considerable amount more than that same can empty in the dust bin behind a customer's house, who may pay for it in a month or six weeks' time, or perhaps not at all. In the meantime if the grocer has it on his own shelf he does not need to get more and the wholesaler will not be pressing him to pay for the can that would otherwise have to replace it.

"Again the large departmental stores are constantly selling different lines of groceries at almost the wholesale price and sometimes even a little below it, yet they only get a small proportion of the business of the community. Why? Largely because the personal element or touch is lacking in the deal. It is commonly said that there is no sentiment in business, yet this same sentiment is the most valuable asset the grocer can have.

"The good will of the customers will always supply the deserving grocer with sufficient trade, but the good-will cannot be secured by encouraging a man's family to buy heedlessly throughout the month, and then sending in an unexpectedly large bill at the end. Such a matter always arouses bitter feelings, and puts the customer in the right feeling to embrace some other device which may hold out a promise of relief.

"The grocer who sells largely for cash; makes his margins small, deals fairly and courteously with his customers, and is willing to extend to his customers credit for actual necessities during times of adversity. He thereby becomes so strongly entrenched in the good-will of the community that he need not fear the competition of a newcomer, either competitive grocer or co-operative store.

Likes to Deal with Individual.

"A co-operative society must give its members at least 10 p.c. advantage in prices over the ordinary grocer in order to attract and keep members, for the sentiment of the average individual is to deal with an individual rather than with a society. And if the ordinary grocer cannot live on that extra 10 p.c. than he should not be in the grocery business. It would be far better for him to convert his store into a co-operative one and get a position of manager, leaving someone else to bear the burden of success."

From these statements it looks as if this member believes that the co-operative movement tends to encourage cash business and to point out to the grocer that it is more advantageous to him to curtail the giving of credit as much as possible.

New Year Thoughts for Dealer and Clerk

Some Practical Suggestions Thrown Out by a Practical Man—Watching Store Expenses and Figuring Profits—Annoying Errors That so Frequently Happen — Difficulties Met With in Teaching Clerks—There Should Be Definite Progress Made Every Day.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

This New Year resolution business properly comes home to the grocer fully as forcibly as to any other man. Let us look into it during the few naturally slow days that tend to follow January 1st; but let our inner survey be thoroughly practical. This little breathing time can be made fruitful of great good to ourselves if we but handle it right.

1st. Do you inventory? If you do not, then you should break your bad habits to this extent, that you get busy to take an account of your standing at once, and diligently. This failure to KNOW exactly where you stand is one of the potent forces of failure generally.

2nd. Do not permit yourself to be lenient with yourself in your self-accounting. Get everything down to "brass tacks" in the process of figuring up. Remember that dried fruit shrinks in weight, so do not do too much "estimating" but weigh carefully. Be conservative to a fault in crediting yourself with supplies on hand. Scale all things preferably to just a little less than you have rather than to one iota more. Errors made through being too conservative will later be revealed in better conditions than you had expected—which is surely preferable to the later discovery that you have things in much poorer shape than you had thought.

Charging Up Expenses.

3rd. Charge into Expense Account 6 per cent. on your capital. If you have not hitherto known what capital you have been employing, compute it from present inventory and charge 6 per cent. thereon. Next year you can add a reasonable surplus—say 5 per cent. or maybe 10 per cent. thereto, and charge 6 per cent. on that. Charge into expense, also, a salary for yourself. Charge off 10 per cent. on your furniture and fixtures of all kinds, after carefully inventorying them just as you would sugar and tea. Charge off 20 per cent. on delivery equipment of all kinds. Scale your accounts outstanding to the last limit of safety, keeping on hand only the net amount just as you would retain only what sugar was in the barrel and would not count the sweepings near the sugar counter; then scale what you have left 10 per cent. for good measure. This process, rigidly carried out, will truly and honestly show you just where you stand.

4th. On this basis, in the light of what such an inventory will teach you, make plans for the coming year. If you have made money, study results with a view to finding weak spots so that you may be still more prosperous during 1911—not merely for the money such improved prosperity will bring to you but also for the sake of being a better merchant. "Seek ye first, etc."

5th. Resolve that, beginning with the reading of this article, you will figure profits on your SELLING PRICE—not on your cost. If you are not sure you know what I mean, write to me and I shall tell you.

* * * * * * *

And here is a little preachment on that friction-creating, time-destroying human fault, carelessness—which is the art of "I forgot" and "I overlooked." —which seems to me wholesome for the beginning of the year.

Troubles Were Bunched.

In a back number of the Saturday Evening Post have found a gem of an editorial—so good, so practical, so searchingly true, that I am tempted to transcribe it entire. Here are the opening paragraphs:

"The other morning, in one hour, a man had the following experiences:

"He received a letter about a rather important business matter, but the letter had been misdirected, and the delay cost money.

"Two papers were delivered from a near-by news-stand, but they were not of the dates he had ordered.

"His butler told him a Mr. Wilson wished to see him, and as he did not wish to see the only Mr. Wilson he rememebered knowing, he told the butler to send Mr. Wilson away, but he afterward learned that by failing to see his caller he had missed something greatly to his advantage and that the name given to his butler was not Wilson, but Winston.

"He asked for boiled eggs for breakfast and got an omelette.

"A suit of clothes arrived and the tailor had cut the trousers three inches too short.

"He himself sent off a note and addressed it to the wrong number and the wrong street."

As the item states, this man's experiences furnish simply a slightly exaggerated picture of what happens all around each of us every day.

Similar Worries in the Store.

I am given all kinds of trouble every day by carelessness in the taking of orders. Peas, and cheese, and tea are mixed up in telephone orders. An order for 906 is entered 506—and the delivery clerk leaves the goods at 506, even though I tell him of the error before he starts and notwithstanding the fact that he has delivered goods at 906 for that same customer before. A clerk of eight years' experience has been with us two weeks and asks me where he can find the package bird seed; I show him, and the next day he asks me the same question. I have trouble with clerks who omit to date their orders. Customers get their bills at the end of the month and are annoyed because they cannot check their bills accurately. We enter cheese on orders and leave the price blank so that the amount can be filled in after the cheese is cut—but the amount is not filled in and next day when the bookkeeper asks for the proper figure, it is a matter of memory; and it is safe to say that the memory which did not prompt the proper finishing of the order at the time will not aid us to any very accurate knowledge of that item to-day.

Two watchwords I give my new men —Accuracy and Speed. First: Do It Right; and Get it Done! No hurry, no amount of hustle, no seeming great accomplishment in the way of doing up orders or waiting on trade will count if the work is not done accurately. Better go slow—especially at first, and be sure you are right about things. Then gather momentum as fast as you can and make things move. I work all my business on that theory and along those lines. Nothing is finished until it is finished. No order is complete until it is properly put up, checked and set out for delivery; no delivery is complete until the goods are accurately loaded, delivered to the correct address, checked off at the customer's table and the door carefully closed behind the delivery clerk. And yet, this must all be accomplished with speed, or time will be wasted; and, without the proper use of time, we shall get behind with our business, accomplish too little, gather too much expense and—fail.

Lessons are Slowly Learned.

Sometimes, after going against an unusually full assortment of mistakes of various kinds, I feel that I would gladly begin with each man perfectly ignorant of his business and teach him the whole thing from the rudiments of tying a package, if only I could be sure that ONE instruction would do for each point. For I find I have to say a thing so many times: that each instruction has to be so often repeated: the same cautions have to be given every day—"be sure to load those potatoes; put a coffee sack under that flour"—the same fault indicated so many times over before the lesson "sinks in." One man has to do all the thinking for the entire store all the time. One set of nerves has to stand all the strain; one head must do all the planning; one think-tank must give all the directions.

I go back to my editorial for the reason why some may get on and others, with seemingly as good minds, fail.

"Why?" asks the writer: "Because the men who get on have the power of giving attention while the other men have not."

That is the key-note—no mistake about it. Read Hubbard's Message to Garcia; see Russel H. Conwell's lecture on "I happened to Notice," and call up a few experiences of your own along these lines.

Comparison of Two Clerks.

The clerk who asked me about the bird seed worked alongside of another whose experience was about as long. The one who is still there has a wretched memory. He cannot remember for two hours any transaction I have ever been able to trace to him; but he knows it and works hard to offset the consequences. When some trouble is pointed out to him he acknowledges the error and sets himself to remedy it. I feel certain that in a few months he will have not a bad memory, but a good one. The bird-seed man argued every point and tried to "stand from under." He asked where the egg noodles were kept and I showed him. He got them and put them with the order; but the customer did not get them. As he was checking up the order something on the street attracted his attention, and the noodles were left on the counter.

I showed that clerk our stock of peas and called his attention to the fact that many of the labels looked alike and that each pile had one can marked in plain figures as a guide to all similar cans. A little later he wanted a can of the 15 cent grade and he brought not merely an 18 cent can, but the 18 cent can which was marked! Looked like the 15 cent can, so he took it. This man worked hard, was always busy; but his work counted for little because so much had to be done over again and I had to give so much of my time to the task of watching what he did.

The faculty to give attention is the basis of memory. Men who give attention to what passes around them do not say "I forgot." What a blessing it would be if we could eliminate "I forgot," likewise "I thought," from our business! It is not so much that many of us lack the power to succeed. What we lack is the faculty to apply that power. Our failure is due to lack of self-discipline. He who "forgets" is walking in sand, while the one who does not "forget" finishes his work as he goes, rounds out all the daily tasks, forges surely and firmly ahead, and has the glorious satisfaction of seeing clearly every night the definite progress he has achieved during the day.

All of which applies alike to master and man.

Grocers Want Law of Garnishment on Per cent Plan

At the last regular meeting of the St. Paul (Minn.) Retail Grocers' Association, the secretary reported that the country merchants had written asking the city merchants to co-operate with them in trying to get a 10 per cent. garnishment bill through the legislature. Their representatives were lined up, and they hoped the members of the city association would co-operate to help this matter along.

There is also a new peddlers' license bill, which will be presented before the legislature, at the coming session; a bill to prevent fraudulent advertising and a bill to prevent the drawing of checks when the maker of the check does not have funds in the bank sufficient to pay the same. A motion that the association endorse these bills was made and carried.

WANT EGG CASES STAMPED

According to a report from Cleveland, Ohio grocers will ask for legislation this winter providing that every case of eggs in storage be stamped with the date on which it is put in the warehouse. Grocers in Ohio, it is said, will also ask for a law providing for a uniform system of selling goods by weight rather than by measure.

The world loves a plucky fellow and as a rule helps him along. The employer who sees his workers going regularly to the savings bank feels better and has more confidence in their ability and integrity than if he sees them swinging regularly the door of a saloon.

The Markets—1911 Trade Begins Well

Jobbers Say They Were Agreeably Surprised by the Number of Orders Received Since Travelers Began Their Work for the New Year—Some Opinions In Regard to Canned Goods, Tea, Sugar and Other Groceries now in a Prominent Trade Position—The Prospect for the New Year.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Decline expected.

Raisins—Firm.

Canned Goods—Position strong.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—The new year began under auspices that have greatly pleased the jobbing trade. Travelers went out on Tuesday and as there is always some rivalry for the honor of sending in the first order of the year this was not wanting on this occasion. Better still, however, the orders have been large and numerous and it may be well said that the wholesalers thus far have not only been pleased but very agreeably surprised by the evidences of prosperity and activity among the retail trade. This report is general from many houses. Some orders were received even on Tuesday, the day on which the travelers recommenced work. The new commercial year was thus begun auspiciously and trade up to the present augurs well for the whole twelve months.

Christmas business was generally good. It is not necessary to dwell upon this point. It is sufficient to remark that the wholesale trade gives every appearance of being upon a solid basis and under ordinary conditions should have increased prosperity during the coming year.

Reviewing the markets one might say that staples are gradually becoming luxuries. Sugar is the one exception. It is working to a lower price and all the talent will be mistaken if a decline is not recorded within any indefinite period extending from two days to three or four months. Tea is very firm and very high prices are not unexpected in some quarters. Coffee opens the year with its quotations far above those of a year ago. Dried fruits are all strong from apricots all the way down to evaporated apples and raisins contrary to the established custom open the year stronger than ever. Such is the way they have been referred to by one jobber. Canned goods show a firmness that allow them to take a prominent position among the soaring galaxy of groceries. The year opens with the trade in a strong position.

Prices are firm, the trade are happy in the knowledge that the country as a whole is prosperous and 1911 is expected to be a banner year.

Sugar.—Wholesalers state that they are buying no more sugar than they have to and that trade is largely from hand to mouth just now. On the whole, however, the market is satisfactory. The demand is good for this time of the year and is probably above the average. The market has been showing weakening tendencies for some time and it is now felt that lower prices may be expected at any time now. Some regard it but a question of days, others feel that the drop may not come for some weeks yet. As soon as New York refiners are able to get new raws at a low figure, which is expected soon, it is felt that refined will naturally follow and that Canadian refiners will have to do likewise. Regarding the condition of sugar prices during the coming year, Bradstreet's says "For 1911 we must forecast a considerably lower average in view of enormous increase of world's supplies now visible, which has already brought beet sugar quotations down to cost of production."

Dried Fruits.—Local jobbers state that the demand for dried fruits has been all they might have desired. Table raisins had not as good a season as usual according to some reports, but currants and raisins surprised some of the trade by the good demand, for not a few thought that owing to the increase in price consumption would fall off to a large extent. The trade, however, express satisfaction with the manner in which their stocks were picked up and as a result the carry over is not heavy. In this respect there is a difference from the methods of former years when holiday goods were bought probably more heavily and goods were carried over until in not a few instances the flowers were almost due in the wildwood. One opinion expressed by a prominent jobber is that raisins are not going to lose any ground because the holiday is over. This is the usual course but this year they are even stronger than before the close of 1910 and are likely to hold a strong position on account of the short supplies that are now generally accepted as much below the normal holdings for this time.

Nuts.—A good trade was done in nuts during the holidays. Prices are holding firmly because of the reported scarcity of stocks. The quantity held now is not very large and the trade do not seem to be showing much interest in them for the present except to watch the trend of the market.

Tea.—As previously stated, tea is very strong. One need not go beyond any of the local jobbing houses to have that proved to him. Tea that was bought for 7½d not long ago brought an offer of 16½ cents not long ago, and the offer was turned down. It was but a common grade tea and it might be added that the scarcity is particularly noticeable in this grade. One jobber said he expected tea to advance seven cents a pound on the original quotations.

Reviewing the tea situation, advices from Ceylon state that November's shipments to the United Kingdom were about 2¼ millions less than those shipped in the same month of 1909. This amount is about 2 millions less than estimated at the beginning of the month. Lower markets cannot be expected, especially in the common and medium teas as the total crop from Ceylon is fully 8 million pounds short of last year's crop. For the time of the year, there has been a fair quantity of fine teas offered with full prices being paid, especially by the Russian buyers for Orange Pekoes. There was a strong general demand for medium teas at a little higher prices while common teas, having become firmer at the beginning of the month, weakened later, principally because of poorer quality.

Coffee.—The coffee market seems to be just as strong as ever, although there has been a lull in the excitement that has been noticeable for so long.

Summing up the present coffee situation one writer says that the largest part of 2,600,000 bags held in Brazil are in three hands; the consuming world is rather bare of stocks and hence wants this coffee; the crop prospects for the current and the next crop are not encouraging and that as a result of these conditions the bullish influences have strong support. It is said that there are only 600,000 bags outside of the three strong holders referred to. On the other hand the speculative excitement now existing cannot go on indefinitely and is considered a weak point. Circumstances of crops, stocks and consumption today warrant the maintenance of higher values than those now existing, says one authority. The latest crop views is gloomy for the next ensuing crop. Present statistics are of a bullish nature.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—There continues a fair demand for tomatoes though buyers are not inclined to anticipate their wants. Peas are quiet, shot peas being comparatively scarce are firm but at present the market is quiet. Other canned vegetables are seasonably quiet, but in all lines the supply seems to be much below the average for this season and in expectation of an active spring demand based on the belief that stocks in the hands of distributors are about cleared up holders are firm in their views on price. An unusually good demand for this time of the year is reported for salmon of all kinds. Orders are said to be coming from various quarters indicating that jobbers in spite of the recent rather liberal arrivals are short of supplies and that the consuming demand continues strong in spite of the high prices prevailing.

Lobster remains firm owing to the great scarcity of stock.

TORONTO.—The position of canned goods is one of the interesting features of the grocery trade just now. In fact it has been in the spot light more or less during the past six months. There is a feeling that canned goods have been given too much attention and that it might be just as well to overlook them for a month or two. A reason is given for this. The trade are going over their stocks and it may be that some may find they are better off than they believed themselves to be. They give other minor reasons among them being that canned goods be forgotten temporarily because they have so long been a topic that always won attention from the trade.

At the same time this idea is scouted. There are many who see nothing but strength in the situation. "Nine years ago," said one jobber, "tomatoes went to $1.65. I think that we are going to see that price this year. At least I feel that conditions warrant it.

"The supply is just as short, the demand is far greater than at that time and—well I will not be greatly surprised if we see even higher prices than $1.65."

That is one opinion. Just what will happen is hard to tell. The trade has hardly begun to settle down in preparation for the New Year's business, but every one admits that practically all lines are valuable. It is generally known that most of the jobbing houses are following up every clue that might lead to a "find" of tomatoes or any of several staple lines but the fact is that there is not much doing. Thus the new year is opened with canned goods occupying a Gibraltar and apparently it has no reason to fear a weakness during the next six or seven months. That at any rate is a feeling that is very general.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Weaker.

Tarragona Almonds—Still scarce.

Coffee—Firm.

Montreal, Jan. 5.—The year that is past seems to have been a bumper one for a number of the wholesale houses. Of course, some of them are not inclined to talk too joyfully about past business as yet, as Christmas and New Year week brings news of business troubles from the most unexpected sources. With one or two exceptions the grocery trade in the country seems to be in a satisfactory condition and the outlook for a large volume of trade next spring is pretty rosy.

The prevailing inactivity in the sugar market is attracting most attention. Its chief cause is the European news which continues to confirm the immense crop of beet sugar now available there. Willet & Gray say: "Beet sugar being down in price to or below the cost of production, the producers are very reluctant about making actual losses and are disposed to hold on somewhat stubbornly. In this they will doubtless be aided by the money in Europe available at low rates, a condition which is reached in Cuba, would put an entirely different complexion upon that market and enable the Cuban planters now, as of old, to hold their sugar until they were actually wanted in the markets of the world."

Sugar.—The sugar market locally is steady. The wholesale trade would not be surprised to see a decline towards the end of the month, but of course are not prepared to predict that such a movement will actually develop. The outlook, though is for an easier market, and the retailer's policy should be to buy sparingly from time to time if at all possible.

Syrups and Molasses.—Owing to the lower tendency of sugar, prices will probably be somewhat lower and demand as a consequence is expected to brighten up. Yet, reports from Barbadoes are not at all favorable as far as crops are concerned, so that we cannot be too confident about lower prices. On the other hand, crop scares are pretty common about this time of the year.

There is some talk about new molasses being now offered, but it is likely that they are made from held over canes, as February will be early enough for new supplies.

Dried Fruits.—No development of any important character occurred in the market for Californian dried fruits. The distributing demand was quite a little better than the average for the season. Offerings of California prunes were light, but there were no orders for immediate deliveries. Peaches are without animation now, but the dullness is attributed to the effect of the holiday season. Conditions are said to be favorable for an active and high market during the coming spring.

Valencia raisins still remain scarce but new arrivals will be here soon.

Tea.—Owing to stock-taking it is expected attention will be paid to this market for the next fortnight. Business at present is rather routine chiefly for current needs. Yet sales for January are being made as the firm tone has stimulated more interest. Japans have been taken more freely of late while Congous are quieter. There is, however, an inquiry for low grades.

Coffee.—A rumor is going around that the Brazilian government, aided by the large coffee interests in Brazil, the United States and Europe, is quietly selling valorisation coffees. These large interests are in absolute control. The coffee market in Brazil is higher than in the United States.

It is believed by many that coffee will be high for at least a year and that prices may possibly remain high for a number of years until production again becomes greater than consumption.

Rice and Tapioca.—There is no new feature in the rice market, business being light as usual at the year end. Prices are firm enough but some circles complain that the distributers have little faith in the situation and refuse to pay the advance. Such trade as is reported is for late January delivery, as grocers do not care to swell their inventories. Advices from the south are of an optimistic nature as planters are asking good high prices for their rough rice.

Beans and Peas.—There is still an easy feeling in this market and prices are expected to take a move soon. Dealers cannot give any definite reason for the expectation, but there seems to be something in the air to that effect.

Nuts.—There is the usual seasonable demand for all kinds of nuts. "We ran short of a number of lines," said one dealer, "and indeed the trade has been most satisfactory in spite of the high prices."

Tarragona almonds are still scarce and the supplies on spot will hardly be sufficient to satisfy the demand before the new crop comes along.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS:—

Icing Sugar.—Stronger.

Apricots—Firm.

Sago.—Weaker.

Winnipeg, Jan. 5.—As can be expected at this time, there is little movement of goods from jobbing houses. There are many hurry-up orders for small quantities, and this work, together with the task of stock-taking, is taking up all the time of the wholesalers.

Reports are prevalent that the merchants everywhere in the country are well satisfied with the holiday trade. Weather conditions were conducive to good trade for several days before the festive day, and the turn over is quite as large as anticipated.

Already wholesalers are making some splendid collections after the retail business of December, and local jobbers expect that cash returns will be better than last year.

The characteristic of the general grocery market this week is the advances which are being made. Many grocery lines which are prominent during the holiday season are held at strong figures.

Sugar.—There was not much demand for sugar during the last two weeks, as merchants were well stocked with all lines some time ago. At the present time, however, it is apparent that stocks are low throughout the country, and ordering for icing and powdered is heavy at present. Icing in small quantities has been advanced to $6.50.

Foreign Dried Fruits — Raisins and prunes are quite scarce after the large output of last month. Although prunes are advancing, there have been no new quotations made this week, but when jobbers make their next purchase it is possible that they will find prices at least ½c up. Currants were firm last week, but quotations are becoming more moderate. Apricots, peel and dates are firm.

Syrup and Molasses.—The syrup market is peculiar in that prices seem to be rigidly stationary. Buyers claim that corn stocks are so heavy that prices will be reduced; on the other hand, exporters claim that the demand is quite equal to the supply, and that prices cannot go lower, but will be forced up soon. A conservative view of the situation convinces us that the demand is altogether too great for syrup stocks to permit a glut of the corn market.

Nuts.—A satisfactory trade is going on everywhere in the West in nuts. Of course, from jobbers' standpoints, most of the stocks are distributed, but the merchants are well stocked with them at present, and are having good sale for them. Manchuria nuts are now quoted at 16c.

Evaporated Apples.—A great scarcity prevails in evaporated apples, and high prices have been paid to bring them in. Jobbers may be forced to go across the line for stocks. Prices have been advanced 1c, and at present it looks as if the United States is the only available market in the future.

ALBERTA MARKETS.

Calgary, Jan. 5.—Wholesalers expect a brisk winter's trade in this western metropolis. Up to the present time business has been good; the usual Christmas rush has been extraordinaryly big. Eggs and butter prices have advanced and are going higher. New laid eggs are 50 cents a dozen at wholesale now. Cornmeal is lowering until it is down to below the price of rolled oats. Prunes are a scarce commodity here owing to the poor crop in California. They are up to 8½ cents. There are no Alberta apples on the market now, the crop having been sold long since. British Columbia potatoes sell for $37. The prices:

St. John, Jan. 5.—Ontario flours declined last week 25 cents per barrel, present quotations being $5.20 to $5.30 for mediums and $5.35 to $5.45 for full patents. Messina lemons and California navel oranges are also much lower. Most of the wholesale dealers started last week to take stock and as business was quiet after the Christmas rush they are making good headway.

THE FARMER AHEAD.

The Bureau of Statistics of United States recently made an effort to ascertain if the farmer had been benefitted more than others by the changed conditions that have taken place in the past ten years. It was found that an acre of corn in 1899 was worth $8.51, and ten years later was worth $15.20, an increase of 78.6 per cent. The increase in ten of the leading products of the farm amounted to 72.7 per cent. To ascertain if this was a greater increase than in goods that the farmer had to buy, letters were sent to a number of retail dealers asking them to quote prices that prevailed in 1899 and in 1909. The average increase in price for all the articles considered, about 85 in number, was 12.1 per cent. Comparing this with the increase in farm value, the farmer has evidently been greatly benefitted.

"Your friends across the way seems to be selling things rather cheaply, John," remarked a hardware merchant to a grocer.

"Yes, indeed," replied John, who was partly Scotch, "you see he has the advantage of me in one respect—I hae to pay for my goods."

Reason Advanced for High Price of Dairy Butter

By J. Lewis, in Farm and Dairy.

The high prices at present prevailing for dairy butter would not be so favorable to the home butter maker were it not for the creameries. Creameries have put up the price on butter. If all butter were made at home as it used to be, the price would fall rapidly to its old level. If farmers realized this, more of them would bring all their cream to the creamery instead of making it up at home. The greatest difficulty which creameries have at the present time is to get a paying quantity of cream without having to go too far for it. If all cream was sent to the creamery, we would be able to make our butter cheaper and give the patrons larger returns.

One difficulty that I have encountered is that many farmers expect to get as much for the butter fat in their cream when sent to the creamery as they would if they made it up at home, taking no account of the time and labor expended in making the butter and disposing of the product in home dairying. Were a reasonable value put on their time, they would soon find that the creamery is the most profitable proposition of the two. I have in mind an instance of a lady who used to send her cream to our creamery. She is now making the butter at home and is pleased with the results. Every Saturday this woman and her son come on to the market and spend a full half day there disposing of the butter. I do not suppose they get more than 50 or 60 cents more for it than they would if the cream was sent to the creamery.

There is more sympathy and co-operation needed between the butter maker and his patrons. Patrons must realize that it costs money to make butter and market it,—even at a creamery. Few of them appreciate how much this cost can be reduced if all of the cream in a section were sent to the creamery instead of making it a convenient method of disposing of milk when it is inconvenient to dispose of it any other way.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

"The History of the Biscuit," is the title of an attractive booklet issued by Peek, Frean & Co., Ltd., London, S.E., England. Every page is illustrated with handsomely bordered engravings, each of which shows some particular stage in the manufacture of this everyday household necessity. It is pointed out in this history that Peek, Frean & Co., Ltd., use only the very finest ingredients and this combined with the greatest care and technical skill, places before the public biscuits of the highest standard and of irreproachable character. Another booklet illustrates in their original colors the various kinds of biscuits manufactured, and they certainly look very tempting. Even the colors of the icings and top decorations are shown with all the skill the modern printer has at his command. A third booklet that Peak, Frean & Co., Ltd., are sending out gives a description from the London "Daily Mail" of their factory and extent of their business, which was included in a series of articles in that paper on the various Great Commercial Enterprises of the capital of the world.

Are the majority of grocers merely parcel distributors, or do they make their business their profession by studying the goods they sell, and by being able to tell their clients about new and advantageous food products? If some one told you about a new article which would be an added attraction or a valuable economy to your business, wouldn't you appreciate it? If you had the opportunity, wouldn't you help them in return? Most good housekeepers are looking for something which adds a new interest to table delicacies. It pays a grocer to cultivate such customers. F. E. Robson & Co., advertising and sales agents, for a number of excellent specialties, offer to send every grocer a 50c bottle of Mapleine free, the only condition being that the grocer must give the goods a thorough trial, and then they know the grocer can, and will, recommend Mapleine, which is a new flavor.

Close of the Year Saw Market Quiet

Holiday Affected Trade to a Certain Extent, but Jobbers are Looking to Better Conditions With the New Year—Demand for Poultry at the Last Fell Off and New Year's Trade Was Not Heavy—Eggs are Firm, but Staple Provisions Have Been Uneventful Under the Holiday Influence.

The provision market has given evidence of the holiday season by a quietness apparent in more than one direction. The supply of hogs lately has not been large. The price is a little higher, the demand continues fair for pork products, but just at present there is room for improvement in the briskness of the business, and it might be added that jobbers by some power of foresight peculiar to themselves see a rejuvenation of the business in the near future.

Between Christmas and New Years the demand for poultry fell off. The existing high prices was one reason for this falling off in consumer enquiry, and moreover the jobbers did not have sufficient supplies.

Butter, eggs and cheese have been under the holiday cloud, also in fact staples as a whole had to take to the back yard while the fancy holiday goods held the position of prominence on the front lawn. The feeling all around is quiet.

Butter.—Fresh creamery butter is in small demand at present, but there is a good demand for new made dairy. Creamery prints are scarce and likely to increase in value.

Most of the Prince Edward Island factories are shipping their cream to Boston and the market there will have to advance a few cents in order to divert this cream into butter for local consumption.

Poultry.—There are quite a number of turkeys remaining on the retailers' hands, and prices are beginning to fall. This will no doubt mean a loss for those who got in their new stocks late at the higher prices. There is a fairly good demand for geese and ducks, but lower prices are expected any time.

Provisions.—The market has been rather quiet during the past week. Prices of hogs, live and dressed, are slightly higher, but otherwise the market is quiet. Demand is fairly good for hams and bacon, barrelled goods are in limited demand. Lard is inclined to be quiet and the whole market seems to have hardly recovered from the holiday effects.

Poultry.—The inter-holiday trade was not very heavy. Retailers had in quite a few cases hold over supplies, and the consuming demand was not heavy. Scarcity of goods and resulting short supplies do not lend themselves to a big demand. The market this week after both holidays is rather quiet, showing a reaction.

Eggs.—The market is steadily going up as the season advances. Fresh stocks are 37 cents per dozen, while candled are 31 cents to-day. Most of the supplies come from the south, as eastern Canada stocks are low.

Butter.—Butter is held at a moderate price for this time of the year. Creamery is quoted to the grocer at 32 cents and No. 1 dairy at 30 cents per pound. Everywhere it is expected that much higher prices will rule very soon.

Cheese.—The cheese trade is expected to open up better in January. During the holiday rush for other stocks, cheese has been neglected somewhat.

Buying goods from the mail order houses is said to have been the defeat of William Buck, who was the Republican candidate for the State Legislature in a county in Iowa. The Democrats issued a dodger which read, "You buy your goods of a mail order house instead of patronizing Iowa industry. Why don't you look to the mail order houses for your votes." The result was that in a normal Republican County, he was defeated by a substantial majority.

OVER so often in the three hundred odd days which go to make up the business year we have the pleasure of dealing with you. By our attention to every detail, we endeavour to show our appreciation of your commands.

But we rarely have the opportunity of telling you, in a purely personal way, what real enjoyment we derive from selling goods to merchants with whom our relations are always so cordial. It means a great deal to any firm, and we want to assure you that we shall always do our utmost to merit the continuance of this cordiality.

We wish you Health, Wealth and Happiness during 1911, and hope it will be a banner year.

Farmer's Wife Puts Blame on Towns-People

The following interesting answer was given by a farmer's wife when questioned about supporting the stores in her home town:

"If a careful examination is made after the express wagons take their goods away from the station, you will find there is very little left, addressed to the farmer. The goods that are purchased by the town people are always delivered to them, while the farmer must call himself for his, thus creating the idea that the farmer is the chief mail order dealer. The merchant must not think that we will purchase goods that are not good enough for the townspeople. The merchant must live and if the town people do not support him he must make larger profits, and the farmers are not going to pay that extra profit. If the towns-people will be loyal and support each other so that they can give us the service we are entitled to, we will gladly deal in our home town."

Wheat Market Shows New Strength

Quotations are Higher and Some Millers Look for Advance in Flour if the Primary Market Maintains Its Present Strength—Cereals are Firm—Prices Show no Change—Present Season is Good for Retail Flour Trade and Should be Appreciated.

Although the holiday season had as usual a rather quieting effect on the grain and flour markets, still there was a decided firm tone which has been manifested by higher quotations being chalked on the exchange boards, and if the upward tendency continues, millers expect to see advances in the price of flour. That is practically all the millers have to say in regard to future movements in the market. Last week rumors were rampant to the effect that export enquiries were being made for Manitoba grain. Advices from Argentina report reduced crop estimates and shippers are holding firmly at an advance.

The demand for flour has been good, and millers apparently look upon conditions as satisfactory. A change that will affect exporters will be welcomed, as the United States market has been quiet during the past two months. The whole situation is, however, unsettled, and there seems to be more than one interest active somewhere behind the scenes.

The present season is considered good for flour trade. This is evident to any grocer, and knowing the demand is at hand, it should be to his advantage to remember the fact and put new life into his flour selling plans. Suggestion in its many forms is of great assistance, but the means employed is a second consideration once the grocer realizes the possibilities of developing the flour end of his business.

The trade in rolled oats and rolled wheat shows no diminution. The demand is good, and millers report a satisfactory market. Boiled down, the main features of the flour market seems to be, higher quotations for wheat and firmer feeling in the market, which if maintained will, it is felt, lead to advances in the price of flour. There is an abundance of supplies both on spot and in prospective, and it is difficult to play "bull" in wheat just now.

The quantity of wheat and flour, as wheat, now in transit to Europe, with the visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, is equivalent to 86,599,000 bushels, against 63,478,000 bushels a year ago. The estimated weekly world requirements of wheat for the present cereal year according to Broomhall, are 11,600,000 bushels. The total shipments of wheat, including flour, to Europe this week one year ago were equivalent to 10,576,000 bushels.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—Although the holidays detracted attention from the market to a certain extent, the situation is firm, and it is pretty hard to predict a change in prices just now, and dealers are inclined to believe that prices now prevailing will hold for some time.

Flour. — Business has been good in spite of the holidays. Local millers report a firmness which if maintained, they say, will lead to higher flour prices. Advances thus far are confined to wheat, but the millers claim that further indications of strength will likely affect flour.

CALENDARS FOR 1911.

There is a departure from the ordinary run of calendars in that of Spratt's Patent Ltd., 24 and 25 Fenchurch St., London, E. C., inasmuch as there is a separate picture for each month of the year. These include dogs, hens, cage birds and parrots and on the back of each page the origin and description of each dog or bird, as the case may be, is given. The entire booklet contains a great deal of useful information.

This year the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., have issued another striking calendar. The picture illustrates a strong, husky looking North American Indian with a sack of Lake of the Woods flour on his back which he, with a brother red-man, has canoed across a body of water from the company's mills at Keewatin. These are to be seen in the background. At the bottom of the picture are shown the mills at Portage La Prairie.

Annual Staff Gatherings

Last Friday evening the first annual banquet tendered by Wagstaffe Limited, Hamilton, Ont., to the employes, was held at the company's factory. It was a delightful affair, and was held in lieu of the annual picnic which it has been decided to discontinue. Early in the evening, the hundred employes gathered in the large store room, which had been artistically decorated for the occasion, and were treated to a menu of musical merit, after which brief but interesting remarks were made by James Wagstaffe, who answered to the toast to "The Managing Directors." In doing so, he explained the object of the event, and touched upon the success of the business during the past year. He most strongly advocated reciprocity between employer and employe, and hoped that in the future their relations would be as pleasant as at present. Arbitration is better than strife, and no firm will succeed if divided within itself, he thought. He also alluded to the new factory, which will be half as large again as the present one. The head of the firm was most heartily cheered as he sat down.

Remarks were also made during the evening by Herbert Wagstaffe, James Somerville and F. D. Smye, also directors, and all touched upon the happy relations during the year just ending and predicted just as enjoyable friendship in the future.

Following the banquet, the floor was cleared for a dance, which proved equally enjoyable, and the music for the occasion was rendered by William Wagstaffe, at the piano, also numbers by F. H. J. Moore, J. A. Waddell, A. Cronk, T. Hindley and J. W. Wagstaffe.

One of the interesting features of the occasion was the presence of an old employe of Mr. Wagstaffe, when the latter was in business in Manchester, England. The son of the woman in question is at present in the employ of the firm.

Wednesday and Thursday of last week the annual convention of Canadian and United States salesmen for Holbrooks, Limited, was held at Toronto. Very interesting business meetings were held at which plans for 1911 were discussed and explained and the work of 1910 gone over and analyzed. Addresses were delivered on the various phases of salesmanship, trade and general advertising, etc. Men from the various fields, told of methods that they had used successfully, and the interchange of ideas and experiences should prove very beneficial.

On Thursday evening the staff were guests of the management at a banquet held at the St. Charles, and it was a thoroughly enjoyable affair. After a bountiful dinner, a number of toasts were proposed and responded to. These were interspersed with musical numbers and recitations.

The Cudahy Packing Co. held a three days' convention of their Canadian selling staff at Toronto last week. A splendid program of addresses on manufacturing, salesmanship, advertising, etc., was carried out, followed by a banquet at the National Club.

The employes of the Shredded Wheat Co., Niagara Falls, met recently and presented President Porter and General Manager Mason engrossed testimonials of their appreciation of the many things they have done for their advancement. These presentations were made in connection with the annual Christmas reception. The testimonial to President Porter was an acknowledgement of the many concessions obtained and the many improvements made for their moral and physical betterment, because of his cooperation or solicitation, and in this case the expression covered his many years of faithful service as the executive head of business. The testimonial of Fred Mason was also individual in every way, and is unique in that it was evoked after only four months of his administration as General Manager.

BIG PACK OF SOCKEYES

More of Them Packed in 1910 Than of Any Other Kind—Last Year's Totals.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 5.—The salmon pack of British Columbia given out as official, shows that during 1910, 762,201 cases were packed, divided among the principal fishing districts as follows:

Fraser river, 223,148; Skeena river, 222,035; Rivers inlet, 129,398; Naas river, 39,720; outlying districts, 147,900. Total, 762,201.

The previous year the pack was 967,720, but 1909 was the big fourth year. In 1905 it was 1,167,460 cases; 1906, 629,460 cases. The biggest pack in the history of British Columbia was in 1901, the quantity being 1,236,165 cases.

It is interesting to note how largely the catch of sockeyes has dominated every other species during the past year. The result has been given as follows: Sockeyes, (cases) 565,915; red springs 19,313; white springs, 9,476; chums, 58,362; pinks, 34,613; cohoes, 74,382; steelheads, 140.

LITTLE FLOUR CHATS FOR YOUNG GROCERS UNDER EIGHTY

My Best Customers are the Farmers' Wives

Just now I was talking with Mrs. Broadacres.

Buys her winter's flour supply from me for quite a long time now.

Uses about a barrel every six weeks.

A great breadmaker, by the way.

And when you're invited to her place, you're always sure of a good dinner. I know, sometimes being "one of those present."

At first she wouldn't take more'n a barrel at once.

Afraid it wouldn't keep, you know, and all that.

One day I had an inspiration—shaded the price for quantity—sold her five barrels on one trip.

FIVE ROSES, of course.

She put it in a dry place in the loft away from the mice, neither too warm nor too cold.

Now she says the last barrel is always better than the first.

Sort of dries out, you see, takes up more water—more loaves—works easier, quicker—rises higher and stays there.

Finer flavor, too, mellower—clearer color, better bread every way.

You see, the inferior parts of the wheat, the parts that can't keep, these are all kept out of FIVE ROSES.

And so it improves with age, keeps sound for four, five, six months and more.

Selling my country customers a supply instead of one solitary bag or barrel was one grand idea.

Saves them time and trips, also a little money; insures their steady satisfaction for a long time.

Saves me storage space—quicker turnover—husbands capital—weds the housewife to the FIVE ROSES habit.

But you must be mighty sure of your flour, mighty careful.

It has made me confident, aggressive, has FIVE ROSES.

And as for the user—well, here's the best breadmaker in three counties, 1st prize at the Fair, ask her.

Christmas Trade Was Generally Good

A Slight Lull Has Followed But is But Temporary While Retailers Dispose of Their Odds and Ends—Oranges Have Been Rather Plentiful—Potatoes are Firm — Demand for Celery, Sweet Potatoes, etc., Has Been Good — Jobbers Look Forward to Increased Demand.

Those who are interested and engaged in the fruit business, retail and wholesale, turn over a new page for this week's business, the first of the new year. There have been some lessons learned during the past twelve months and it is safe to say that some of these same lessons will have to be repeated probably several times more, before some remedial measure is applied. The reason for this is that blame often rests with growers and new methods are not employed until they discover the necessity for them.

But retailers and wholesalers, themselves, have learned a few things and intend to put them into practice. The fruit business is steadily growing and grocers throughout the country have been profiting from it. From some standpoints the past season was not exactly the best fruit year on record but the trade seem to maintain that on the whole it was satisfactory.

The Christmas demand to wind up the year was good and it is expected that business will open up briskly with the new year and that last season's figures will be surpassed. The price of oranges must have been satisfactory to the consumer as supplies were fairly liberal and prices were maintained at a reasonable figure.

TORONTO.

Green Fruit.—There is noticeable this week a slightly easier feeling in some lines of fruit. There is a liberal supply of oranges on hand, but with the festive season over the trade seems disposed to clean up the stocks they are holding. This likewise applies to more than oranges and is given as a more or less general feeling expected to obtain for a week or so until trade has recuperated and settled down to the new year's business. Lemons are a little easier and over the whole market there is a temporary quietness which should soon disappear before the new demand.

Vegetables.—The demand for vegetables is normal. Celery, sweet potatoes and similar lines have been selling well and according to jobbers the demand has been quite satisfactory. There is a fair business in imported stocks. Potatoes are firm and are quoted at about 90 cents straight. The situation has not cleared perceptibly and there are still reports that the supply is likely to be scarce. Dealers state that they are hardly prepared to express their opinions yet. There is a good demand for onions just now and retail dealers should avail themselves of this knowledge and endeavor to increase their sales of this vegetable.

Green Fruits.—The market for Sicilian lemons is becoming stronger, while the demand for Florida oranges is also good. Cranberries showed a weak tendency, but they are getting strong again, prices in New York being somewhat in advance of those of a week ago.

The first shipment of California navels which arrived recently opened satisfactorily, the fruit being nicely colored and sweet. This is earlier than they have ever been known to arrive in large supplies.

Vegetables.—There is nothing interesting in the vegetable market. The usual dullness prevails, and except for packages which grocers run short of, it is not likely that any large orders will be filled.

Cucumbers are increasing, while green peppers are also soaring. A few weeks ago a small basket could be purchased for 75c, but of late they have advanced three times as much.

Fish Demand to be Heavy in Coming Months

Retailers Find the Consuming Public Asking for Greater Quantities of Fish During the Next Two Months Than at any Other Equal Period of the Year — Lobster Season at its Height—Oyster Business is Brisk and Supplies are None too Plentiful—Advent Trade was Good—The Frozen Fish Trade.

The retail trade is looking forward to a good demand for fish during the winter months. Wholesale houses are apparently well supplied with stock, at least for present requirements and the indications are that the business during the next two months will be good. Some stocks are reported temporarily light at the coast, finnan haddie being among those mentioned. Trade in lobsters is at its height; haddock are in good demand and oysters are much sought after. Now that the holiday season is over and staple goods return to their old popularity, fish will claim its share of the trade and the present is probably the busiest period of the year in fish demand.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—Fish of all kinds continue scarce. The receipts during the past week have been small, and the catches below the average for the season of the year. While the weather has been mild along the coast the conditions have not been favorable for fishing, as high winds prevented the shore fishermen from reaching the fishing grounds. There is a marked scarcity of finnan haddies. The stocks that were held here were all cleaned up during the Advent season, and the receipts have not been sufficient to cure any more.

Local dealers report an increasing demand for fresh haddock. Nearly all the fish reaching the market now are consumed locally. More fish are being used for diet than ever before.

The lobster trade is now in full swing and large shipments are being made from Nova Scotia points to the Boston market. There is a general improvement in the foreign fish trade. During the past week over six thousand quintals of cod were shipped in two vessels sailing direct from St. John's, Nfld., for Oporto. Oysters continue high and good stock is scarce on the local market. Late reports say that the fishermen operating out of Canso are meeting with better success than for some weeks.

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—The situation in the fish market while inclined to be quiet as the result of the holiday is in reality opening upon perhaps the busiest month of the entire year. That, at least, is what some fish dealers say about it and they ought to know. January and February are, they claim, two good months. The holiday is passed and the demand for all lines of fish becomes general. Retailers should take advantage of this fact and endeavor to enlarge the field of their business. Lent is two months away and by building up a good business now the benefits will be felt by the increased demand during that season. Frozen fish of general lines are now asked for and altogether prospects point to a good trade.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

St. John's—The fish prices have remained at same as last writing, and will no doubt stay there for quite a while as not much fish will be bought from the planters for the next few weeks. Some fishermen this year have been unable to market their fish on account of adverse weather, and have decided to hold on to their catch until the spring in hopes of obtaining better prices. Little fish arrive here during the winter months, so the market generally remains the same until the opening of spring. There is abundance of cod on the south-west coast, also a large amount is reported on the south-east coast, but weather is too stormy for catching.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—As is natural at this time of the year the fish trade is pretty quiet. The demand in a small way is for shell and hulk oysters, lobsters and fancy lines of fish which are used at suppers, etc. The reports just now indicate that frozen haddock and finnan haddies will be plentiful, and the prices have sagged down quite a bit. Tom cods will be scarce, as the spawn season is now over. Shell oysters and bulk are in good demand, but stocks are getting smaller.

Authorities claim that cranberries, especially in the raw state will cure many of the minor ills of man, being especially good for dyspepsia, headache and in the case of yellow fever, as a tonic and to assist in clearing the system of harmful bacteria. In cooking cranberries, only porcelain line or enamelware should be used. These are facts that the grocer may use to interest his customers for while they may never use them as a medicine, they are always glas to get any interesting information like this.

Should Pay More for Better Herring

Writer Maintains That Government Should Encourage Merchants to Offer 50 Cents a Barrel Extra for Superior Packed Fish—This Would Induce Raising the Standard and Result in More Herring Sold.

By A. M. Payne.

The chief reason for the discreditable status of the Canadian Herring Fishery Industry may be understood from the 1909 Blue Book:

"I did not see a barrel in the course of my travels that would have decently kept in sand, to say nothing of pickle, and the most annoying thing about this state of affairs is that on every hand the need of a superior barrel and the advantages which accrue from its use are admitted fully and freely. As a result of my journeyings round the shores of Canada in connection with the effort to effect an improvement in the herring industry, I have been forced to the conclusion that the barrel question is the chief root of the evil that keeps the trade from making the progress it should do. This evil is not by any means confined to any one district or part of the coast. The very best at present in use anywhere provides a miserable spectacle to anyone possessed with a practical eye."

A Surprising Situation.

There can be no doubt in the mind of any ordinary business man that the strictures in the Government Report on the barrel impediment being based on the actual facts are so self-evident and convincing as to excite surprise that a Government Bureau in the twentieth century should tolerate its continuance year after year. This candid expression of opinion by a thoroughly qualified expert authority, specially delegated by the Government, clearly forecasting the gradual ruin of one of our most valuable natural resources, may soon be regarded as an ancient history. It is already two seasons old.

More Money for Better Fish.

In a previous article reference was made to a lack of discrimination on the part of firms engaged in the purchase and distribution of pickled herring. The question arises: Has anything been attempted to bring about an improvement? The report intimates that some leading Nova Scotia fish merchants have issued a circular letter to fishermen offering "25 cents a barrel more for all pickled fish put up in strong iron-hooped barrels than for fish sent out in the old leaky barrels, all of which is a most gratifying step out of the old do-as-you-please rut."

"This movement," the report goes on to say, "is, of course, a direct result of the efforts of the department in the experiments carried on during the past four seasons." Twenty-five cents a barrel is not sufficient an inducement, as any ordinary individual all the way through from fisherman to consumer would name at least twice this figure, viz., fifty cents additional for a barrel intended to contain pickle fluid for preserving valuable fish food.

Slow to Make a Move.

Special committees by Boards of Trade, notably the Halifax Board of Trade, have discussed the question eliciting much desirable information; pamphlets with instructive data and recommendations to the department have been issued; earnest well-meant and appropriate speeches have been made in both local and federal parliaments, but not the slightest sign of any action to promote improvement has been taken by the Department towards carrying into effect the simple remedy suggested by the Government expert, who says: "Nothing short of a legalised standard barrel with a system of inspection under some sort of government control will, in my opinion, prove a beneficial and lasting improvement to the fish trade in general of Canada."

To-day, at the close of the season of 1910, in the fifth year of departmental consideration to secure betterment of one of our most important natural assets, the harvest of the sea lapping our shores for thousands of miles, things are just as unsatisfactory as ever they were. The Departmental Mountain has brought forth a Departmental Mouse in the shape of encouraging merchants interested to offer 25 cents a barrel additional for proper up-to-date iron-hooped packages, instead of 50 cents or even more.

The experience of European herring industries will be touched upon in our next article.

TECHNICAL BOOKS.

CANADIAN MACHINERY AND MANUFACTURING NEWS, $1 per year. Every manufacturer using power should receive this publication regularly, and also see that it is placed in the hands of his engineer or superintendent. Every issue is full of practical articles, well calculated to suggest economies in the operation of a plant. Condensed advertisements for "Machinery Wanted" inserted free for subscribers to the GROCER. "Machinery for Sale" advertisements one cent per word each insertion. Sample copy on request. CANADIAN MACHINERY, 143-149 University Ave., Toronto.

SALES PLANS—This book is a collection of 333 successful plans that have been used by retail merchants to get more business. These include Special Sales, Getting Holiday Business, Co-operative Advertising, Money-Making Ideas, Contests, etc. Price $2.50, postpaid. MacLean Publishing Co., Technical Book Dept., 143-149 University Ave., Toronto.

PERIODICAL DEPT.

THE BUSY MAN'S MAGAZINE is the most popular periodical of its kind. Why? Because each issue contains a strong list of original articles of interest to every Canadian. It also reproduces the most timely, instructive and interesting articles appearing in the other magazines and periodicals of the month. The cream of the world's periodical press is too valuable to overlook. BUSY MAN'S is on sale at all news-stands. Better still, send $2 for one year's subscription. Mail it to-day. The Busy Man's Magazine, Toronto.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

Grocery Advertising

By Wm. Borsodi

It contains suggestions for special sales, bargain sales, cash sales, etc.; ideas for catch lines or window cards, and many hints for the preparation of live advertising copy. A collection of short talks, advertising ideas and selling phrases used by the most successful grocery advertisers.

"We believe in your sincerity and have every confidence in the accuracy of your market reports. :: :: ::

"In a great many instances The Grocer has been a factor in helping us to save many dollars. Of all the business papers received in our office, it gets closest attention from our buyer."

The above is from a letter written us by a well-known Quebec firm.

"I always enjoy reading The Grocer, and never miss going through it carefully, taking particular care to watch the market quotations. I have been able many times to buy to advantage as a result of information which it gave me."—Victoria, B.C.

"We assure you that we appreciate The Grocer very much, because of the many helpful suggestions contained in it. The fact that we have started to cut out the helpful things from week to week, and paste them in a scrap book, is an evidence of our appreciation."—Sydney, C.B.

"I am sending you a chart showing my method of keeping track of purchases and expenses, cash received, etc. It has saved me pounds and it keeps me from going beyond my means. I sincerely hope it will be of help to my fellow tradesmen your side of the water. I thank you for the helpful hints given in The Grocer. The paper beats any on this side."—East Ham, England.

"Not long ago I saved ½ cent per pound on a large shipment of prunes through promptly reading The Grocer's market quotations."—Brandon, Man.

"We always feel that we can rely on quotations and statements made in The Canadian Grocer."—Edmonton, Alta.

"We believe The Grocer saves us a great many dollars in the course of a year. We consider the information it contains is very reliable, and, in a general way, a guide to buying."—Montague, P.E.I.

Macaroni Vermicelli Spaghetti

The peculiary desirable qualities of Taganrog (Russia) wheat impart to the Macaroni, Vermicelli, Spaghetti and fancy pastes made by Codou of France, a delicacy and flavor unlike any others—the quality is superb.

Added to that is the dependency of expert workmanship furthered by the aid of a model factory. With the definite purpose of securing the "BEST" insist upon having "Codou's."

Look for the Name "CODOU"

on the package—it assures and guarantees satisfaction. It is the stamp of reliability—the seal of goodness—the real and genuine. With it in your stock you are certain to avoid complaints. "Codou"—that is the name to think of.

TWO WAYS of making money selling cigars

The First

Selling cheap goods with a long profit—
(You won't sell many)

The Second

Selling a good line with a reasonable profit—
(You'll sell lots)

The "second way" is the better—Sure profits and increasing trade.

If you decide on the "second way" you'll have to have our

"ANCHOR CIGAR"

A Very Popular Line!

"SIMCOE" Brand

have everywhere received the popular verdict of approval because they combine superfine quality with generous quantity.

Quality is assured by using only specially-selected hand-picked beans and the purest sauces and spices, and the green label tells your customers that SIMCOE TINS contain more beans than 3's flat sold at higher prices.

"Red Cross" Brand can be supplied instead of "Simcoe" Brand if desired.

Both Good Sellers

Our extensive advertising is constantly calling your customers' attention to the PURITY of KNOX GELATINE and suggesting many delicious desserts which can be made from it at small cost. Those who once try it prefer it to other gelatine because it makes two full quarts per package, and, it will pay you to induce as many customers as you can to try it, because it sells at 15 cents per package and pays you a generous profit. KNOX ACIDULATED GELATINE is a good thing to talk about because the extra envelope of concentrated lemon juice in each package saves your customers the bother and expense of preparing the natural fruit.

THE AVERAGE PERSON

Is not a good judge of groceries and knows it.

¶ Therefore, the particular buyer looks for certain "guide posts" to indicate the store upon which he can depend for quality when buying groceries.

¶ He may not know how to select good tea or coffee in bulk, for instance, but he knows he gets value when he buys Heinz Pickles; and is likely to be favorably influenced toward the grocer who sells them and other trade-marked goods of equal standing.

¶ He may not be able to argue for or against Benzoate of Soda, but he knows he prefers to take no chances with drugs in his food, and is likely to read the label on the kind of Ketchup the grocer recommends.

This Carton Answers The Only Objection

How many customers do you sell dates to? Probably not one out of 25. This though dates are delicious, healthful and generally liked.

Do you know why? Because dates in bulk cannot be made to look clean and sanitary. A bundle of dates from which some have been broken away looks pretty unappetizing.

When you sell Dromedary Golden Dates, you answer the only objection anybody can possibly have against dates. They are packed in cartons, are selected, clean and sanitary and will keep moist and fresh indefinitely.

We are advertising these goods to your customers. Help yourself to this trade.

It grows—and grows—and grows—does the demand for H.P. SAUCE

Be ready to meet it—be progressive—be wide awake. If you don't supply H.P., "the other fellow" will; probably he'll soon be supplying a good many other things, too, for a customer who wants H.P. means to have it, and when she's had H.P. once she's more than ever certain to take care that she gets it again.

The Trail of '98

THE MOST REALISTIC AND THRILLING CANADIAN SERIAL STORY EVER PUBLISHED

has been secured for Busy Man's Magazine, and commenced with the November Number. It is from the pen of

ROBERT W. SERVICE

The Canadian Kipling, of whose Books
"The Songs of a Sourdough" and "Ballads of a Cheechako," over 100,000 copies have been sold.

Service at one time was an obscure bank clerk in a remote corner of Canada. To-day his name is on the lips of seventy-five per cent. of the population of the Dominion, as a result of his two poems "Songs of a Sourdough" and "Ballads of a Cheechacko."

In The Trail of '98, Service drops the limitations of the poet for the time being, and tells of one of the romances of the rush to the Yukon in '98. With a bold, free pen, yet with all the skill of the poet, he unfolds his story, every line of which conveys to the reader that dramatic interest which is continually expected.

It is not a problem Novel. It has nothing to do with abstruse speculation. In its virility it seems primarily a man's book, yet it cannot fail to interest the woman who likes to hear of strong, brave men and fair women in a rugged land.

The Trail of '98 commenced with the November issue. For the coming winter nights the Busy Man's reader will have in this intensely interesting story a wonderful source of refreshing entertainment.

Have your subscription commence with the November Number. Mail $2 to-day and your name will be entered on our subscription list for one year.

Owing to the large stock we have on hand we will sell at our former low prices until the end of the month. We import these soaps from the celebrated Miallian & Fils Factory at Marseilles.

Dried Fruits

All Dried Fruits have considerably increased in value and the market has yet an upward tendency, but as we have purchased before the rise, we will sell you at very low prices until the end of this month. We have a full assortment in all varieties of Dried Fruits.

Teas

We will pay the freight on all purchases of 200 pounds of tea in cases (not tea in packages) to all stations in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

Fish

The time for the sale of fish is near; it is the proper time now to send in your orders for Codfish, trout, herrings, sardines, which we will sell at a reduction of 10 per cent. Our prices are interesting for the purchaser.

First arrived, first served.

We will sell at the prices advertised until the 1*st of February, as long as we have these goods in stock.*

Wholesale Groceries, Wines and Liquors

MONTREAL

Nineteen years of reliable service have held the leadership for "SALADA" Tea. Always—at all times—quality and value have been maintained. The year just closed recorded a gain of nearly 3,000,000 packages over 1909. This increase is as gratifying to us as to the 26,000 Grocers in Canada selling "SALADA."

Purchasing Power of Farm Products

Tables Showing How These Have Increased During Past 14 Years—A 300 Pound Hog Bought More Than Twice as Much Sugar in 1910 as It Did in 1896 —Buying Power of Other Products Greatly Enhanced — Why the Farmer is Prosperous.

In these days when we hear so much about high prices and see through the columns of the daily press that the farmers are getting but a small pittance of the final selling price of their produce, it will be exceedingly interesting to consider the present purchasing power of his products with those of 1896—fourteen years ago. For after all the real valde of an article is its exchange value and therefore the real worth of farm produce is measured by its value when placed in comparison with the value of staple articles which he desires to purchase.

Increase in Value of Farm Products.

In the smaller of the accompanying tables the average prices of farm products in March, 1910 and March, 1896 are given showing the increases the farmer has been receiving in both dollars and percentage. In one case this increase amounts to 340 per cent., and in only one instance does it fall below 50 per cent.; in 8 out of 14 cases it is above 100 per cent.

In comparing these increases in the amount of money received by the farmer for his products with the increases in cost of the goods he purchases from the retail merchant, it is easily seen that he is getting very much the best of the bargain and has no reason to complain.

For instance the average price of wheat in 1896 was a little bevond 63 cents per bushel; in 1910 the average price was $1.18.

In 1896 ten bushels of wheat bought 47 pounds of coffee but in 1910 ten bushels bought 134 pounds of coffee, so that any advance in the price of coffee in 1910 over that of 1896 is completely swamped by the greater hurchasing power of a bushel of wheat as well as a ton of hay, a steer, a hog or a dozen of eggs.

Sugar Behind in the Race.

Considering sugar, it will be observed that in 1896 the farmer could exchange 10 bushels of wheat for 132 pounds; but in 1910 his 10 bushels would purchase 249 pounds. Twenty bushels of potatoes in 1896 bought 77 pounds of sugar; in 1910 they bought 135 pounds. A ton of hay was equal in value to 238 pounds in the former year and 358 last year, making a difference of 220 pounds. Since sugar in March, 1896 was practically the same as in 1910, the farmer was considerably ahead last year.

Similar conclusions are arrived at when hogs are placed in the spotlight. The increase in the price of hogs between 1896 and 1910 was $6.71 per cwt. In 1896, a 300 lb. hog bought 228 pounds of rice; but in 1910 it had a purchasing power of 572 lbs. of rice. In 1896, thirty dozen of eggs would buy 77 lbs. of salt: in 1910 this was increased to 162 lbs.

From these tables it will therefore be seen that the farmer in 1910 was in a splendid position as compared with 1896. He secured a great deal more last year for his products and while in some cases he may have had to pay more for what he wanted yet there is a big difference in his favor.

If the retailer's selling prices have advanced in proportion to that of the prices of the farmer's products, we would have sugar, coffee, molasses, rice, salt, etc., from 50 to 100 per cent. higher than they are at present.

Counteracting Arguments.

All this information absorbed by the retailer will be of much benefit to him. He is frequently told by the farmer that his prices are so much higher than those existing 10 and 15 years ago; but the farmer is prone to forget the greater advances which have been marked up in his favor during the same period of time. If a 1200 lb. steer or a 300 lb. hog doubles its purchasing power in salt and sugar in 14 years, then half the steer or hog in 1910 would purchase the same amount of salt or sugar as the entire steer and hog would in 1896. It doesn't require a great deal of mental strain to solve that problem, the result of which further shows that the farmer is ahead by half a steer and half a hog so far as sugar and salt are concerned.

These facts go to prove for one thing the prosperity of the American farmer —and this is indeed very gratifying in view of the importance of the farmer to our physical and economic welfare—but it also emphasises the point that the middleman has not advanced his selling prices on staple articles beyond any undue limit taking into consideration the increased purchasing power of the farmer's products.

Laborer Earning More.

The same reasoning applies to the increase in the workingman's wage scale. While the laborer often raises objections to prices he has to pay now for

WHAT THE FARMER GETS FOR HIS PRODUCT.

The present high prices of some goods must therefore not be attributed to any one source. There is a general tendency to raise everything to a higher plane and in the elevation the farmer and laboring man are generally more greatly benefited than the retail merchant. His percentage of profit has remained practically the same, when the better service he renders, the quality of the goods he handles and the general increase in operating expenses are all taken into consideration.

Role of Delivery Man in Selling Goods

How He Can Utilize the Resources at His Command to Assist His Employer—Methods of Some Young Deliverers Who are Sprouting Into Salesmen—Personal Cleanliness, Courtesy, Temper and Tactfulness Play Important Parts.

Every person employed in a grocery store should aid in the great object of every business — that of "selling" goods and rendering such service that will bring continued trade. Most merchants do not pay as much attention as they should to one of their greatest assets along this line, and that is the delivery.

Some delivery men have realized their importance along this line, but without encouragement and instructions from their employer they have not brought the business that they should. But the delivery man should remember that he is one of the greatest factors in the establishement, and should make use of his opportunities to increase the sales and better the service of the store.

One of the best methods that he may use to assist his employer is by efficient delivery service. It brings the customers back again, while inadequate delivery may drive them away although the goods are of a high quality, the prices right and the service inside the store splendid. It must be realized that the delivery man is taking his employer's place in the part of the work he does, and that bad features of delivery service are not charged against the delivery man alone, but against the store.

Bring Back Broken Parcels.

Therefore carefulness should be one of the chief features of his work. He should see that each parcel is delivered in good condition to the customer, and if a parcel should be broken, it is a great deal better to return it to the store to have it repaired than deliver it in bad condition. There should be special baskets or boxes for carrying the parcels into the house. Goods are often damaged by the employe attempting to carry two large an armful of goods into the house at once.

Watch the Coal Oil Can.

Those who deliver coal oil to customers should look carefully after this article. It is surprising how easily goods may be damaged by oil. If it is even close to certain articles, such as butter, it will spoil their flavor. It is therefore necessary to have some plan of delivery that will make it impossible to even affect goods in the slightest way.

A great many merchants have done this by arranging a tin-lined box in which several coal oil cans may be placed. Another good method is to have a coal oil tank under the seat or underneath the vehicle, with the tap outside the box of the delivery wagon. In this way it is not even necessary to bring the cans to the store, thus saving the customers the trouble of carrying them, and removing the danger of oil cans being damaged in delivery.

Cleanliness is Important.

The delivery man should pay attention to his personal appearance, and cleanliness in delivery. It must be remembered that it is food that is being delivered and not hardware. This, along with a clean wagon or sleigh and a nicely groomed horse, give the people a good opinion of the store, while uncleanliness may lead them to believe that the goods are handled in a similar manner inside the store.

Such practices as abuse of the delivery horse, loud language or boisterous manners, all lead customers to form a bad opinion of the dealer who sends out such a man.

Some merchants are always desirous of employing young men for delivering instead of boys, or of taking great care in the selection of a boy to get one who will look after his employer's interests.

The delivery man must use his brains in his work. He must study the character of the different customers, so as to know just how to use them. Some customers to which he delivers might wish him to even come in and partake of a cup of tea or a light luncheon, while others might want him to leave as soon as he had made his delivery. He must study the matter, and know how to act in each case; he must always remember to be courteous, even-tempered and tactful in carrying out his duties.

The Loss of a Customer.

One merchant recently related to the writer how he lost a customer through an ill-tempered delivery man. The latter was delivering goods and had to make three trips from the rig to a certain house. There was both an inside and outside door, and on leaving the house the first time, he left the outside door open. The housewife promptly closed it, and the delivery man had considerable trouble in opening it on his second trip. He should have known enough to close it the second time, but he did not, and it was closed once more by the housewife.

On the third trip he had more trouble in opening the door than before, and by the time he reached the inside of the house his temper was in a fury, and he greatly astonished the woman by exclaiming: "If you don't leave that door open I'll break the —— thing." It is needless to say that the grocer lost this woman's trade, and that the delivery man promptly lost his job when the proprietor learned of his conduct.

The deliverer should be careful not to enter a house with muddy or dirty boots, and to place the parcels in the proper place. He should always be particular how he conducts himself also. An example of what not to do may explain: A delivery boy recently entered a house and seeing a fowl on the table, picked it up to examine it. The housewife did not like the idea of him placing his hands on it, and promptly told him so. While many a woman would have thought nothing of the occurrence, it must be remembered that all people are not alike. When a housewife is busy, the delivery man should not take up too much of her time.

Has Opportunity to Sell.

Besides the many important things that contribute indirectly to the increasing of sales, there is also a way in which the delivery man may do direct work by showing some real salesmanship in selling goods while delivering. Coming in contact with so many customers, he has a splendid chance to make more sales.

One of the chief methods is in getting orders for goods that the housewife has forgotten when she called at the store, and more especially when she gave her order by telephone. He should always be on the lookout for such orders and should not forget to introduce the subject to her frequently. Name the articles over to her whenever advisable, and she will quite often think of something else. Take one thing at a time and do it well. Say for instance, "How is your stock of currants and raisins to-day? We have just opened up a fresh shipment and they are of excellent quality."

Then there is a good chance of introducing new lines while delivering. Let the delivery man take some new line along with him when he goes out, but he should be sure that he knows its use and quality and be able to talk intelligently about it.

Probably the dealer has just received a new line of maple syrup. Let him have the delivery man place a can in a basket, and when delivering parcels he may say: "Here is a new brand of maple syrup that we have just received. It is made in the Lower Province and is of fine quality. Would you like to try a can?" In this way a dealer can often introduce new lines.

A Good Selling Idea.

One young man who has been delivering only a short time, but who will undoubtedly get along well, tells his experience of selling new lines: "Sometimes I take the article along with me and introduce it directly, but other times I do not. I go into a house with perhaps a new brand of meat sauce in the basket. When I have delivered the parcels, I casually mention how many bottles of this sauce we have sold, telling the housewife about its quality, but not mentioning anything about selling it to her. Very often she will tell me to send down a bottle. I never leave the one I have with me, as this would spoil the effect of my selling plan. I do this often to relieve the monotony to the customer of always trying to sell her when I call. I often tell one about articles that I have not with me, then when I call next time I will say: 'Here is the marmalade I was telling you about, Mrs. Customer. Would you like to try a jar?'"

With all these methods at hand neither employer or delivery man should forget this all important phase of present day merchandising. Let not the employer forget to encourage the delivery man in this line nor the delivery man neglect to bring all these methods into use to assist his employer.

A BRITISH COLUMBIA CHRISTMAS WINDOW

From Victoria, B. C., comes the above window. It was shown in the store of the West End Grocery Company, of which Wm. H. Jeffrey is the proprietor. The window was dressed by his clerk, J. Walton, who has been in Canada about a year, having come from England.

The rear and side shelves are covered with a rich, dark-red, crepe paper, and the floor and trays with a pale green. On the floor there are displayed currants, Sultana and Valencia raisins, and Jordan almonds, all with price tickets. The symmetry of the window attracts attention, the crackers, oranges, upright boxes of dried fruit, etc., being arranged with the greatest of care.

Mr. Walton's object was to dress a window which would not only be pleasing to the eye, but which would sell goods. His object was realized, he states.

Sees Trouble in Enforcing New Tea Regulations

A Chicago tea writer, commenting on the recent recommendation of the United States tea experts regarding the stamping of the words, "Artificially Colored" on all teas that are colored, says that "the idea is not a workable scheme; it will mean an injury to the trade and effect no good."

The experts recommended that this stamp be placed on all packages whether in chests or smaller denominations. When it is understood that almost all China green teas come in what is known as half and quarter chests, and seven-eighths of all Japan teas in retainers of 70 and 80 pounds, the purpose of the Agricultural Department cannot be served without great expense, he maintains. It would necessitate the placing of a deputy marshal in every store throughout the country, he says, whose duty it would be to see that the stamp "Artificially Colored" is put on every pound, half pound, etc., that is weighed out from the original retainer. This is the only method, in his opinion, by which the consumer can be informed of the presence of coloring.

There is talk of the vegetable growers sending delegations to Ottawa to protest against certain provisions of the Weights and Measures Act, which they claim are unjust to them. In the sale of vegetables by weight the vegetable men claim injustice is done to them by the fact that they are supposed to give sixty pounds weight to the bushel, whereas they claim some lines do not weigh this much to the bushel measure, such as onions and parsnips.

Why the Difference in Retailers' Success

The Successful Dealer Gives Quality and Good Service—He is Courteous to Customers and Secures Adequate and Reliable Employes—He Operates a Clean Store and Attends to Detail in Arrangement and Display.

By O. S. Johnston.

Many a grocer is puzzled when a customer leaves him and cannot imagine how he offended her or what was her reason for transferring the account.

After some thought, however, it suddenly dawns on him that there is not the same appearance about his store as others which are more patronized, and that he will probably lose some more valuable accounts unless he takes steps towards a remedy.

There are various reasons why customers continually deal with the one grocer. Quality in goods is always appreciated and the success of any mercantile concern depends to a great extent upon the merits of the goods handled.

Goods selling at a high price are not necessarily the best although some individuals are carried away by credulity and pay more money for an article which is not so good as another of a cheaper brand. Every grocer should aim at selecting those brands which are best and which he can sell at satisfactory prices with fair profits.

Give Superior Service.

Quality in service is also most desirable, as courtesy shown, not only to regular customers, but also to transients, creates a strong feeling of appreciation on their part. In fact, the clerk should remember that politeness hurts no one.

As much attention should be paid to telephone orders as if the customer were standing at the counter. Every grocer has his own method of dealing with such orders, but the most successful is the one who receives them with that air of gratitude which appeals to the individual ordering and which often secures the sale of some additional articles.

Follow Up the Markets.

What are the present conditions of the market? Every grocer and clerk should endeavor to post himself with information on the markets before starting his week's work as customers often like to know why vegetables, for instance, cost them more than previously. Readiness and ability to answer such questions convinces the customer that their grocer is quite reliable.

Were one to purchase a peck of potatoes in two or three different stores he would, perhaps, be surprised to find that each had a different taste, and that one was as sound as the other. The potatoes were similar in appearance but not in flavor. He would soon realize that the best class had been selected by a grocer who knew his business. Such ability to pick out the best grade of any commodity has frequently paved the way to success and should be cultivated, not only by the grocer, but also by his employes.

Disorder is a Handicap.

Untidiness is by no means an element of success. How often are goods delivered with their wrappers torn and otherwise tossed about? The housewife does not like this, nor does she frame a good opinion of the grocer, as she receives goods on different occasions in the same manner.

Articles carefully packed and delivered in a neat condition create a good impression and are the means of securing the grocer the goodwill of the customer.

The public are strong in their demands for clean and sanitary goods. They want clean goods from clean hands and it is only natural to associate a dirty store with an inferior class of goods. No man furnishing such goods can hope to have permanent success. No trade can be built upon them as they are too weak a foundation. Goods attractively displayed catch the eye of the customer and have more selling power than those arranged without system and having an untidy appearance. Every good grocer realizes this fact and has his fixtures as polished and as neat looking as possible.

He knows that highly-finished woodwork will pay him in the long run as it will make his stock more prominent and act as a silent salesman. Repairs should always be made in the store when needed and not be postponed till to-morrow. It is to the advantage of the grocer to have his general equipment always in first-class condition.

Good help is hard to get in many cases. Yet the progressive grocer will not be satisfied till he secures employes in whom he can place his entire confidence. An untidy and careless clerk drives away trade and is no acquisition to his employer.

The grocer when engaging clerks should always endeavor to secure the services of those who have had a sound elementary education; those who can read, write and spell correctly. The wages demanded may be a little higher but does it not pay to have men who can send out neat invoices in which there are no errors?

In short, let the smaller grocer remember that to-day there is more attention paid to the sanitary nature of foodstuffs than formerly, and that unless the dealer pays attention to detail in general he can hardly expect to have himself or his store reckoned as first-class in the public's estimation.

JUDGING THE FIELD FOR TRADE JOURNALS

By Carl H. Van Fulson, in Trade Journal Advertiser.

The question is asked, "Are there too many trade journals?"

The whole matter might be summed up by saying that there are too many poor ones and too few good ones.

The common superstition is that there is no publication that is not of some use both to the advertisers and readers. It is held that nobody ventures upon the unchartered sea of trade journalism without a feeling that there is a demand for the sort of publication he intends to issue. . .

But the impartial and wise outsider who has had occasion to look over the trade and technical papers in the various fields comes to the conclusion that some of these publications must make money in ways not appearing on the surface or else by dint of going increasingly into debt.

In the field of trade and technical journals it is a safe prediction that such publications will always exist. There can be no law to prevent their appearance, and even when advertisers compel publishers to show cause before they sign contracts, the ingenuity of tricky publishers will meet such requirements.

Not a few publications of the class to which I am now referring are house organs of the most puerile and useless sort, appealing only to an ignorance that is rare even in the districts far removed from the bustle of modern business life.

The advertiser's cry on all hands is that there are too many publications, that it is impossible for even a careful man to discrimiaate between the rival claims of periodicals apparently of about an equal grade.

There may be, and probably is, some truth in these protestations of advertisers, but the condition is not different in the industrial field from that in the field of general advertising. Without any difficulty one can name five general magazines that are as like as peas in their contents, appearance, nature of appeal, and probable class of circulation.

The daily press can always be drawn upon for an apt illustration in discussing trade journal conditions, for the trade and technical paper is more nearly allied to the newspaper than it is to the magazine. The best publications are those that approach most closely to the quality of a modern newspaper. They are prepared under conditions more nearly resembling newspaper requirements than magazine exigencies.

Here is perhaps a good question to ask yourself in considering the value of a trade paper—is it run wholly and exclusively as a business proposition by the man or company that owns it? If the answer be in the affirmative, why the paper deserves at least careful weighing before you characterize it as superfluous in the field, as one of those that come under the head of "too many."

Transferring White Space into Profit

Criticism of Some Grocery Advertisements Illustrating Poor and Effective Publicity—One Shows a Waste of Newspaper Space—An Ad. From an English Retail Dealer of an Unusual Character.

By A. H. McKay.

When a good business merchant says that he would just as quickly close his store door as to cease advertising, his judgment is worthy of consideration. As was recently reported in The Grocer, Hugh Malcolmson, a Chatham grocer, expressed these sentiments and his good judgment on trade problems is certainly reflected in the quality and quantity of his business.

Every dealer will agree that advertising in one or more of its many phases is absolutely necessary to getting business over and above the actual demand. He recognizes this fact when he places his sign, "John Brown, Grocer and Provision Dealer," over his door or on his window. He recognizes the power of advertising when he places his name on his delivery wagon or on his counter-check books, and when he uses an account or cash register, meat cutter or silent salesman; yet we often hear him say: "No, I don't believe in advertising." The fact is that he does believe in advertising but he doesn't know it.

There are those who are firm believers in newspaper advertising, and others who say they are not. In the latter case, if the truth were known, nine out of ten either never attempted it or their copy was such that it never even attracted attention, without even considering its power to sell.

Must Be Trade Getter.

Newspaper advertising that does not arouse a desire on the part of the prospective purchaser to purchase the article or articles advertised is not of much consequence. It must "draw" trade and not merely exist as an interesting conversation or as a simple announcement of classes of goods carried in stock.

Of the latter variety, the ad. of Stalker & Wells, Prince Rupert, B.C., is a splendid example. What chance would an ad. such as it have with that of McCullough & Co.'s which points out so explicitly that they supply quality goods and which describes six articles so attractively that they are bound to make an impression on the minds of consumers.

The first point of criticism against the former is the merciless waste of white space. While it is considered good advertising to clothe talks in a little white space so that they will stand out prominently and be attractive, yet there is a limit.

The next point is that practically all grocers handle groceries, provisions, fruits and vegetables and therefore the fact that they are advertised under the name of Stalker & Wells is no reason why anybody should go there for them. This ad. may "attract" attention because of the white space but it would not for a minute "hold" it, not taking into account the ability to "sell."

Some Appetising Talks.

On the other hand the brief introduction of the ad. of the McCullough Co., Stoughton, Sask., will attract and hold attention because it emphasises dependable groceries and low prices. The body of the ad. will certainly sell goods. The price quotations are a good feature apart from the pithy talks. Who would not want to buy honey after reading the little sales talk given?

One From Across the Ocean.

The advertisement sent in by W. Richardson, of Ashford, Kent, one of the readers of The Canadian Grocer in England, contains an especially interesting talk. It is rather difficult to judge such an ad. from the standpoint of good advertising in this country, since it is of such an unusual character.

This sort of ad. is used weekly by Mr. Richardson, the same copy never being used twice.

represents a copy of a large circular he issues weekly. Such an ad. is sure to get results if circulated among those consumers who are anxious to save as much as possible on their grocery purchases. Mr. Matthews, it will be seen, is also anxious to promote cash buying are lower than the regular prices. The item in reference to potatoes is of the variety that causes a housekeeper to investigate. Those words "dry, mealy" have a commanding effect. The same applies to honey and dates.

Mr. Matthews' first circulars were of a different character to this but they eventually evolved into a regular weekly news letter to customers and prospective purchasers. He says the results have justified the move.

Hop-picking time is Bloater time.

With the tinge of white-frost on the grass and the tiles there is a pleasure in the glow of the morning fire and the sizzling of a grid-cooked herring.

Drip, drip, splutter, splutter, as the fish dispenses its aroma and makes our breakfast hunger ravenous.

That the means to remove that hunger are near you and ready to hand is additional cause for satisfaction for the dash of cold water, I had written gold water, from the tap has flicked your blood into movement stung with the icy chill.

Yes, an autumn morning is a good thing, a sight of the fire a better thing, and A Bloater Breakfast the best of all.

Need I say that on the Fish Side of Bank Street you will find piles and rows of Bloaters and of Herring.

Bloaters to which the smell of the oak dust that this Thursday night they were smoked with, still clings, and the smoke from which has tinged them with its color of bronze.

To-day Friday we have them at 12 and 10 for 1s. When the fish get smaller we will have them at a lower figure, that is coming, but a big bloater is better—each one, big or little, has a head and just as many bones; therefore, the most economical is the large one.

Whilst I am writing Friday's display is being made up, framed on three sides with a layer of bright green parsley there is a pile of Brown Shrimps, many gallons of them.

The glass-covered ticket with its grey background has a big white 2d painted upon it, that those that run may read, perhaps that quotation is out of date now, it is unfashionable to run, we ride a bike or drive a motor-car.

Well, we will not quarrel, whichever it is, running, walking, biking, motoring, so long as the stop short is made outside 4 or 9 Bank-street we are content.

4 Bank-street is on the post office side of Bank-street, that is the Fish Store.

9 Bank-street is on the lawyer's side of Bank street, that is the Fruit Store.

Needless you say to particularize, but we do like our friends to make a beeline to us when they come to town, and when some one says to us, with a sort of wondering ignorance, "Where's Hallett's?" and we wonder at their ignorance of the well-known lawyers. Well, there may be some who ask, "Where's Richardson?" therefore, the explicitness. We say, in short, as the post office, when the address is dubious, "Try Bank-street."

Buffalo Dealer Praises Work of B.C. Association

Association work in Canada is believed by some to be more advanced than among the merchants of the United States. E. O. Mincer, a grocer of Buffalo, N. Y., has written an article upon this point holding up as an example the Vancouver (B. C.) Retail Grocers' Association, which he considers "one of the brightest and most enterprising of the great Northwestern associations."

"The Vancouver Association," he says, "maintains a rigid credit system. and insits that its members follow it. In fact the credit system, with the rating plan for consumers which goes with it, is one of the most valuable features of the association. Each member is supposed to obtain from the association cards which are to be used to make memoranda regarding customers wishing to obtain credit.

"Members turn in the names of their customers, good as well as bad, to the association. I think some of the United States grocers' associations could utilize some of their ideas with profit."

Some time ago The Grocer published the complete rules and regulations of the Vancouver association.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

The success of the past should be the greatest kind of an inducement for a merchant to put forth every effort possible for the future. Personal experience of this kind is of more value than following in the limelight of somebody else.

The merchant in a small town who takes advantage of his opportunities and keeps apace or a little ahead of the times is just as sure to be successful as the gentleman above referred to. Of course, success is only accomplished by work. A few rules to help towards it are: The Golden Rule. To be square in every deal. Wait on every customer quickly. Give the quantity or measure of what is asked for, and more. Advertise goods exactly what they are. Never approach a customer with a grouch on. A smile will nearly always sell goods. Behind all this must be energy and hard work.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

DECLINES THAT WERE EXPECTED.

No one who has been reading the Grocer during the past month will be at all surprised to learn of the two drops of 10 cents each per cwt. in sugar, one of which occurred last week just after this paper went to press and the second on Tuesday of this week.

In our issue of December 16, it was stated that the market, although at the time temporarily firm, was weak but that no decline was to be expected until the first or second week in January. This is exactly what has occurred. The reason a decline was not recorded sooner was because United States refineries had run short on raws and could not obtain required supplies from Cuba where they were plentiful until after the New Year.

These declines place standard granulated sugar at $4.40 on a Montreal basis, or 30 cents below the price ruling at this time last year. At no time during 1910 was sugar so cheap, the lowest prices being $4.70 in January and $4.60 in December. In 1909 the lowest price was $4.35 in January and March; during that year the quotations never got beyond $4.70. It is probably a significant fact that during the past two years sugar gradually strengthened from now until August and September with of course some occasional slumps.. The raw market is still weak, the estimated visible supply of raws being more than 300,000 tons in excess of the figures at a corresponding period in January 1910. The drop should serve to stimulate demand for a time at least.

BEGIN WITH A CLEAN SHEET.

Every effort should now be made to clear outstanding accounts off the books. The new year ought to be commenced with as little as possible owing the dealer and with a clean sheet so far as the dealer and his own creditors are concerned. A special effort in this regard would not only put more money in circulation but would give an added glow of health to the present satisfactory conditions of the trade.

The collection end of the business is undoubtedly one of the most essential. Where business is not conducted on a strictly cash basis, quite a formidable proportion of sales will be made on credit. The success of the business will depend largely then on the ability of the merchant to realize on his outstanding accounts.

Collecting, under ordinary circumstances, is not an easy matter. Few men display much readiness in meeting bills and the longer the account runs the harder becomes the settlement thereof. It is necessary then for a dealer to attend to collections promptly if he desires to get the best results. Collecting should never be "put off"; the persons owing accounts will do all the putting off that the business can stand. The successful merchant will never for a day lose sight of his account books, and will not permit himself to give up any particularly slow pay customers in despair believing that by persistent and unremitting effort the pocket of the recalcitrant debtor can always be reached in time. Collecting is not a pleasant task but it is so absolutely necessary that no dealer can afford to shirk it.

Lack of success in making collections is generally due to lack of system. Spurred on by the generally satisfactory condition of affairs during the past year, retail dealers would do well to plan out carefully a collecting system, and adhere to it rigidly.

MUCH STRENGTH IN PRUNE MARKET.

The keynote of the situation in prunes is the demand, is one opinion recently advanced. Continuing this writer says: "It is by no means impossible that before new prunes are available the market will be entirely bare. The stock in California parcelled out among the entire trade will be nothing. Nor will the stock on hand last very long if there is any demand.

"At the present season it is usual to have from 500 to 1,000 cars of prunes in California for the winter demand. Today there are less than 200. Original scarcity, and a heavy demand from abroad have reduced the stock to a point lower than for many years, and pushed prices, at least for small sizes higher than they have been in most dried fruit men's recollection. Those who usually have large stocks at this time find that their present holdings are largely confined to 30s. and 40s. Small sizes are prominent through their scarcity."

The writer concludes by saying that prunes are not indispensable, and people will stop eating them if the price gets beyond a certain point. It is well to remember, of course, that prunes are only one item in the dried fruit list which as a whole is featured by unusual strength.

GOOD SEASON FOR SYRUPS.

One item in the grocery list that dealers will be able to sell rather easily this season is table syrup. Many have already realized this, if the amount of orders coming into wholesalers is to be taken as significant.

There is, too, more than one reason combining to produce this result. Apples are scarce and dear; honey is fairly high and syrup is a good healthy food. It is sold in large quantities to lumber and construction camps in the north and its use is even spreading in the town and cities. Dealers have therefore several good talking points which, combined with the comparative cheapness of syrup, will be sure to make sales.

There has been a slight drop in syrup on the Winnipeg market, but as this commodity does not change in price very frequently the eastern market is not likely to be affected. Out in the west business in syrup is principally done on the car load plan so that a change of 5 cents a case is noticeable. In the east, however, business is carried on in cases and price changes seldom occur unless there is some special reason. These changes too, usually amount to about 25 cents per case when they do occur. The last change took place last year.

DEPENDING ON OTHERS.

It is well to remember that the successful man does not do all the work himself.

Most men who have succeeded, have been surrounded by able assistants. No dealer should be afraid of placing certain duties on his clerks for fear they will not be able to do it properly. Perhaps there are many things that they might do better than their employers.

If the merchant's advertising has not been up to the standard let him give some of his clerks a chance to write the copy. He might discover to his advantage to get them to suggest new ideas and to carry their ideas into use. If a dealer follows only his own ideas, he is apt to get into a rut.

PREVENTING LATE DELIVERIES.

The daily newspaper can be a great help at different times to the retailer and his staff. Especially is this the case around holiday times and on Saturday nights when so many people delay their shopping until the last minute.

A case in point comes from Owen Sound, Ont., where one of the papers circulating there took up the question of early shopping in a convincing manner which dealers say had its good results.

Referring to the matter the writer of the article said in part :

The employes of our business houses are as usual being besieged and burdened with an enormous amount of work on Saturday nights, especially is this so at this busy season of the year. Some shoppers never think it worth while to come down town early, and as a result, they order their goods at the last minute and of course wish them to be sent to the house. Consideration for others is never dreamed of, and the poor delivery boy who is out until one and two o'clock on Sunday mornings, is the only one who suffers.

This illustrates how inconsiderate the average person is when the convenience and comfort of some one else is in the balance. There is no sane reason to be advanced to show why the general public should put off their Saturday night purchasing till 10 and 11 o'clock. If the merchant makes the least error in his delivery or book-keeping, he is very soon confronted with it, but he himself, apparently has to submit with passive obedience to the whims of the people. And these same people will frequently send away from home for some article which they see is offered as a bargain at a few cents cheaper than their own dealer-such are the vagaries of human nature.

What is needed is an educational campaign among them and in this the service of the daily paper should be enlisted. Grocers in Owen Sound interviewed after the rush stated that while their holiday business exceeded that of last year, yet this trade was distributed throughout the entire time leaving the final Saturday night fairly quiet.

This illustrates that when the matter is presented fairly, the public or at least a portion of it will respond.

INCREASING THEIR EFFICIENCY.

References have frequently been made in this paper to the Institute of Certified Grocers which is becoming a popular movement in the Old Country. The more a clerk or dealer studies the goods in stock and the methods that have proven successful in selling goods above actual demand, the more valuable will be the clerk and the more successful the dealer.

Personality is a great and inalienable asset of the retail grocer of to-day. And a strong and attractive personality is based on quickened and deepened intelligence and a thorough understanding and skill in regard to the trade and all that pertains to it.

The purposes of the institute classes, and indeed of the whole policy of the institute, is to strengthen the personality of all those who come under its influence and is therefore a most worthy object.

RAISED STANDARD OF SALMON.

To secure the confidence of customers is of the greatest importance to successful salesmanship, and this can not be done by merely being honest, which in itself, is essential, but by proving to the customer that the goods a dealer or clerk is selling are thoroughly understood.

A clerk cannot learn this by merely looking at the boxes which contain the goods, or at the shelves on which they are carefully arranged, and in many cases not even to his employer. He needs to read carefully a trade paper, which supplies him from week to week with the information he requires.

The value of understanding the goods was well illustrated in a grocery recently, when a customer asked for a can of salmon. Different shapes and sizes, at different prices were placed on the counter. The customer asked the why and wherefore of the different shapes and different prices. The merchant was well up in his business, and explained why different shaped cans are used, and the different qualities of salmon.

The customer at once decided to take the best quality at the highest price, with the remark, that she always liked to buy from him because she found that he knew more about the goods than she did herself, and because she got better value than if she used her own judgment.

The great value of being able to talk intelligently about the goods a merchant handles is not sufficiently understood, nor appreciated. The success of a merchant depends more on this than on the sometimes foolish idea of cutting prices.

Good, intelligent service will stand the storm of most competition.

A BUSINESS MEN'S COURT.

An arbitration court for business men is proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of New York.

The feature of the plan is the establishment of a tribunal where business men who desire to be honest and who desire a fair arbitration of their differences can secure a prompt decision at a minimum expense. It is recognized that such a tribunal will not be available when either side is not desirous of being entirely fair and honest.

It was advanced at the January meeting of the Chamber and it is likely that it will be completed next month.

MUCH DEPENDS ON DELIVERY.

A retail grocers' association recently held a special night for the delivery men and boys and a special invitation was extended to them all. Short talks were given for their benefit.

The delivery man is an important factor, as the store's service, good or bad, quite largely depends upon him and it is he who sees the customer last. If the sugar and other articles get soaked down with kerosene en route to the customer it does not help the reputation of a store.

It is not uncommon to hear a woman say : "I like to trade up at So-and-So's because the goods reach here in good condition and that delivery boy is a real pleasant young man," or "I don't like So-and-So's store—they seem to employ a dirty, cheap set of delivery boys, not half as nice as they do over at Smith's."

WESTERN MERCHANTS INTERESTED.

Secretary Geo. Hyndman, Winnipeg, of the Western Retail Association, promises the support of the West in the merchants' case against the proposed Co-operative bills which have been introduced into the House of Commons. One of the bills has been brought forward by a western member of parliament so that the west is keenly interested.

Merchants all over Canada who consider it against Canadian principles to allow privileges to the few should be present at Ottawa on the occasion of the big deputation which will descend upon the capital in the near future.

Watch for the announcement of the date of the deputation and keep it open.

DEFINITION FOR SUCCESS.

Success is not measured by measurement or weight, nor is it always one size. It is as applicable and profitable to the small merchant as to the larger one. It is a fixed thing, yet it is elastic enough for all who have earned the right to its title.

Hardly no greater honor could be bestowed upon a man born of parents whom he never knew, and as a boy, taken in charge of by a man with a God-fearing heart, who bestowed his honorable name upon him. The future, however, was before the boy, but he at once began to dig for success, showing his appreciation to his benefactor by close application to the opportunities given and hard work. This young man is now the governor-elect of the commonwealth of Tennessee, and demonstrates the highest kind of success which is also possible in commercial lines.

Get the public into your confidence, so it will be unnecessary to hang up a big guarantee sign. If you have its confidence such a sign is unnecessary, because they know your goods are right before they buy, but if any mistake has been made it will be rectified promptly.

Looking Backward and Forward

By an Economist Whose Many Years of International Experience in Such Matters Makes His Words Authoritative—Political Revolutions in Europe, Two General Elections in England, the Death of the King, and the Strike in France Have Severely Tested the Strength of Existing Conditions—Canada's Future Becoming More and More Involved With International Factors.

By James Mavor, Professor of Political Economy at The University of Toronto.

1910-1911 Political Aspects.

The year which has just closed has witnessed many important political occurrences—the death of King Edward, the two general elections in England, both conducted under circumstances of unusual excitement, the revolution in Portugal and the establishment of a republic in that country, the industrio-political strike in France, the election in the United States, and the revolutionary disturbances in Mexico and in South America. Had the industrial or the financial situation in 1910 come, for any technical reason, into a position of unstable equilibrium, almost any one of these important events must have disturbed that equilibrium more or less seriously. They all passed without any significant disturbance. This fact alone seems to suggest that the lessons of the year 1907 have to some extent been learned in the United States, and that the financial recovery there from the debacle of that year is a real recovery. The year 1911 is not a year when any great periodical political disturbance normally occurs. It is possible also that any changes which are at all likely to take place in the constitution of Great Britain have already been discounted, so far as the money market is concerned. Other political events, or their influence, it is not possible to foresee.

The Financial Liquidation of the Crisis of 1907.

In the early months of 1907 a very large amount of 4 year notes was issued by the railway and other interests in the United States. The conversion of these notes into long term or into permanent securities, necessarily involved a considerable time. So long as there remained a large balance unprovided for, anxiety on this account was inevitable. One year ago, however, the best banking opinion in New York leaned to the view that provision had by that time been made for the bulk of the funds represented by the notes. The net amount outstanding at that time, though still large, had been very greatly reduced. Although it is not possible to state with accuracy what proportion of the original issues still remains to be dealt with, there is reason to believe that it is small, and that the actual carrying out of the conversion operations resulting in the retrieval of the notes issued in 1907, need not be attended by any serious consequences in the money market, although it must be accompanied by transferences of considerable amounts. So far as further concealed legacies from the period of crisis are concerned, it is difficult to believe that in the aggregate they could count for much.

Industry in Europe and in the United States.

During the past year there has been a considerable revival of trade in European countries. Last year's harvests were good, and both in Germany and in Great Britain the volume of business increased. In the latter country unemployment fell during the early part of the summer to a point only fractionally higher than the point which it reached in the record year for ten years previously, viz., 1900. In the United States there has been in certain centres on the other hand, a distinct falling off. So far as the iron and steel industry is concerned, it would appear that the domestic demand is not commensurate with the capacity for production, and that many works in Pittsburg, for example, have had to discharge workers in large numbers. The relatively high production cost of these great staples in the United States seems to be the most serious impediment to their exportation, excepting at a price which is not remunerative. There must, however, be taken into account the increasing miscellaneity of production in the United States and the wide area over which many industries are now spread, each producing centre finding its own general, though not invariable market; within a range whose requirements can be more or less readily estimated beforehand. There are certain signs which indicate that greater intelligence and foresight are being brought to bear upon the practical management of business enterprises in the United States, than might readily be observed a few years ago.

Elements of Uncertainty for the Year 1911.

So far as the United States are concerned the chief elements of uncertainty are the outcome and the effect of the settlement of the railway rate question now pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the outcome and effect of the forthcoming decisions of the Supreme Court in the Oil and Tobacco cases. In addition to these, there are the questions of the course of prices of the great staples and the probability of some form of tariff revision. There is also as an important factor the question as to how much further the United States will be able or will desire to continue its policy of hoarding gold with the consequent extreme absence of economy in the employment of it as a circulating medium.

In Europe the same question appears in a similar form, France and Russia have both been hoarding gold extensively, the first as a dealer in gold, and the second as an exporter desiring payment in that metal in order to establish its financial position. The operations of the first are of course determined by the state of the market; the operations of the second must reach a limit ere long. When the hoarding of gold is checked, the result, provided the production is maintained, must be the cheapening of the metal and the rise of prices of commodities.

Canada's Borrowings.

During the year 1910, Canada has continued to draw funds largely from Europe. These funds have been drawn, not only against government, municipal and corporation securities, but they have also been drawn to a very large extent by the increasing practice of private investors sending out deposits to Canadian banks with the object of investing the funds in this country. It is difficult to place a figure upon the aggregate of such remittances, but it finds its expression in the increased importation of goods. Canada cannot borrow or import capital without doing so in goods; and thus the so-called adverse balance of trade is quite easily accounted for. The limits of this borrowing may be yet far ahead. They must be conditioned, not merely by the amplitude of the natural resources of the country, but also by the increase of population and by the productivity of the people.

The Banking Situation.

The failure of a small bank in the closing days of the year, on the eve of the revision of the Bank Act, has inevitably created some anxiety and perplexity. It is extremely difficult, as the few past years have shown, to strike a happy medium between a system in which a few large banks should control the mechanism of commercial finance in an autocratic way and a system in which competition in banking among a large number of small banks should lead to unsound banking practice and ultimate insolvency. It is extremely doubtful whether any practicable system of inspection could have prevented the collapse of any one of the three banks which during recent years have come to grief. But it may be that some more definite relation between the Bankers' Association and the Treasury Department may be devised by means of which the latter, on report by the former would be bound to take action of an appropriate description, according to the circumstances of the case.

The present situation exposes all banks, no matter how soundly their business may be conducted, to the effects of a widespread disbelief in all banks—a disbelief that no doubt temporarily, but some times seriously, affects, specially the outskirts of, a community where a banking disaster has taken place. The subject is too delicate, too intricate, and too intimately connected with the external credit of the country, upon which further supplies of needed capital depends, to be thrown into the cauldron of popular discussion in parliament or out of it.

Crops and Business in Canada.

The statistics of these given elsewhere show that while the western crop was deficient, the deficiency was compensated for by the increased crop in Eastern Canada. This was a very fortunate circumstance for the country, because the moral effect of a deficient crop in the present stage of its development might under certain circumstances be very injurious. Industrially and commercially we come to be drawn, year by year, more and more, into the net work of international commerce and therefore we may expect to find that in the future we may suffer sympathetically with other countries in their crisis, to a greater extent than has been the case hitherto. It is important, therefore, that especially in the case of enterprises in which a speedy return to capital cannot be expected, banks and other financial houses should exercise great caution.

For reasons which need not be discussed here, prices—of land, especially—have been advancing rapidly and up till the present in many fields, there has been a high velocity of return ; but this process cannot in the nature of things continue uniformly at the same rate. When indiscreet advances are made they contribute to the rapidity of the advance, but they also contribute to the rapidity of the fall.

A System to Follow Up Business Standing

Must be Begun Just After Stock-taking Time—How it is Carried Out by One Country Merchant — He Follows up His Stock on Hand by Deducting Profits From his Sales—Watches His Liabilities Closely.

At this season of the year after the merchant has taken stock, it is a good time to prepare and carry into action new plans that will help the business to a sounder footing.

It is altogether likely that during stock-taking, a merchant has found some lines that are inclined to be stickers. This is a splendid time to start them selling. Perhaps all that is needed is a little salesmanship. Sometimes in the hustle of business there are some lines that have been forgotten. Many a merchant in his efforts to clear out what was becoming dead stock has created a demand that has meant increased business. Although this may occur only occasionally, still every merchant knows that it is well to keep the stock moving.

After finding out exactly the amount of one's stock, liabilities, etc., it will be well to put into action, some plan whereby he may tell at all times just how the business stands. These plans must be different to suit different businesses. For the small merchant who wishes to keep a record without too much bookkeeping connected with it, perhaps the following method related by a country town retailer might be useful:

Following Up Stock on Hand.

"Having ascertained the amount of stock on hand, I decided on a method by which I was able to keep a pretty accurate account of stock. Supposing that when I took stock on Jan. 1, it amounted to $3,000. During January I purchased $1,500 worth of goods. I sold $2,000 worth of goods, but this is the selling price, so as to reduce this to cost price, I deducted the amount of profit I thought was about correct—15 per cent. This made the cost price of goods sold $1,700, so that the stock on hand on Feb. 1st would be $2,800. Although this may not be exactly accurate as a dealer can not tell just exactly what the profit is, still it will be close enough to show him where he is at.

Keeps Track of Liabilities.

"At stock-taking time, I found I owed $1,300. During January I bought $1,500 worth of goods and paid $1,000 out, so that on Feb. 1 I owed $1,800.

"On Jan. 1 I had $2,000 on my books; I sold on credit during January a total of $500; I received on account $400, so on February 1, I have $2,100 on my books.

"Now on Feb. 1st I know how much stock I have on hand, how much I owe and how much I have out on credit.

"Accordingly I keep the record, during each month of the year, and find it comes out nearly correct at next stock-taking time."

The Time to Begin.

And so with any other plans which one may wish to work out to assist in his business system, this is the correct time of the year to begin. The merchant has now his business laid out before him in plain figures and not as an unknown quantity as it is at other times of the year, and as it is with merchants who never take stock.

THE IMPORTANCE OF HONESTY

By Geo. B. Cortelyou, formerly Secretary of the U. S. Treasury.

It seems to me that what the young man in business to-day needs to have emphasized is the importance of honesty, in its fullest and broadest significance.

If he possesses the power to see and to think clearly he will find that those who have achieved real and lasting success in business are men known for their scrupulous honesty and strict adherence to the highest standards of business conduct.

Of course we have, all too frequently, examples of men who have acquired wealth by methods in which the primary virtues seem to have played little or no part, whose natures have been hardened and whose souls have shriveled in the mad struggle ; who sit apart, solitary and alone, trusting no one and trusted by no one.

The young man in business must see to it that his success is not purchased at such fearful cost. He must keep his mind open to the influences that make for human progress and social betterment, and he must do all his work with thoroughness, for it is only then that work is well done.

If he will do these things, then the greater his material success the greater the benefit, in the largest sense, not only to himself, but to his country.

DEMISE OF A PRICE-CUTTER.

A San Francisco report says:—Guthrie, the price-cutter on 24th Street, has folded his tent and moved away. Nearly every well-known brand of soap he sold for 6 for 25c, even though some of them cost 4 1-3c a cake. He disturbed conditions for every retail grocer in his neighborhood, and they were all greatly pleased to learn of his business demise. He operated his business with himself and a boy, and at the price he sold his goods, there was only one end to his business existence. Some friend purchased his stock of goods. He has ignominiously closed his store and is no longer a thorn in the side of the legitimate retail grocers of that neighborhood who desire to make a living profit on the goods they self. The Markets—20 Cent Decline in Sugar

Wholesalers Do Not Know Exactly How to Regard the Sugar Market Now—Trade in general shows a Healthy State—Dried Fruits, Canned Goods and Tea are Still Prominent.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Declined 20c.
Dried Fruits—Position strong.
Tea—Firm.
Salmon—Firm.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—Trade in general has been good during the past week. Sugar as expected declined, dropping 20 cents per cwt. in all markets. At the present price, sugar is 30 cents lower than at a similar date last year, so that the year has been started with one of the chief staples at a moderate price. Those interested do not know how to regard the market just now. Many wholesalers believe that there will be a still further decline. At any rate they are not stocking up with any great quantity. As usual for this month, the sugar trade is quiet.

Dried fruits still maintain a strong position with reports of scarcity of some lines. Prunes, currants and raisins are all firm just now.

Tea prices continue to look stronger. Common tea being higher in price and the quality not so good, it will no doubt cause a better grade to be used. This should not increase the cost of living as the better teas are the cheapest in the end.

Salmon and canned goods in general are keeping strong. A fair demand and a scarcity of stocks make prices keep firm.

Sugar.—The expected break took place in the sugar market, a decline of 10 cents being made last week just after the paper had gone to press, with a further reduction of 10 cents on Tuesday of this week, bringing the price of extra granulated in bags down to $4.50. The decrease in price was caused by the arrival of new raws at a low price which naturally affected the refined product.

Some wholesalers are inclined to think that the bottom price has not been reached yet, although any further decline of any great extent cannot be expected. Most wholesalers are not stocking up, arguing that there is apt to be another reduction and at any rate there will be no increase.

Trade in sugar is quiet, the reduction in price having failed to stimulate the demand. This is always a quiet month for sugar, the consumption being small.

The total stock of Europe and America last week was 3,132,069 tons against 2,573,412 tons at the same time last year. The visible supply is 3,187,069 tons against 2,828,412 tons at a similar date last year.

Syrups and Molasses.—No change of prices has been noted here although there was a decline of 5c per case in syrups at Winnipeg this week. The 1910 sales were splendid and a good year is anticipated from the fact that apples and similar goods are high in price while syrups are lower than at this time last year. There is a little easier feeling in molasses but no change in price has taken place. Trade is steady.

The sales in starch for the first week of the year were exceedingly good, orders being numerous.

Dried Fruits.—There is a decided upward tendency in the dried fruit market and some jobbers are inclined to believe that by spring, prices will be higher. Already there have been advances in some lines. The demand for raisins has continued, although at this time of the year the consumption generally falls off, and as a result prices are decidedly firm. Currants are also in the same boat as raisins, reports from the primary market having had a bracing effect. Reports from Greece say that the currant stocks are inadequate for normal demand. A report from Montreal states that currants are in light supply there and recent arrivals have gone immediately into consumption, as they were badly needed.

Prunes are firm, supplies being scarce. Especially is this noticeable in 30 to 40 and 40 to 50 size, which have advanced from ½ to ½ cent per pound. Firmness is noted in other lines of dried fruits and one wholesaler said he believed that it would pay him to hold his present stock as no doubt prices would be higher but that he must supply his customers.

The trade in most lines of dried fruits is all that could be expected at this time of the year.

Nuts.—Trade in nuts is not brisk at the present time, retailers having seemed to drop this line immediately after the holiday. Prices are holding steady with peanuts particularly firm in the primary market. A large percentage of growers report a short crop and a careful estimate of the present crop of 1910 shows that the yield is about 71 per cent. of an average production. There has been an increased consumption of both almonds and walnuts in the last year.

Tea.—Tea still continues in its strong position and higher prices are expected by wholesalers. Low grade tea recently sold in the primary market at Calcutta at 17c. This was the highest price for it in 17 years. This was tea that was lower grade than most common teas used here. The latest news from Northern India confirms earlier reports of cold weather having set in, in several districts. It would therefore seem probable that the Indian crop will be smaller than last year. The imports of tea from Ceylon to United Kingdom for the first ten months of last year, show a decrease of 7 million pounds.

Although the crop from Ceylon was some 9 million pounds less than 1909, an increase in that from India of some 18 million pounds makes the total production of British grown tea about 9 millions more. Quality of tea, especially in lower grades, has shown a falling off. One jobber stated that he did not expect to see tea lower for at least eight months at any rate.

Coffee.—The coffee market still maintains its strong position with lower grades showing a little firmer standing. One wholesaler said that he expected this firmness to continue for at least six months.

It was stated that there were only 683,842 bags of coffee in New York last week and that it was in control of a few firms. The fact that Santos is offering the lower grades of coffee is regarded by some as a sign that the end of the crop is approaching.

Although some have held the opinion that the upward movement in coffee prices was due to "bull" tactics, still statistics tend to show that the rise has been brought about by natural causes.

One jobber said: "A fact that cannot be discounted is the shortage in the supply of coffee available and the poor prospects for the growing crop. As matters now stand it looks as if there can be no drop in the coffee market in the near future while there is a good chance for an advance in price."

Prices remain the same with a normal demand.

TORONTO.—Canned goods still occupy a prominent position in the market with a fairly active demand at the present time. A marked scarcity of stocks is noted among most lines. One wholesaler says he has a purchase of canned goods which has not been delivered yet and which he thinks the company have not on hand to deliver as they have asked him what he would take and cancel the order. Another jobber in speaking of the canned goods market said that he could sell his canned goods to other wholesalers for more than he is charging retailers, but that he was keeping stocks for his regular customers. There is also a firmness in salmon, humpbacks having been advanced to $1.35. One wholesaler thought that the situation might be relieved somewhat by retailers pushing the less called for lines. For instance, in canned vegetables, tomatoes, peas and corn are generally the lines asked for. Retailers by suggestion might sell more canned beans, carrots, etc., thus detracting attention from the lines which have become scarce and forced upward in price. Early June peas are now selling at $1.37½.

POINTERS—

Sugar—20c decrease.
Coffee—Strong.
Tea—Likely increase.

Montreal, Jan. 12.—The trade had scarcely done talking about the decline in sugar last week, when news of a further 10c drop was reported. Grocers who, as we suggested in recent issues, bought sparingly since the downward tendency was noted will feel pretty good. The reports from Europe about the large quantities of raw beet there and the incoming of the January Cuban crop, coupled with a general weakening in demand have been directly responsible for these changes.

Reports were going around here recently about a weakening in the coffee market but they have proved ungrounded as latest advices from New York show the market in a still stronger position than some weeks ago.

Business in general is brightening up and the trade is in a good mood.

Sugar.—The market has been active during the past week. Prices have been reduced 20c all round since last week's reports. The drop was anticipated by the retailers and a small stock was kept on hand. Wholesalers think that the prices are not likely to change again for some time.

Dried Fruits.—Business, locally, is somewhat quiet. Although there is little business being done the situation in California dried fruits is more interesting than it ever has been at the beginning of a new year.

Currants being a light supply are firm and quiet. Peaches which are relatively larger in supply than any of the other Coast dried fruits are greatly assisted by the scarcity and high price of dried apples, for which they are being and will be increasingly substituted. Consequently the tendency of prices is upward.

The market for apricots has a strong tone.

Rice and Tapioca.—There has been a sharp rise in the values of tapioca in the primary markets since the turn of the year. Prices of medium and hard pearl have advanced nearly ¼ of a cent per pound, and are now nearly as high as at any time during the last twelve months; this, however, has not as yet affected the local market.

The shipments from the Straits Settlements for the last year are less all round than for 1909, being:

To U. S.	7,885	8,535
To Gt. Britain	11,685	12 550
To Continent	6,975	7,740

Notwithstanding these reduced shipments there is no accumulation of stock in the East, in fact the production is visibly curtailed. Firmer prices are not expected for some time to come.

The demand for rice is fair, prices remaining firm.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Reduced.
Muscatel Raisins—Advanced ½c.
Dates—Advanced.
Syrup—Declined.
Coffee—Higher.

Winnipeg, Jan. 12.—The outstanding feature of the market this week is the fluctuation with the tendency toward higher prices. After the December rush it has been found that stocks were not only low in local centres, but that there was a shortage in crop centres. This does not apply to sugar and syrup, each of which has been reduced during the past few days.

The tendency of the general grocery market is toward high prices. The demand the world over is very great for all lines, and the increased population of Western Canada, and the large number of stores that are opening up, make it almost impossible for Western Canada importers to keep enough stock on hand. Word comes from crop centres that plantations are increasing the area of their crops with the particular Canadian market in view, and in future years so long as the crop conditions are favorable there should be a large enough quantity produced for reasonable quotations to continue.

The western grocery trade is in good condition notwithstanding the prices which prevail. Orders now and repeat are large and numerous. Merchants are keeping up their payments in an admirable manner, and the money market, at the beginning of this hopeful year, seems to be quite free.

Sugar.—All sugars have been reduced 20c. No word has been sent up here as to what the future indications are, but it seems scarcely possible that any lower prices will be quoted. However that was what was considered after the past 2 or 3 declines. Just now when the merchants are not heavily stocked with sugar, buying will be heavier than usual at the present quotations, which under ordinary conditions would tend to strengthen the market. It is rather unfortunate that the ordinary supply and demand does not more perfectly rule the sugar market. If this were so, however, there perhaps would be times when higher prices would be paid than at present.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—The fruit market is bare, and there is no mistake that prices are advancing. Prunes have been strong for some time, and although no new quotations are made higher prices than these are being paid in some centres. There is only one item in the following list which may be said to be plentiful, and this is peaches; the price prevailing on choice peaches is moderate, and the quality is excellent. Bulk dates, orange-peel, uncleaned currants and muscatel raisins have been advanced.

Black Teas

Teas have been advancing in price for some months back, and what looked like a high price a ccuple of months ago looks very cheap to-day. It has been a veritable boom in all kinds of Blacks, but it has been healthy, the fact is that the surplus stocks have been gradually reduced to a minimum and with an increasing demand for consumption from heretofore unlooked for quarters something had to give and there was only one way the market could go and it was up! up!! up!!! Now, then, we have something to say that will interest you. Away back when the prices were sneaking around on a much lower basis than now, when in fact the market was scraping on the bottom, we started in to buy and kept on buying, not only for present needs but also for future requirements---Result, we have now on hand magnificent values all through the list and we are enabled to offer our popular blends at the old prices. Now, then, any buyers who want to be placed on the tea basis of three months ago, communicate with us for samples of the following:—

Syrup and Molasses.—It would seem that buyers have had their way in reducing the market, at any rate their forecasts have been right. Prices have been reduced 5c and it is evident that the manufacturers are determined to send out all superfluous stocks in order that the market may come back to normal condition. At the following prices, it is believed that it will not be long for the stock to be limited to such an extent as to affect the price. There is no change in the molasses market; it is moving out in a satisfactory manner.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Jan. 12.—Merchants report a good business during the holiday season, with the usual after falling off. Prices remain fairly steady. The potato supply has been heavier during the past two weeks, though quotations have been maintained. If the weather continues mild, prices will not go up, as there is a good quantity on hand, but a drop in temperature will mean a jump. This would not be because the supply was imperilled, but simply that more might be made by those who are holding. Last spring, potatoes were thrown away, after very high prices had been exacted, and the outlook is that the supply at present is sufficient.

Wholesalers are of the opinion that bottom prices have been reached for hams and bacons and advance is looked for.

Prices are a little easier in apples, the supply being heavy. Oranges and lemons have been coming in liberally, and prices are lower than what they were at the same time last year. The market was so well supplied with Japanese oranges that thousands of boxes had to be sold below cost. Owing to rain in Japan during the ripening season, the keeping quality of the fruit was not so good. This stock has now been cleaned out.

Housekeepers are quite excited over a five cent drop in the price of the best of fresh eggs. They may now be retailed for 75 cents, as against 80 and 85 cents a couple of weeks ago. The jobbing price runs from five to ten cents lower, though there is little margin for the dealer. The owner of the hen knows the market and demands the last figure, and as the price is high, the retailer cannot always afford to add even a fair percentage.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Jan. 12.—The wholesale grocers closed the year with a good volume of business, and the prospects for the coming season are excellent. Just now the most of the firms are stock-taking, and as the Christmas rush is over, trade at the present time is a little dull. All the large industries throughout the Province are working full time, and have a good supply of orders on hand, and the general outlook is favorable.

Owing to the absence of snow the lumbering operations in various parts of the Province are practically at a standstill, and the demand for provisions for the lumber camps is lighter than usual. In consequence of this the molasses trade is dull. Fancy Barbadoes in barrels is quoted at 35 cents and choice Barbadoes at 32 cents.

Pork is getting back to the old price, having advanced $1 since last report and lard has advanced one cent per pound.

The receipts of eggs and butter are now small, and few fresh eggs are coming in. Case eggs range from 27 to 30 cents. Creamery butter is 28 to 29 cents, and large tubs of dairy 24 to 25 cents.

Reasons Why One Retailer Could Cut Down Prices

A story comes from an eastern Ontario town which serves to illustrate why some grocers are able to sell goods at a lower price than others. During the early months of 1910, a man moved into this particular town and opened a grocery store. His prices were considerably lower in many cases than those of the other merchants, one case being recalled where he was selling grapes during the summer at 20c per basket when the other merchants were paying 25c per basket wholestale.

These low prices were greatly wondered at by the other merchants but the reason lately came to light when his store was closed up by a wholesaler. It was found that he had paid for little of his goods, running as large a bill with one wholesale house as he could and then transferring his account to another house. In this way he got considerable goods from wholesalers, including Toronto houses. When his store was seized on, it was found to contain little goods he having transferred his stock into cash as much as possible. Needless to say the merchants in that town when questioned in regard to prices in the future, will reply that they "have to pay for their goods."

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

A Calgary Dealer's Method for Introducing a New Line of Goods—Displaying Dried Fruits to Get the Best Results—How a Demand Was Created for a Table Syrup—Using Tact in Discovering a Customer's Wants—Device For Showing Oranges and Other Fruits.

How a New Line is Introduced.

Calgary, Alta., Jan. 12.—"I have several methods of introducing a new article," said a local grocer. "In the first place when it is opened up I explain its use as carefully as I can to my clerks and give them information which will be of use to them in selling it. If the line is important enough, I have a window display of it. If it is not, I make a careful interior display combined with a short talk in my newspaper advertising about it.

"For the first week, I devote the article to a different clerk each day, thus stirring up some friendly rivalry among the selling staff to see which will sell the most during his day. I also tell my order clerks to introduce the aeticle to the customers. In this way I generally have a pretty good demand worked up in a few weeks."

Finds Work in Slack Times.

Winnipeg, Jan. 12.—"I always find something to do," said a local grocer recently when questioned as to how he put in his time during the dull season. "In the grocery business it is very seldom that there is no work for idle hands. Instead of standing around, complaining about bad business, I get to work and do something to improve the appearance of the store. Shelves have to be refixed often, counter displays re-arranged, show cases and show windows to dress and so many other things that enhance the appearance of the store and eventually bring more business, that I do not see how any merchant could say that business is so dull that he did not know how to put in the time."

Displaying Dried Fruit.

Saskatoon, Sask., Jan. 12.—That merchants might sell more dried fruits and make more money out of what they do sell if they would use proper methods in displaying is the opinion of a local dealer. A good idea, he claims, is to have a glass that will fit over the top of the dried fruit box. These may be transferred to the new boxes as they are opened by having a detachable holder.

With this the fruit will be kept in a splendid condition and will not dry out as when it is exposed to the air. The customers will also be impressed with the better methods employed to keep the fruit free from dust.

An Advocate of Calendars.

Elora, Ont., Jan. 12.—Many a merchant especially in the small towns and villages has often pondered on the question: "Does a yearly calendar pay?" George Maben of Elora, believes that they do, if judgment is used in the selection of calendars, so as to get something out of the ordinary and also to use them in such a manner as will increase trade. Mr. Maben says: "This year we got out a calendar, a little better than the average, as we always try to do. It was in the form of a handsomely embossed wall pocket, on the upper portion of which was placed a thermometer and a calendar below. Advertising was placed on the front of the pocket. It was of such a unique character that the local paper commented on it most favorably. As a result many people visited our store and with proper methods we have succeeded in securing many of them as regular customers."

A good point in regard to the calendar is the addition of the thermometer, thus extending its use over more than one year which with the name of the firm on the front of the wall pocket should do considerable advertising.

Created Demand for Table Syrup.

Brantford, Ont., Jan. 12.—A local dealer relates one method by which he created demand for table syrup as follows: "My table syrup trade had been confined almost altogether to my country customers. I began to wonder why the people in town did not use it when it was in such demand by the farmers. I had just received a new brand, somewhat clearer than the ordinary and I decided to see if I could not create a trade for it among my town customers. I made a display of it in a prominent part of my store, with a card telling of some of its merits. I also placed some of the syrup in glass jars about the display so that customers could see how clear it was. Some of these jars I gave to my order men, with some information that would help them to sell it. I soon noticed a big increase in the sales of this syrup among my town customers."

Discovering a Customer's Wants.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 12.—A local dealer recently said: "A merchant has to be careful in selling goods to a new customer or he is liable to spoil matters on the first sale. Now suppose a customer you do not know enters your store and asks you about bread flour. You have several grades ranging from $2.80 to $3.25 per cwt. Not knowing what grade of flour she has been using you would be very foolish to suggest any particular brand as she may have been using something altogether different and if she is used to a certain kind, she would not be very likely to make good bread out of an altogether different grade, although it might be No. 1 Manitoba.

"Suppose your customer has been using a flour in which the whole wheat is used. It would not be advisable to suggest No. 1 Manitoba, but to offer a little higher grade of whole wheat flour. This also applies to many other articles in the grocery store and by a little tactfulness one may find out what grade of goods a customer has been using and then offer something of similar quality."

A Circular and an Ad.

Orangeville, Ont., Jan. 12.—To promote his holiday trade, F. H. Arkell, East Broadway, issued a four-leaf circular calling attention to his Christmas stock. The first page was of an introductory character under the heading: "A Few Words Only, But to Your Interest."

The inside pages were devoted to describing the stock in brief, pithy phrases which might have been set up in a little more attractive form. The outside back cover referred to promptness in delivery, etc.

Mr. Arkell also ran the following novel advertisement'

OVER THE 'PHONE.

"Hello!"

"Hello!"

"Is that you, Mrs. Knowitall?"

"Yes."

"Well, say, have you done your Christmas shopping yet?"

"Yes."

"Orangeville?"

"Sure! Oh, that's the place to go. Well, say! Where can you do best there?"

"Oh, there is not much difference, only in Groceries. You certainly ought to go to Arkell's for them. He has the most up-to-date stock I have seen. His Raisins, Currants, Peels, Dates, and other necessaries for Christmas Baking are so new and fresh and clean. I would try him if I were you."

"Well, thank you very much! That's just where I'll go. I have heard that he had about the best stock in town and that his prices were very reasonable."

"That's Arkell, the East End Grocer!"

"Yes, alright! Ever so much obliged. Bye-bye!"

This style of advertisement is not frequently used and while it undoubtedly forms an interesting paragraph, yet it is a question whether the talk is convincing enough to not only hold the attention of the prospective customer but to cause her to purchase her groceries at this store.

A Device for Displaying Fruit.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Several grocers in Toronto are getting good results from a fruit and vegetable rack which besides being a great space saver, is an excellent method of displaying goods. It is an appliance which is nailed on to the original fruit boxes so that the fruit is held in, when the boxes are turned on their side. Slanting out from the mouth of the box, the display is made much better.

By this method any number of boxes may be placed horizontally one upon the other. One grocer in speaking about its merits said he would not be without this device, as it is both a floor space saver and a business getter.

Never Returned a Draft in 21 Years of Business Life

Shelburne, Ont., Jan. 12.—After 21 years in the grocery business, Mr. Fead, of Fead & Co., is retiring.

He began his business career with $400, and by conducting his store on a quality basis first of all, and price afterwards, he was able to build up a large trade. Mr. Fead is known in his district as the man in whose store a housewife could always get what she wanted so that his assortment was carefully selected. He made a careful study of his trade, and what he purchased he had the salesman's instinct to sell.

This dealer prides himself on the fact that in 21 years he never returned a draft. He was certain that if there was any error in it there would be no difficulty in having it adjusted. He had faith in his fellow man with whom he dealt.

Mr. Fead was a constant attendant at business. This will be readily noticed when it is asserted that during his business life as a merchant he took only 2½ holidays; he was ill 2½ days, thereby becoming an absentee from business for only 5 days in some 6,500.

His aim was to run as closely as possible to a cash trade and he found this not a difficult task.

A. R. Johnston, senior member of A. R. Johnston & Co., wholesale and retail grocers, Vancouver, B.C., died last week.

PASSES IT ALONG.

Manitoba Dealer Sees That His Clerks Get an Opportunity to Read The Grocer.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—I have appreciated very much your articles published on sago and tapioca, also the one on mace and nutmeg of the following week. I read The Grocer every week with interest and then pass it on to the assistants working with me as I believe that a knowledge of where the goods come from and how manufactured is a great help to a clerk. It helps him to have more confidence in himself when talking to a customer about the goods he is trying to sell and I believe a customer seeing you have a knowledge of your goods has more confidence in you and along with good service it creates business.

Lower Prices for Butter and Eggs

An Increase in Supplies Has Reduced the Price—There is Said to be Plenty of Butter in Cold Storage—An Improvement in Price of Both Dressed and Live Hogs — Poultry and Honey Market is Quiet.

The good things partaken of during the holiday season, has put a taste in the consumer's mouth that makes him loath to go back to the pork products again. Trade has been running along listlessly in general lines. There has been a fair supply of hogs lately and the price shows some improvement, especially in the Toronto market.

Fresh eggs are becoming more plentiful with the result that there has been a reduction in price. Supplies of butter are better and prices are a little easier. It has been stated that there are large supplies of butter in cold storage that have not yet been placed upon the market and that this will keep the price at a lower level.

Poultry has lost the prominence it displayed a few weeks ago and while prices remain unchanged, there is very littlr demand.

The market for honey continues quiet, the demand being only for small lots to fill actual reqdirements.

The market on the whole is in good condition and those interested expect it to show more briskness.

Provisions.—The market has been inclined to be a little quiet during the past week with a fair demand for all lines. The prices of hogs both live and dressed are a little higher. The price of live hogs at country points is now $7 to $7.10, an advance of 60c over the price of one month ago. There has been a fair quantity of hogs arriving lately. Butter.—The bottom has apparently dropped out of the butter market with a reduction in all lines from creamery prints to the tub article. Supplies now on hand are large and arrivals fairly plentiful. One dealer thought that butter might decrease still more, giving as his reason that there is a large quantity in cold storage that has not as yet been placed on the market. Still others say that the present reduction may bring a demand that will steady the price again.

Let This Sink in Deep

Twenty-five years ago we discovered the formula for the unbeatable confection—Chocolate "Bordo."

The most strenuous efforts of other manufacturers have not yet resulted in a discovery of anything nearly equal to it.

Chocolate "Bordo"

continues to occupy a position of completely isolated excellence.

It possesses a flavor that defies duplication. Every dealer who realizes the value of selling a chocolate with a flavor quite different to and inestimably more delicious than any other will ultimately handle Chocolate "Bordo."

Annual Staff Gatherings

The salesmen of the E. W. Gillett Co., gathered from all parts of Canada at the head office in Toronto last week. Several days were profitably spent in discussing various phases of salesmanship, trade and general advertising, experiences of the past year and plans for 1911. On Friday the selling staff presented Mr. Dobie, president of the company, with a handsome easy chair. The presentation was made by W. C. Murray, manager of the Montreal branch. In the evening the staff were entertained by the management at a theatre party.

Enthusiasm, goodfellowship and thorough-going enjoyment characterized the New Year Dinner of the Ontario branch of Red Rose Tea, at the Toronto office on Saturday night last. About fifty of the traveling, office and warehouse staffs and their wives sat down in the board room to an excellent repast furnished by Coles. Geo. H. Campbell, the manager, presided. T. H. Estabrooks was unable to get up from St. John, N.B., but sent a message of hearty greeting, and after the toast to the King, his health, proposed by N. W. Williams, was honored with great enthusiasm. Mr. Campbell in reply, gave an interesting sketch of the growth of the Red Rose Tea business. "The Tea Itself" was proposed by B. E. Miller, with an appropriate eulogium and was responded to by Messrs. Leech, E. E. Boyd, and Furness. To the toast to the travelers, proposed by W. S. B. Armstrong, all of those gentlemen replied with a rich flow of humor, jest and story. Other toasts were "The Accounting Staff" proposed by J. H. Boyd; "The Warehouse Staff," proposed by Frank Leech; "The Ladies," proposed by C. R. Furness and responded to by A. L. Curry. The front of the menu card bore a group picture of Mr. Estabrooks, Mr. Campbell, and the travelers. The inside pages were en- After the dinner there was a ball throwing contest for the ladies, with six prizes of Gold Label Red Rose Tea. The contest was highly amusing, first prize being won by Miss Florence Williams. The evening concluded with a short program of music and readings. A concluding hit was made by Norman Williams (son of N. W.) who put one over his dad by singing as an encore, "EverybodyWorks in this Firm but my old Man."

Laporte, Martin & Co., Limited, Montreal, are offering special bargains during January, in order to reduce their stock previous to stock-taking. Many standard articles are on their cut price list which every wise buyer will not fail to read carefully in this issue. In spite of the constant advance in the price of imported Castile soap, Laporte, Martin & Co., Limited, of Montreal, owing to their large stock in hand have not advanced their prices. You can by ordering early from this firm stock the best imported Castile soap, as the rise promises to stand.

Uses Cayenne Pepper to Rid Store of Rats

Editor The Canadian Grocer,—Enclosed I am sending $2 as renewal to your valuable paper. I consider I am benefited a great deal more than $2 by continuing reading it.

I noticed in last week's issue an article on the prevention of rats and mice among flour and meals, and I am able to suggest something which I have tried out and found to be a sure cure for this trouble. It is very simple and inexpensive so I thought it might be of interest to some of your readers.

In the first place I might say I was fortunate in knowing of this before I saw the item in The Canadian Grocer, for I believe I would have been tempted to try out the method which you published and which would be rather expensive. For a long time I was certainly pestered and annoyed patching up holes that had been eaten through bins and in sacks by mice and rats. Not only that, but I have had to exchange goods that had been delivered owing to the fact that mice had chewed holes in the packages and dirtied them.

The method I am going to give was told to me almost two years ago by an owner of a chopping mill. I tried it out and never since have I found a hole in a sack or any trace of mice or rats around the store. Here it is:

Sprinkle a little Cayenne pepper on the floor or shelvings where flour is kept. If this is done is done the four footed pests will not come back for the second sniff. You see, when rats and mice are traveling along the floor they keep their noses close to it and, therefore, are sure to take in a considerable quantity of the pepper.

The other grocer's idea was, no doubt, a good one, but I scarcely think that many would care to go to the expense he did unless they owned the building.

J. M. DONOVAN.

In a recent issue of The Grocer a trade note appeared to the effect that McLaurin & Dow, grocers, Fort William, Ont., were selling their business. This firm states that this is an error—that they have no thought of selling—and The Grocer gladly makes the correction. The present business was established in 1864.

THE OLD RELIABLE

The large demand for Royal Yeast Cakes throughout Canada has in the past led manufacturers in other lines of business to put on the market brands of yeast cakes they claim to be "just as good" as Royal Yeast, and some dealers have tried to substitute these unknown brands for Royal Yeast Cakes. All such attempts have proved to be failures.

Write us now about this new way of selling cereals

It's a way that means bigger sales at better profits. A way that enables you to give a customer more for her money, with quality guaranteed.

And it prevents you from losing by waste or deterioration.

In a nutshell, the proposition is this: Standard cereals, Flaked Wheat, Flaked Oats, Oatmeal, Graham Flour, etc., put up in dust-proof, moisture-proof paper bags, attractive in appearance, easy to handle, giving bigger weight for the money than any similar lines sold in advertised cartons. And there's a bigger profit for you than you can get with any cereals in advertised cartons on the market.

You can't afford to delay investigating this new idea in cereal-selling. If note paper is not handy, just tear out this ad. and mail it to us with your address. And do it now.

Advance in Flour Will Not Be a Surprise

Wheat Markets Have Grown Still Firmer, and Millers Expect Change in Flour Prices—Rolled Oats Market Looks Stronger, But There is no Change in Price—A Good Demand.

The firmness in the wheat market reported last week still continues, but no changes in flour prices have as yet been made; but millers say that if the upward tendency continues, they expect to see an advance in flour prices soon. The advance in wheat prices has been steady, increasing six cents within the last week; $1.04 is now being asked for the best northern Manitoba wheat by Toronto dealers.

A big wheat man in Winnipeg remarked this week: "I expect to see May wheat sell 10 cents higher before March." He based this opinion on the belief that the American crop of 620,000,000 bushels is overestimated, and on poorer conditions of winter wheat.

The American visible supply of wheat for the past week shows a decrease of 362,000 bushels over the preceding week. The wheat stock on Jan. 10, 1910, was 27,077,000 bushels, while the same date this year it was 43,920,000 bushels. The crop damage reports from Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri have been the cause of forcing wheat to its present firmness.

The acreage of winter wheat under crop in the United States this year is the largest ever seeded, but the condition is the lowest recorded on a similar date for a number of years. The total crop of wheat in Canada last year, according to revised reports, was 150,000,000 bushels. Reports from Argentina place the exportable surplus at 82,800,000 bushels or about 4,000,000 bushels under that of last year.

The same forces that have been at work on the wheat market have caused oats to go higher also.

The demand in both flour and cereals is quite satisfactory just now, and the situation may be summed up in that both wheat and oats are strong, and an advance probable in both flour and rolled oats, but millers expect flour will be affected first.

GETTING TOGETHER IN B. C.

Organization Work Meets With Success and Also Some Opposition.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 12.—Organization throughout the province under the auspices of the B. C. Retail Merchants' Association, has been fairly successful, the two places in the interior that did not come up to the mark being Rossland and Fernie. Those who made the trip from the coast were F. W. Welsh, James Foran and R. D. Dinning. A public meeting was held in Rossland, but the general feeling was against organization, the president of the Miners' Union urging this action. It is felt that Rossland will soon come into line.

There was nothing doing in Fernie, owing to the reason that the two largest stores, the Crow's Nest Trading Company and the Trites-Wood Company were not on a sufficiently friendly common foundation. Twelve other merchants in that city were willing to form an association, but naturally thought that the two big houses should lead the way.

At Nelson and Cranbrook, things were altogether different. At a public meeting held in the Board of Trade rooms, organization was effected, and nearly every merchant present expressed himself as to the benefit to be derived from the association. Officers of the Nelson Retail Merchants' Association are: President, J. R. Hunter; vice-president, J. A. Irving; secretary-treasurer, W. A. Horstead; directors, W. J. Meagher, W. H. Jones, Harry Amas, L. K. Larsen and A. S. Horswell.

There was a splendid turnout at Cranbrook. Mayor Fink giving able assistance. Officers of the Cranbrook Retailers' Association are: President, J. P. Fink; vice-president, R. E. Beattie; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Wilson; directors, A. C. Pie, G. W. Patmore, J. F. Campbell, A. Raworth, G. R. Leask.

Both these associations are in affiliation with the provincial association.

Merchants at Cedar Cottage, a suburb of Vancouver, have taken the first steps towards the formation of an association. The following officers were appointed: President, J. Peckham; vice-president, John J. Cashon; seccetary-treasurer, F. Avling; executive committee, J. L. Howling, J. Graham and J. Simpson.

Plans for Making Bright a Dull Season

A Number of Suggestions Given by a Practical Merchant in a Country Town Store—Pave the Way for a Good Fish Season From Now Until the End of Lent — Sell the Farmers Their Next Supply of Flour and Use Salesmanship to Move Out Nuts, Fruits and Fancy Goods Remnants.

January and February are inclined to be dull business months with many stores. People have been buying somewhat heavily during the holiday season and as a result the trade is affected to a certain extent during the following months. But the progressive merchant is beginning to realize that the first couple of months of the year should not be thus and that the only way to counteract this, is not to die with the trade. Accordingly as the trade becomes slacker, the enterprising merchant will increase his efforts to keep his sales on the increase.

Now most merchants will readily understand and agree with what has been said, but the really progressive man will not stop at this, but will begin at once to lay plans in his endeavor to keep the cash register clinking and the clerks hustling during the mid-winter season.

The merchant must first make up his mind that he will make business hum. He must get enthusiastic over the idea and over the different plans he is going to use to accomplish the desired object. He will take his clerks into his confidence, imparting his schemes to them and endeavoring to get them to suggest plans also. In this way the spirit of enthusiasm will take hold of the clerks and thus bring much better results.

Hustle After the Business.

Now the mid-winter season is a particularly good time for the merchant to extend his fish trade. The season is longer than usual this year, and by getting a good start, the good effect will be felt during the whole season. Prices are not high and by right methods, demand may easily be created. Of course if a merchant only stocks up in this line and sits down to wait for trade to come, the results will not likely be encouraging.

Fresh Fish Added to His Stock.

One merchant's experience, known by the writer, in opening a fish trade may be beneficial to others. He says: "In looking around for some new line to stimulate January sales, I decided to increase my stock of fish. Before I had been handling only salt and smoked fish. I added several lines of fresh fish, paid particular attention to displaying them and advertised in the local paper, stating the different kinds I carried and the price. I also issued a small circular which I sent out, calling attention to my fish advertisement, the result was a greatly increased fish trade.

"I also used a new plan in introducing other lines of fresh fish. In one case a lady called, looked over the fish stock but did not feel inclined to buy. I asked her if there was any particular kind of fish she wished that we did not have in stock. She said that her boarders liked "flounders," and the store at which she dealt had stopped handling them. I immediately assured her that I would get them for her and named the day I would have them in. She seemed very pleased with the way I had tried to supply her wants and she called around at the stipulated time. She not only bought flounders, but also purchased several other articles and our trade with her has been increasing ever since."

Good Time to Sell Flour.

Another item that the merchant may push to good advantage during the season is flour. Consumers as well as the merchants have somewhat forgotten this article during the holiday rush. Farmers also generally put in a stock of flour in the fall that lasts them a couple of months and their supply will be found to be growing small; it is, therefore, a good time to introduce the idea of laying in another two months' supply. The method of introducing this to the farmer must be worked out by the merchant himself as circumstances play a prominent part.

It must always be remembered that advertising in the local paper backed by proper salesmanship will do a great deal. When the farmer comes in to buy his weekly supply of tobacco, take advantage of his presence to introduce the flour question.

Do not allow your sale of nuts to dwindle just because the holiday season is over. Merchants must get over the idea that Christmas is the only season that a supply of nuts should be kept on hand.

We find many merchants when New Years is over, transfering what nuts they have left over to some back corner of the store, instead of keeping their stock up to the standard and endeavoring to increase the sales in that line. A fact that may be used to good advantage by the salesman inthe sale of nuts, is their value as a food.

Sells Remaining Fancy Goods.

One merchant in explaining his method of procedure to keep sales up to the average during the first months of the new year, says:

"I handle fancy goods and notions during the Christmas season, and always try to clear them out before the New Year. If I happen to have some left after New Year's Day, I always try some method of getting rid of them, even if I have to sell them below the orignal market price, as I would rather lose a little in profits than carry a dead stock over to another season.

"I then start in on nuts and fruits, keeping a good stock on hand, displaying them in my show windows and introducing them into my advertising in the local paper. I tell the clerks and order-boys to mention either nuts or fruits whenever making a sale, and find that my increased trade in these lines makes up for the natural general dullness in the business."

Talk Up Quality.

This is advice which most merchants can use to good advantage this year. Although nuts are a little dearer than other years, the quality is good, and this has more influence on a customer than price. Oranges, malaga grapes and other fruits are of good quality and are moderate in price.

With all these many things that the merchant may utilize, the mid-winter season should at least be as good as the average, instead of it being one of dullness as most merchants have regarded it in the past.

Commercial Men from the West on a Business Trip

Toronto, Jan. 12.—During the week 21 representatives of wholesale grocery houses in the Canadian West—from Kenora, Ont., to Fernie, B.C.—visited this city after exploring Ottawa and Montreal. In each city they were the guests of manufacturers whose goods they are handling throughout the prairie provinces.

The object of the trip east was to become more thoroughly acquainted with the sources of some of the lines they distribute and to meet the principals of the manufacturing firms. Some of them did some buying. The 21 represented an annual buying power of probably $30,000,000.

The commercial men were accompanied by Financial Editor Appleton of the Winnipeg Free Press. He states that trade in general in the west is in a splendid condition. While the drought certainly affected the grain production last year yet it has been a blessing in disguise since it will tend to make farmers better tillers of the soil and business men more careful in their every day dealings. This is the opinion of many shewd bankers in the West who claim that had this check not occurred, money would have been tossed about too freely and the present staple trade and financial situation would not have been a liklihood.

A "DOUBLE-YOKED" LOAF.

Western Ontario Magistrate Maintains It is All One.

St. Thomas, Ont., Jan. 12.—George R. Rinn, grocer and butcher, 51-53 St. Catharines street, was defendant in the latest of the several "bread cases," decided in Ontario courts. Police Magistrate Glenn handed out his judgment in an action in which Mr. Rinn was charged by W. J. Shaw, food inspector, with a violation of the Bread Sales Act. Mr. Rinn secures his supply from local bakers, and in this instance the loaf objected to by the inspector was divided by an impression in the centre, quite common since the new Act came into force, and indicating that the loaf had become "small bread." In contradiction to the recent judgment of Judge Morson at Toronto, the magistrate found that this loaf was not two separate loaves, "any more than a double-yoked egg was two eggs."

To Me It Isn't Bread Flour, nor Pastry Flour—But Just "Five Roses"

Oh, yes, quite an old hand at it.

I've been selling flour well on twenty years.

And this I know to be true.

That a woman is mighty impatient of poor quality in her raw materials, or quality that varies.

I've found it just as hard to hold trade once I had it as to get it when I hadn't.

There's Mrs. Broadacres again—one of those inventive housewives, always trying new stunts in the cooking line.

Marvellous cook, I'll admit.

But so particular!

When I was selling her whatever flour I had in stock, every time she came in I felt like dodging behind the counter.

Did once.

Now she has been doing her experimenting with FIVE ROSES for many moons.

And it's always "more of the same."

Says she has successfully achieved every recipe in her cook books—looking for new worlds to conquer.

There's versatility for you, in one and the same barrel.

It's all the same to FIVE ROSES—pastries, cakes, breadstuffs—open any page in the cookbook, it delivers the goods.

Bread flour, pastry flour—they mean nothing to me.

But FIVE ROSES does.

Whatever the women want to make or bake—FIVE ROSES, say I.

I stock none other—the word "flour" spells FIVE ROSES.

And I can look every customer square in the eye.

Which I couldn't do before.

Slight Lull in Fruit Trade Just Now

But Dealers are Looking Forward to a Good Year in Fruits —Oranges are Plentiful and Quality is Excellent — Potatoes are a Little Firmer in Price—Large Shipments of California Celery With Good Demand for it.

Like a calm after a storm, a slight lull may be expected in trade after any holiday season. Thus it is with fruits and vegetables at the present time; but this must not be taken to mean that trade is bad, but like every other business, fruit dealers like to start the year with a rush. There is a bright outlook for trade during the year, and wholesalers are busy in preparing plans that will bring them increased business. The supply of California oranges is large, which may be drawn from the fact that shipments from California amount to 150 cars, where only 40 or 50 cars were shipped at this time last year. With moderate prices and excellent quality, as the fruit is nicely colored and sweet, there should be a good demand.

Green Fruits.—Although trade at the present might be better, still there is a fair demand in most lines and those interested believe that trade will improve in the near future. There is a good supply of oranges on hand, which are of excellent quality for this time of the year, prices remaining steady. Lemons are a little easier but 300's remain firm, the demand for this size being large. There is also a slightly easier feeling in cranberries just now.

Vegetables.—The demand in vegetables is fair with trade distributed pretty well between the different lines. There is a plentiful supply of California celery on hand with good sales for this line. Under the heavy demand, there has been an increase in the price of yellow onions. The prediction some time ago of higher prices for potatoes will no doubt be realized, as one firm are now asking $1 per bag. One dealer stated that he expected them to go even above this figure as the supply later on will likely be scarce, while others believe that there are enough potatoes in the country to supply the demand. Other dealers were not prepared to express any opinion on the market at all, so that is how the situation stands.

The tariff on beans shipped into the United States now is 45 cents a bushel and only 25 cents when shipped into Canada. Canadian growers, it is said, would be satisfied to see the duty abolished altogether. Failing that, they want it 45 cents a bushel both ways. During the past five years, it is said, three bushels of beans have been exported to the United States for every two sent into Canada.

SAYINGS TO PONDER OVER.

Productions of the Mind of a Grocery Trade Philosopher.

A man who does not half-try usually only draws one-half salary.

Ask for suggestions from your clerk at times. Often they are in a position to see the necessity of a change.

When you see a trade abuse in your town call on your fellow grocer and talk it over with him. He may help to stop it.

The expense of doing business is large and growing larger each day. Cut prices will not assist in paying the expenses.

The clerk who knows more than the employer about the business should impart some of the information. It will be acceptable and if there is a good reason the suggestion may be adopted.

If you are only engaged in the grocery business temporarily, you will not make a success of it. Put all your energy into it if you are to succeed.

If you solicit a great deal of your trade, remember it is costing you money to do so, and you can't afford to offer returns.

The only way to secure friends is to be one.

Cheer up! The fly in the soup doesn't like it a bit better than you do.

John Topp says: "A man's days always tell the secrets of his nights."

A polite clerk will attract customers and the grouchy one will lose them fast.

Be a gentleman at all times, even if the customer says "I will pay that bill when I get ready."

A modified tone of voice is always best in a grocery store. If yours is harsh, cultivate it.

An employe should not be allowed to turn down a customer who has a complaint. That's the employer's duty.

"Father," asked the grocer's little boy, "what are trade winds?"

"Just wait, Lester," replied the merchant. "There'll be a drummer in here pretty soon trying to sell me something I ain't got no use for—and then you'll find out."

Trade in Fish Has Opened Up Well

Shows That Retailers are Starting to Develop Fish Trade Early in Season—Report from the Coast Shows a Better Supply of Fresh Fish—Finnan Haddie is Again Offered—Prices on Atlantic Coast Show a Little Stronger Feeling.

The new year demand for fish has opened up well and points to a successful season in this line. Reports from the coast show an upward tendency in price although there has been a better supply of fresh fish, the arrival of both cod and haddock being fairly large. Finnan haddie, the supply of which was short for some time, is being offered again.

The mackerel season was a disappointment, being the poorest on record. A report from the coast shows a decrease in 1910 in receipts of salt cod, fresh cod, halibut and fresh mackerel over 1909. With the benefit enjoyed by the trade in that the climate of the country is of a character that allows frozen fish to be kept at small expense, the outlook for future trade is bright.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—Fresh fish is in better supply this week than for some time past. There have been fairly large arrivals of cod and haddock, and smelts are in good supply. The receipts of lobsters here, are small, but heavy shipments continue to be made to the Boston market, where prices are good and the demand excellent. The increased receipts of fresh fish have enabled the packers to place some finnan haddies on the market, stocks of which had all been cleaned up. There are few salt mackerel offering and the local market is bare of fresh halibut. Fresh frozen herring are offering in fairly good supply.

There is a better foreign demand for cured and pickled fish, and fairly large shipments are being made. Codfish continues high and in good demand.

As predicted some time ago prices have advanced. The choicest shore cod are now quoted at $7.75 to $8 ; medium are selling at $7 to $7.25, and small at $6.50 to $6.75. Large bank cod are $6.75. These prices are from store. Quotations ex-vessel are slightly lower. The best haddock are selling at $5.25 to $5.50 ; Lake at $4.75 to $5, and Pollock, $4.50. The choicest Cape Breton herring are quoted at $4.75 to $5, and Newfoundland at $3.50. No. 1 mackerel are selling at $20, and No. 2 at $18. The prices quoted for dry fish are the highest in many years..

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—Trade in the fish market after a somewhat quiet period following the holiday, has opened up well again with a good demand. This shows that retailers are starting in to develop their fish trade early in the year and the good effect will no doubt be felt in increased demand during the whole season. There is a particularly good trade in sea fish of all kinds. There are no shrimps to be had at all. Prices remain about the same.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

St. John's.—Owing to the high prices offered for codfish in Canada and United States, it is expected that all the fishing fleets that prosecute the banks fishing on the South-west coast will start for the fishing grounds earlier this year than heretofore. Already crews are being looked for and high wages are being offered. It is expected that most of the vessels will be there before March 1.

About a dozen cargoes in sailing vessels and 1 cargo by steamer have left Newfoundland the last 20 days for foreign markets with codfish in bulk. There has also been a large shipment in drums and casks. All cleared from St. John's.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—The market has not yet got over the weakening effect of the holiday trade, but as the time goes on the demand should improve.

This month and the coming one is the period in the year when the biggest sales of frozen fish are expected. Up to now the weather has been favorable, and if the cold weather keeps up until the first week in March there will be a shortage in many lines, particularly halibut, salmon, mackerel, and whitefish, of which the visible supply is limited.

In the oickle, prepared, and salt lines the supply is not large, and the prices are likely to maintain as they are now. Some days ago it was anticipated that green cod and salt herring would advance but this kind of fish is mostly sold after the cold weather has gone, which means two months from now, so the market is not eager to buy. There is a good supply of smoked fish; prices are low. Bulk and shell oysters are also in less demand, and prices low.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Vancouver.—Halibut is a scarce article these days. One vessel got in at the first of last week with 9,000 pounds, and another several days later with 35,000 pounds. The former was out 22 days and the latter 31 days, which are rather long trips. The ordinary run in good times is about 14 days with a catch of anything over 100,000 pounds. It is expected that low catches will prevail for two or three months at least. Prices remain the same. In frozen goods, the demand is much greater than the supply. Prices in these lines are without change. Every effort is being made to get fish, but still there is not enough to supply the market. The first large shipment of frozen fish was brought down last week from the fishing station at Pacofi, Queen Charlotte Islands.

Brazil Nuts, Their Growth and Vrlue

Thee Averages 100 Feet in Height — The Nuts as We Get Them are Originally Contained in a Hard Spherical Shell—

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I appreciate very much your descriptive articles on nutmegs, mace, sago and tapioca, and also your willingness to answer such questions.

Will you kindly tell me something about the source of Brazil nuts; how they grow, how they are gathered and their value as a food?

GROCERY CLERK.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Jan. 11, 1911.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—The "castanheiro" is the Spanish name of the tree which produces what the grocer knows as Brazil nuts. It averages 100 feet in height, is branchless for some forty feet above the ground, and bears, for its size, but little foliages. The rough shelled nuts as we know them are originally contained in a spherical shell, thick and hard, and usually about seven inches in diameter, attached to the branch by a short stem which withers gradually as the fruit ripens. Opposite the stem is the "tampa" or lid, a provision of nature which rather suggests human agency. This lid usually, but not always, comes away when the shell falls, and sometimes while it still hangs on the tree, in which case the ten to twenty nuts as they come to us, so neatly packed in it are scattered for some distance.

Danger in Gathering Nuts.

In the Amazon basin in South America, exists large tracts of land covered so thickly with these trees that there is an element of danger in the collection of the nuts, as may be realized by any one who, standing in a "castanhal," hears the heavy shells crash through the boughs and branches and reach the soft earth with a thud and an occasional sharp report as the lid burst off. The nuts are sold to buyers by auction.

In transport care is necessary to keep the nut cargo in good condition. When the Brazil nuts are placed on sale by grocers they are dry and oily and would hardly appeal to the natives who know them as they come from the tree, crisp and milky.

Should be Used the Year Round.

The consumption of nuts is not what it should be. Some claim that the price is too high and the only reason for this seems to be that production has not kept pace with the demand. Christmas and New Years always give a decided impetus to the trade but nuts possess a dietetic value which recommends their use the whole year round. Taking Brazil nuts for example, in the two Brazilian states, Para and Amazonas, the collection of the nuts is considered a trifling affair and indeed it is hardly taken seriously when rubber is bringing a good price. More attention is paid the work however when the market registers a slight decline in the rubber column.

Items Done in Brief for Busy Dealers

Retailers' Inspection Committee Examines All New Goods—A Retailer Who Never Institutes a Special Sale—Get Suggestions From Clerks—Merchant Sold at Almost Cost and Failed—Names of Wholesalers Who Sold to Him Being Collected.

The grocers of Kansas City, Mo., have formed an ice plant of their own under the name of the Grocers' Ice and Storage Co.

Seedless oranges are now extensively grown in Bahia, Brazil, South America, but the cultivation of them in other places has not been entirely successful.

Salesmanship involves shrewd mind-reading it involves tactful mind-reading; it involves working along the lines of least mind-resistance. Salesmanship is not so much a matter of formula as of discretion.

San Francisco Retail Grocers' Association has an inspection committee which examines all new goods placed on the market from the points of profits, purity of the goods, and financial stability of the manufacturer. Those favorably considered by the committee are approved and recommended to the association.

"We have never had a special sale," said a retail grocer recently in reviewing his business, for I do not think it a good policy. Some of my neighbors buy heavily, become interested in other businesses, need money, cut prices and have special bargain sales to secure ready cash. That is their way but it is not mine. Price-cutting is unnecessary and is not an evidence of the best kind of grocer."

A large Ontario departmental store employs thousands of employes and they are all co-operating to a certain extent to improve the store management, or business. The office asks for suggestions from the clerks and offers rewards for them if they are found to be practical. Thus all the clerks are working for the house. Some such method should be employed even by the smallest retailer.

An individual named Weger in San Francisco is one of those who evidently thought he could sell goods at cost for an unlimited time and still pay his expenses. A price-cutter he was and after a short flight in business he turned his affairs over to the Board of Trade and disappeared. A list of the wholesalers who supplied him will be prepared in order that the retail trade may know who their real friends are. The Grocers' Advocate published in that city says there are but few grocers of that ilk left and the sooner the remaining few disappear, the better will it be for the honest retailer who pays 100 cents on the dollar for the goods he sells to his trade.

The Vineland Canning Co., Vineland, Ont., has been granted an Ontario charter. Among the provisional directors are C. and W. Fretz, Vineland, and W. G. Lumbers, Toronto.

The Co-operative Trading Co., Port Arthur, Ont., has been incorporated under a provincial charter. The provisional directors include two editors, four carpenters, and a merchant.

The tradesman had rendered his bill, waited a month and then wrote: "Please sir, I want my bill."

Back came the bill, with these words: "Certainly; here it is."

The bill was returned, and in a month the tradesman again wrote: "Kindly send me the amount of my bill."

And the answer came, promptly and politely: Certainly; it is $104.26."

The third month the tradesman again wrote: "Will you send me a check for the amount of my bill?"

The answer came, with a blank unsigned check: "Certainly; here is the check. I have kept the amount of your bill."

The fourth month the tradesman wrote: "I want my bill paid."

And the answer came back: "So do I."

Then the tradesman gave it up.

De Slowpay—Say, what do you mean by sending me a statement of my account a week before the first of the month?

De Grocer—I thought it would be a good idea to get mine in early in order to avoid the rush.

GROCERY FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—An up-to-date grocery business in one of the best manufacturing towns in Western Ontario. Box 371, CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADDING TYPEWRITERS write, add or subtract in one operation. Elliott-Fisher, Ltd., Room 314 Stair Building, Toronto.

ACCURATE COST KEEPING IS EASY If you have a Dey Cost Keeper. It automatically records actual time spent on each operation down to the decimal fraction of an hour. Several operations of jobs can be recorded on one card. For small firms we recommend this as an excellent combination—employees' time register and cost keeper. Whether you employ a few or hundreds of hands we can supply you with a machine suited to your requirements. Write for catalog. International Time Recording Company of Canada, Limited. Office and factory, 29 Alice Street, Toronto.

DURING 1910 the MONARCH displaced hundreds of Typewriters of all makes. In 1911 we anticipate a still greater demand. We have cut down the allowance on these second-hand machines and consequently can sell them cheaper to you. They are carefully rebuilt and are guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money back. If you want a good, strong, clean working Typewriter, at a mere fraction of the original cost, write us for catalogue. THE MONARCH TYPEWRITER CO., Ltd., 46 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont.

BUCKWHEAT Flour guaranteed pure and unsurpassed by any mill in the Province. T. H. Squire, Queensboro, Ont., solicits your orders.

COPELAND-CHATTERSON SYSTEMS — Short, simple. Adapted to all classes of business. Copeland-Chatterson-Crain, Ltd., Toronto and Ottawa (tf)

COUNTER CHECK BOOKS—Especially made for the grocery trade. Not made by a trust. Send us samples of what you are using, we'll send you prices that will interest you. Our Holder, with patent carbon attachment has no equal on the market. Supplies for Binders and Monthly Account Systems. Business Systems Limited, Manufacturing Stationers, Toronto

COUNTER CHECK BOOKS—Write us to-day for samples. We are manufacturers of the famous Surety Non-Smut duplicating and triplicating Counter Check Books, and single Carbon Pads in all varieties. Dominion Register Co., Ltd., Toronto.

A BOOK-KEEPING STAFF IN ITSELF—DOING the work with machine-precision and accuracy, the National Cash Register. Write for demonstration literature. The National Cash Register Co., 285 Yonge St., Toronto.

OUR NEW MODEL is the handiest for the grocer, operated instantly, never gets out of order. Send for complete sample and best prices. The Ontario Office Specialties Co., Toronto.

DOUBLE your floor space. An Otis-Fensom hand-power elevator will double your floor space, enable you to use that upper floor either as stock room or as extra selling space, at the same time increasing space on your ground floor. Costs only $70. Write for catalogue "B." The Otis-Fensom Elevator Co., Traders Bank Building, Toronto. (tf)

MISCELLANEOUS.

EGRY BUSINESS SYSTEMS are devised to suit every department of every business. They are labor and time savers. Produce results up to the requirements of merchants and manufacturers. Inquire from our nearest office. Egry Register Co., Dayton, Ohio; 123 Bay St., Toronto; 258½ Portage Ave., Winnipeg; 308 Richards St., Vancouver.

FIRE INSURANCE. INSURE IN THE HARTFORD. Agencies everywhere in Canada.

GET THE BUSINESS—INCREASE YOUR SALES. Use Multigraph Typewritten Letters. The Multigraph does absolutely every form of printing. Saves you 25% to 75% of your printing bill. Multigraph your Office Forms; Letter-heads; Circular Letters. Write us. American Multigraph Sales Co., Ltd., 129 Bay St., Toronto. (tf)

IF YOU have been afflicted with one of those fountain pens that won't write when you want it to, or leaks when you don't want it to, give it away to one of your poor relations and buy a Moore Non-Leakable Fountain Pen and you will be happy. Consult your stationer. W. J. Gage & Co., Toronto, sole agents for Canada.

INDISPENSABLE in office, store, home — Canadian Almanac, 1911 — a National Directory. Complete classified information on every subject of Dominion interest. Full postage, customs, banking, insurance, legal, educational, newspaper, army, clerical, governmental, particulars of leading institutions and societies. Paper cover, 60c.; cloth, leather back, 75c. TECHNICAL BOOKS.

CANADIAN MACHINERY AND MANUFACTURING NEWS, $1 per year. Every manufacturer using power should receive this publication regularly, and also see that it is placed in the hands of his engineer or superintendent. Every issue is full of practical articles, well calculated to suggest economies in the operation of a plant. Condensed advertisements for "Machinery Wanted" inserted free for subscribers to the GROCER. "Machinery for Sale" advertisements one cent per word each insertion. Sample copy on request. CANADIAN MACHINERY, 143-149 University Ave., Toronto.

SALES PLANS—This book is a collection of 333 successful plans that have been used by retail merchants to get more business. These include Special Sales, Getting Holiday Business, Co-operative Advertising, Money-Making Ideas, Contests, etc. Price $2.50, postpaid. MacLean Publishing Co., Technical Book Dept., 143-149 University Ave., Toronto.

PERIODICAL DEPT.

THE BUSY MAN'S MAGAZINE is the most popular periodical of its kind. Why? Because each issue contains a strong list of original articles of interest to every Canadian. It also reproduces the most timely, instructive and interesting articles appearing in the other magazines and periodicals of the month. The cream of the world's periodical press is too valuable to overlook. BUSY MAN'S is on sale at all news-stands. Better still, send $2 for one year's subscription. Mail it to-day. The Busy Man's Magazine, Toronto.

When writing advertisers kindly mention having seen the advertisement in this paper.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

J. H. Wethey, Limited
ST. CATHARINES, - ONTARIO

A United States Manufacturer spending $1,000,000 a year on Advertising : : : : : : :

recently placed an order with The Canadian Grocer amounting to about $500—the first order he ever gave to a trade paper.

This manufacturer said:—"I am convinced that the Canadian dealer is different."

He found the majority of grocers in Canada to be men of independent spirit—not mere slot machines, but real merchants capable of creating large demand for worthy goods—men whose salesmanship is the most valuable assistance a manufacturer can have in marketing his product.

He investigated and found that The Grocer was read and studied every week by the best merchants from Atlantic to Pacific—that it was absolutely unique among trade papers, both as regards circulation and influence.

Don't substitute

You can substitute some other brand of Macaroni for Codou's, but when you do it you are not "fair to yourself"—you cheat yourself out of a woman's confidence.

There is no Macaroni quite as good as Codou's—quite as white, tender and delicate. "Be fair to yourself" next time when a woman asks for Codou's, and if you don't happen to have it on hand it will pay you better to get it than to try to convince a woman that something else is just as good, because "She'll find you out."

Do you want to make more money this year than you did last year?
Do you want to save more money this year than last?
Do you want to take life easier than ever before?
If so—Install a KEITH FIRE-PROOF SYSTEM.
It will make money for you, because,

1. It will please your customers and increase your trade.
2. It will keep your collections up and your bad accounts down.

Cut of 100 book size, showing hood locked to cabinet, when not in use.

It will save money for you because,

1. It will do away with forgotten charges.
2. It will cut out concessions to customers over disputed accounts, as the accounts are always correct and posted up-to-the-minute.

It will enable you to take life easier, because,

1. Your mind will be at ease in the knowledge that your profits are not leaking away.
2. You will have leisure time to spend more pleasantly and profitably than in the bugbear of keeping books.

DROMEDARY

GOLDEN DATES

"Dromedary" is the only brand of dates that means anything to consumers, because it's the only one that has been advertised into consumer's knowledge

The largest and best magazines all carry our advertisement and everybody who has read it is a prospective customer.

Dromedary Dates are wrapped in oiled paper and packed in cartons. They are not the usual dates at all, but are selected, and absolutely clean. Moreover, they will keep moist indefinitely, which is of tremendous importance.

Many a woman doesn't buy dates because as usually sold they are a gummy, dirty and unsavory proposition. You can get this trade the minute you show a Dromedary carton

All Jobbers sell these.

We also pack Royal Excelsior and Anchor brand package Dates.

Merchants and Clerks in Every Province of Canada Interested in Competition

UP to the present THE CANADIAN GROCER has received many inquiries from all over Canada for information respecting the competition on Constructive Salesmanship.

Have you written for the particulars?

The purpose of this competition is to aid dealers and their clerks in realizing the possibilities at their command to do the following:

- ¶ To create demand for new goods.
- ¶ To raise the standard of quality of staple goods to customers.
- ¶ To attract new trade by modern methods, service, etc.
- ¶ To hold customers when once they are secured.

To the winners of the competition nine medals will be given. It is easily seen that dealers or clerks having the best methods for creating demand for new lines, for educating the consumer to purchase better goods, for increasing the number of customers and for holding patrons of the store, will be rewarded by a better knowledge of the details of the business in which they are interested.

The competition is divided into three classes: Class A includes dealers in centres up to 2,500 population; Class B, from 2,500 up to 20,000, and Class C, above 20,000 population.

To the three winners of each class a gold, a silver and a bronze medal will be given by THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The competition closes on May 1st, 1911.

Experiences in Account Collecting

Some of the Troubles a Dealer Met With in Getting in Money During a "Dry" Time—He Wanted $2,000—Professional Man Who Owed $260 Did Not Like Being Dunned—Insurance Man Settled Up, But His Account Was Lost — Other Interesting Experiences.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Every grocer who gives credit—and who among us does not?—must occasionally run against a pretty "dry time" in the matter of funds wherewith to do regular business and discount his bills. There are limits to all capitals: and in handling his credits the grocer is an exceptional man who does not extend all the "accommodation" that this traffic will bear. It's another instance indicative of how the "accommodating" spirit will get away with us.

We all have some "good customers" to whom we extend unusual privileges in the matter of carrying their accounts. After a time these get to be many instead of few; and, if we are not circumspect in our ways, we all reach a time when we are unable to turn around for lack of funds held beyond proper time by customers whom we "hate to offend" by even making the suggestion that they should pay up their accounts. Many often say we do not trust a man beyond the thirty-day limit, and we say it honestly, really believing that we don't; but an analytical examination of our accounts, name for name, and a careful scrutiny of the time each has run not only this particular month, but during other months, will, I think, bring almost any of us to the realization that we don't live up to any proper rules in these matters.

The Cause of Many Failures.

There have been many failures which have resulted from the want of such proper handling of the working capital as would enable the owner of the business to command sufficient ready money to go around among his creditors at the time for prompt payment. Many a concern, with hundreds of thousands of money in its business, and nothing seemingly abnormal in the circumstances, has gone under for lack of three or four thousand dollars of ready money at a certain crisis, and a grocer who does business with a capital of even twenty thousand dollars must be careful of his collection or he'll get into trouble some time.

He must be careful of his collections, not only when he needs the money, but at all times, for customers will soon take advantage of any laxity on the part of the merchant in this direction. Then, when the merchant really does need funds, he can't draw on his trade at will.

Ran Against a Dry Spell.

Some time ago I struck one of those dry spells and struck it hard. I had an unusually large stock, futures and purchases in the regular way, all coming together as things often will come, and was short of ready money wherewith to discount bills. I also had more out on accounts than I had ever had up to that time. I looked, therefore, to the resource of making collections for funds. It was about the beginning of the month and I anticipated a pretty flow of "coin" my way as soon as bills should be rendered. Somehow or other—we all know how it is—the funds did not materialize. I looked over the bills as the middle of the month drew near and noted one after another from A to Z whose accounts should be paid but were not.

When I got through with one inspection and found no accounts to speak of which were not what we would consider "good", but so many unpaid, I went back over them again for a closer analysis. I found that, taking only the big ones, those amounting to $60 and over, I had upwards of two thousand dollars of past due stuff right there in the shape of bills which should be in my till in cash by that time. Two thousand dollars would have come in pretty handy right then and I continued my analysis, with some interesting experience in the effort to collect what money I really needed.

Account Went Up to $260.

First was a professional man. His account was, and still is, one of the best accounts a man could wish for from some standpoints. His family is large; they live well; they eat a lot of fine goods; they never fuss about the cost of anything. I figure that the margin on that account is bigger than on any other I have. But, at this time it had run over three months and the total was some $260. I pulled out that account feeling certain that, if asked for a substantial payment on it, I'd get it.

Well, I didn't. When I went to him saying I was a little pinched and needed money, he said he would have been in already, knowing from his monthly statement how much his account was, but he had no money and could not say just when he'd get it. "No," he said, "I have paid you a good deal of money in the past two years and expect to keep right on trading with you; but I cannot be dunned. I'll pay always whenever I can, and always want to keep paid up; but you must not come and ask for payment." That kind of reasoning I did not think quite sound; but I wanted the account more than I even wanted the money; so I took the medicine. Nor have I ever regretted it. The bill goes on today; sometimes bigger and slower, sometimes with prompt payments; but it's strictly a "good" account from all sides For pressing needs, however, at that time it was really no sort of an asset.

Lost a Doubtful Customer.

Next was an insurance man, a man doing a big business, but not so well known as the one before, and one in whom I did not have nearly the confidence. His bill was nearly the ninety-day limit and footed nearly $90. I concluded that I'd rather not have his account than to have it run beyond the thirty-day time. I went to see him and asked him how were the funds. He said pretty thin just then, but he'd pay in full first of next month.

He explained, what I was sure was the case, that many of his notes had not come in as expected and that the total thereof was something like $12,000. A little time after I saw him, promptly on the first of the month, his check came in in full payment. I got no more orders from his family and I have not yet looked him up. Fact is, I don't want any bills that are not pretty secure, and I have my doubts about him.

Had to Pay for his House.

Another bill was for $185. This I took out and found, as the man frankly told me, was past due because he had made too large a payment on his home with money which should have been paid his grocer. There was nothing to do but wait. Meantime, the bill was no resource. Eventually it was paid in full; but it continues now with the strict understanding, made in set terms, that it is to be paid first thing every month. Should there be the delay of five days, I'd be after it.

The next amount was for $135—three months running. That man said at once that I was right to go after him; promised payment and in three days gave me $100.

Always a Month Behind.

Then came another $92 account—three months. This account has a peculiar character. The man pays regularly and early in the month, but always one month in arrears. In carrying his account I have to figure that I invest about $30 as a solid investment, not to be realized upon unless he takes his trade elsewhere. I always thought it worth the investment, so have carried it for four or five years. I thought this a good opportunity to get in a little delicate "prod", so I wrote in about these terms.

"Dear Sir: Not for over two years have I sent you a second statement in one month; and nothing but the pressure of unusual obligations which must be met in two days from now would induce me to send this one now. I trust you will understand—as I believe you will."

He telephoned me that afternoon, saying that my note had just reached him and that I'd certainly have the money. Two days after I got his check for $31.55, the amount for the first of the three months for which $92 was the total. "Bound to have it his own way, in spite of everything," I said to myself. And I concluded that he was not a man to count on in an emergency.

Two others came along—bills running thirty or forty dollars in the month. Generally they can be counted on for the first day or two in the month. When there's any variation on the one it's an oversight. The other nearly always asks permission to let the bill stand for another month and then pays up with the utmost promptness. Both are jewels—steady, reliable, responsible, prompt. They are the salt of the earth in the way of grocer's bills.

May Do Some Weeding.

I am seriously thinking that some of these days I'll weed out all of those who do not pay the same attention to my bills that they would accord to a note at the bank. I believe I shall be better off even without my pet who runs up to two or three hundred with big profits. I intend to look into this at greater length next week.

Requested Two Needles to Pay for the Big Egg

The following yarn was recently picked up by a traveler who deemed it worth while circulating to illustrate the limit to which some people will go in requesting service :

"A young grocer once started in business and in order to draw trade treated all his customers who liked a "horn" to a glass of liquor, which he also carried in stock.

"One day a customer came in and asked for a darning needle, and handed over an egg in payment. Standing round for some time he hinted to the merchant that he understood he treated his customers when they came to his store.

"Pretending to have overlooked the matter, the merchant at once made an apology and handed him a glass of whisky. Looking at it the customer remarked that he always liked an egg in his whisky and a litt.e sugar. The merchant at once supplied the sugar and broke the same egg he received for the needle and put it in the glass. It happened to be a double-yolked egg. This the customer mixed well and presumably thoroughly enjoyed it. Standing round again as if waiting for something more, he said that he did not think the deal was quite fair. The egg was a double-yolked one and he thought he was entitled to another needle.

WHEN TEA REACHES AMERICA.

Formosa and India teas reach America during August. Japans reach here during July and August. Gunpowders reach here during August and September, Oolongs during September and October, while Ceylons are forwarded during the entire year, production there being continupus the year around.

As the new teas arrive, the chops that are left over from previous shipment would naturally under normal conditions react in price. The first arrivals of new teas should bring full values, but later on prices might react slightly as demand lessens. This year, however, there is every indication of higher prices, for the reason that many low-grade teas have been rejected and shippers are hesitating, therefore, to send forward shipments concerning which there might be question.

A Bright Looking Store Interior.

This is an interior view of one section of R. L. Waugh's grocery store in Winnipeg. A close scrutiny of the photograph shows among the store fixtures and appliances a cash register, receptacles for spices, coffees, nuts, etc., meat slicer, coffer grinder, refrigerator, attractive rest-chairs, a cabinet and counter especially for meats and provisions and neat looking light fixtures.

A Merchant's Creditors Well Protected

New Law in Quebec Province Says That a Purchase of a Stock-in-Trade in Bulk Where The Seller has Creditors, Becomes Annulled Unless Purchaser Has Secured Affidavit—Not Necessary Now for Creditor to Prove "Intent to Defraud" on Part of Purchaser of Stock.

Montreal, Jan. 19.—A new law has just come into effect in Quebec province respecting the disposal by a merchant of a stock-in-trade until his liabilities to his creditors for the unpaid portion of his stock had been satisfactorily taken care of. It is known as "The New Quebec Bulk Sales Act."

It was introduced into the Quebec legislature by men who claimed there were too many traders with dishonest purposes in view. These traders sometimes dispose of their stock in bulk to intending and apparent bona fide purchasers before the former's liabilities have been satisfactorily settled.

By a "bulk sale" is meant any sale or transfer of a stock in trade or of merchandise, including transfers of license, certificates for the sale of intoxicating liquor, made, directly or indirectly, outside the ordinary course of the seller's business, whether the sale or transfer comprises the whole or nearly the whole of such stock in trade or merchandise or whether it relates only to an interest in the affairs or business of the seller.

Buyer Must Get Affidavit.

The New Bulk Sales Act says that any person who, directly or indirectly, buys in bulk a stock in trade or merchandise, shall, before paying the purchase price in cash or on time, obtain from the seller or his agent, an affidavit containing the names and addresses of the persons who have sold him the stock and who have not been paid, and the amounts due or to become due to each of such persons as the price or part of the price.

The affidavit mentioned in this article shall, so far as possible, be in the form of the schedule annexed to this chapter, and the seller, or, if the seller is a company or a partnership, the president, the secretary or the manager thereof, shall be bound to make the same.

Creditors Must be Paid.

Every sale made in contravention of the above if the buyer has not paid the price of the effects or merchandise to the bona fide creditors of the seller, mentioned in the affidavit referred to shall, as regards every such creditor, be null until such creditor is paid or settled with.

The sale, shall nevertheless be valid if the buyer, after having paid his seller, pays the amount of the purchase price to the bona fide creditors of his seller; and in such case he may recover from the latter the amount so paid.

The buyer, after having received the affidavit shall pay to the creditors mentioned in it, out of the purchase price, rateably and in accordance with the contracts between them and the seller, the money which is due them.

The foregoing does not apply:

(a) To sellers whose creditors have renounced the right to take advantage thereof;

(b) To the executors, administrators, liquidators, curators for the benefit of creditors, or other public officers acting under the authority of the courts.

But it shall apply to persons who are commonly known to buy and sell effects which are usually dealt with in commercial transactions, to commission merchants and in manufacturers.

Seller's Affidavit.

The following is a copy of the affidavit which must be given by the seller:

I,——— of———, in the Province of Quebec, seller (or agent of the seller), being duly sworn depose and say:

That I have sold (or agreed to sell, or in the case of a company or a partnership that the —— company or the firm of—— has sold or agreed to sell my (or its) stock in trade or merchandise situate at ——— for the sum of $——;

That the following names and addresses, are the names and addresses of all my creditors (or of all the creditors of the company or firm) who have supplied me (or it) with the effects or merchandise or any part thereof which I have sold or agreed to sell (or which the company or firm has sold or agreed to sell) and that the amounts opposite their names are the amounts which are due to them or which are still to become due.

Names and surnames	Addresses.	Amounts due	Amounts to become due

That I have not (or that the company or firm has not) any other creditors than those hereinbefore mentioned, so far as the said effects or merchandise or any part thereof, are concerned.

Sworn before me) at , this day)

Creditors Well Protected.

It will be observed from the foregoing synopsis of the act that it does away with the necessity of having to prove intent to defraud on the part of a purchaser as has been necessary in the past when a defrauded creditor wished to have a sale of stock-in-trade in bulk annulled as any sale made under this law becomes automatically annulled in the absence of the affidavit.

Similar laws to this have been in effect in British Columbia since 1908 and in Manitoba since 1909.

How the Grocer Loses by Cutting the Prices of Eggs

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 19.—"Co-operative Methods in Marketing Poultry Products" was the subject of an address at the convention of the B. C. Poultry Association held recently, W. H. Hayward, M.P.P., being the speaker. It was from the standpoint of the producer, and advocated a central egg station in British Columbia, with different districts. It was stated that in the winter producers sold eggs for about 50 cents a dozen, while grocers got 75 cents. It was brought out that grocers in trying to steal marches on one another cut prices and the farmer had to take what he could get.

This statement of cutting prices is not without foundation, and when this is done the grocer handles the eggs almost for nothing. At the best he gets say ten cents on the dozen at 75 cents, and sometimes not that. If he cuts the price, he makes say five cents, which gives a losing percentage.

The famous Rugby school of England, where the rugby football originated, was founded by a grocer, as were several other notable schools in that country.

A BUSINESS MAN'S AGENCY

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 19.—W. J. C. Hunter, formerly secretary of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, and later in the wholesale and commission business here, has organized a Business Man's Agency, which has its good features. The object is to protect the business man against fake advertising schemes, etc. The proposal is that a merchant pay $1 a month to belong to the agency, and a certificate of membership is given him. The agency will investigate all advertising schemes, and when a solicitor comes into the store, he may be asked if he is endorsed by the agency. Where a similar agency is in operation, in nine cases out of ten that is the last heard of it. It promises to be a saver of both time and money to the dealer.

Grocers are particularly the victims of these schemes, which in many cases are frauds, pure and simple.

A System for the Handling of Drafts

This is Necessary Because These Pieces of Paper Unnaturally Often Cause Unfriendly Relations Between Retailer and Wholesaler—A Method to Prevent Overdrafts at the Bank—Some Cases of Carelessness.

By W. J. Bryans.

There is nothing that works up unfriendly feelings between wholesalers and retailers more than the careless handling of drafts by merchants. How often has the wholesaler's temper been sorely tried by the return of his drafts without any statement of the reason for such action! It is no wonder that the wholesaler becomes riled sometimes and sends a letter to the retailer that at once stirs up unfriendly relations between the two. Not that the merchant who returns a draft in this manner is trying to keep the money from the wholesaler; but in most cases, the merchant having no system, finds that the amount of the draft does not agree with his invoices and at once returns the draft without any statement and leaves it to the wholesale man to wonder what is wrong.

A Slow Process.

A wholesaler relates one case where a draft was returned without any statement. He waited several days and getting no word from the retailer, sent a letter inquiring why the draft was returned. Several days afterwards the retailer replied saying he had returned the draft because the amount was wrong, but gave no further information.

Another letter was despatched to the retailer asking in what particular it was wrong. In due course of time a letter was received stating that the draft was ten dollars more than his invoices called for. After a great deal of time it was found that the retailer had lost one of his invoices, thus causing the difference.

In many cases, the merchant simply marks on the draft "writing" when there is a mistake, which he sometimes neglects to do until he has received an inquiry from the wholesaler.

Of course, the retailer has his side of the question also and wholesalers are often in the fault; but, there there is no doubt that many dealers, up-to-date in other methods have allowed this branch of the business to run along without any system, while by spending a short time at the work, the majority of them could devise a method which would save time in the handling of drafts, would create a better feeling between the wholesaler and retailer and would eventually save money for the merchant.

One Man's System Explained.

A merchant in a town of 2,000 population tells of the method he employs in handling his invoices and drafts:—"When invoices are received they are placed in the invoice box until the goods arrive when each portion of the invoice is thoroughly checked off to see that it is correct. The bookkeeper then goes over the invoice to see that there are no mistake in addition, etc., and if there should be any mistake in the quantity of goods or amount of invoice, the wholesaler is promptly notified. The amount is then entered in the invoice book and the terms set opposite.

"When the statement arrives, the items have only to be checked and added, and if the time on the draft is correct, it is ready to accept. If there should be any mistakes in the draft, particulars are carefully noted on the back and it is then returned.

"I used to waste a lot of time in trying to look after my drafts until I started this system," said the merchant, "but now I can fix up my drafts in a few minutes each day."

How to Prevent Overdraft.

Another merchant tells of his mode of procedure after he has accepted the draft. He first enters how he has disposed of it in the invoice book. He also has an Accepted Drafts and Bank Account" book. In the Accepted Draft section he enters the drafts with amount and date due. On the date on which they fall due he charges them up in his bank account. By this method he is able to tell exactly each day how much money he has in the bank as well as the date on which each draft falls due.

His Accepted Drafts and Bank Account book is shown below. He has accepted drafts due on Feb. 2, Feb. 4 and Feb. 7. These are noted in their proper place with amounts. Then in the bank account we find the balance brought over is $900. On Feb. 2 he deposits $200. Then the draft due on Feb. 2nd is charged up and he finds at the end of the day that he has $1,000 in the bank. When each draft is charged up, a note of the fact is made in the column for that purpose. In this manner he can tell just where he is at any day of the month.

It is just such methods as these introduced into the several branches of the retail business that saves a great deal of time and trouble.

Booklet Issued to Tell About the Stock

Vancouver Dealer Carries Many High Class Lines on Which Good Profits are Made—These are Named in the Pamphlet Which Was Sent Out to Customers and Prospectives—Have Special Delivery Hours.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 19.—A neat little device for calling the customer's attention to the holiday goods in stock, and thereby increasing the Christmas trade, was used this year by Henderson's, Pure Food Purveyors, Pender & Nicola Street.

It was in the shape of a handy, attractive booklet, betokening a quality store and quality goods, even before it is read. In dimensions it measured 6 x 4½ inches, a special ripple finish cover paper being used on the outside, and a high quality paper for the reading matter pages.

The announcement on the front cover enclosed in a dignified border, simply called attention to the fact that the book was the Xmas list for 1910; that it referred to Henderson's goods, and that the address and telephone numbers were so and so.

Dear Madam:—

The festive season is with us and we take pleasure in submitting to you this list of some of the goods we have in stock for the Xmas trade.

This is followed up by lists of goods carried, each page being enclosed in a straight rule panel.

SPECIAL PASTRY ORDERS.
If you require anything special in pastry, we can make it.
TABLE RAISINS.
Finest Muscatel Raisins in Clusters, from 20 cents to 40 cents.
SPECIAL.
3-lb. boxes finest clusters, $1.00 per box.
CRYSTALIZED FRUIT.
Assorted Fruits in Wooden Boxes.
Ginger, Cherries, Pineapple.
Carlsbad Plums (small boxes).
PRESERVED FRUITS.
Figs in Small boxes
Ginger in Jars
Figs in Syrup
Macedoine of Fruits in Jelly (glass moulds)
Chinois (Mixed China Oranges) in Syrup
Young Stem Ginger in Syrup
Peaches (Sliced) in Syrup
Apricots (Sliced) in Syrup
Cherries in Marasquin
Cherries in Brandy
Morella Cherries
Del-Monte California Fruits, Bar-Le-Duke Jelly,
Red and White Currants
Strawberries
French Plums in Glass

Ten pages in all are utilized in presenting the entire list. The eleventh contains sereval notices in which are mentioned the various times for delivery. These are 9 and 11 o'clock a.m., and 2.30 and 5 o'clock p.m., and on Saturday nights late deliveries leave at 8 o'clock.

Instructive Talks Advisable.

In most cases throughout the pamphlets the names only of the goods handled are given. In a few cases something interesting is told, and possibly had this been carried to a greater extent more interest might have been aroused. In mentioning Xmas cakes, the following little talk illustrates what is generally concedede to be good advertising: "We will have a nice assortment of cakes, plain and iced. Only the best material used in their manufacture. We know they will give you satisfaction."

Some of the Lines Carried.

A perusal of the book shows that Henderson's carry many high class and out-of-the-ordinary lines. Some of these are: Demerara and Castor sugar; blanched and ground almonds; candied carraways; wintergreen berries; all fancy lines of biscuits, including cheese flake, nursery rhymes, kindergarten, etc., plum puddings; Scotch oat cakes; all kinds of olives; French vegetables in glass; anchovies and herring in oil; sliçed salmon in oil; sardines in glass; all kinds of cheese; cream of rice, cream of barley and potato flour; grape fruit marmalade, tangerine, green fig, ginger and pineapple marmalade; meats in glass; soups in glass; mushrooms, etc.

Henderson's claim that it is on these high class goods of quality that the best profits are made, and they therefore get behind them with a good will.

Tried Cash Business but Discontinued It

St. Thomas Dealer Prefers A Credit and Cash Trade to Cash Alone—His Reasons for Doing So—Makes a Specialty in Coffee and Has Customers who Purchase Nothing Else — Expense of Doing Business and Turnover.

St. Thomas, Ont., Jan. 19.—A credit and cash business, and it carefully watched, is considered by Reeks & Co., Talbot St., St. Thomas, to be the ideal method.

"I tried the cash business for two years one time," remarked Mr. Reeks, "but for various reasons gave it up. That was about 5 years ago.

"In selling for cash only I found it necessary to sell cheaper than my competitors to get the trade and hence the profits did not amount to what they would have under the credit system. Again because customers had to pay cash they were more particular about keeping down purchases within certain limits and so I did not sell nearly as many goods.

"Another reason is that many people—in fact the best class—will not purchase goods from a cheap store. They prefer rather to pay a little more to be absolutely sure of quality and to be able to say that they are dealing at a high class store; and these are the people who buy the higher priced goods which yield good profits and who purchase the most goods also. The poorer class of customer doesn't want expensive goods and therefore by selling for cash one is not always able to gain a high reputation for superior quality."

At the present time he sells at 30 days and watches closely all customers and accounts and by doing this he loses, he claims, but a small percentage of outstanding.

A Seller of Satisfaction.

A dealer to increase his selling power, in Mr. Reeks' estimation, must sell satisfaction and he must give the proper kind of service, and, he added, "he must get his profits no matter what amount of consumer advertising is done on goods." He aims to sell quality goods which bear a fair profit and these are the goods he displays prominently, and talks up to his customers.

One of his methods of getting new customers is by specializing on coffee. He has studied coffee and the trade pretty thoroughly and by stocking brands which he knows sufficiently to recommend to his customers he has been able to work up a large trade in that line.

"I have customers who purchase nothing else but coffee from me simply because they know I understand it fairly well and can sell them coffee that they will like."

"No doubt you eventually get some of those coffee customers to deal regularly with you?" was suggested to him and his modest smile intimated that his thoughts were read.

Increase in Expense.

Mr. Reeks believes that operating expenses have gone up rather rapidly during the past 10 years. One of the chief causes of this was the advance in delivery expenses, and in the giving of better service. Horses were dearer and so were vehicles and repairs, and wages had gone up. He figured that it cost him 10 per cent. to do business in St. Thomas and he worked to obtain a 20 per cent.

A DEAF AND BLIND GROCER.

W. A. Ratcliffe, a Brantford, Ont., grocer is both deaf and blind. Nevertheless that does not hinder him from daily attending to his business with which he is fully acquainted and for which he does all the buying. In purchasing teas, coffee, etc., he follows the sense of smell and in other goods he goes by the touch.

He has two assistants one of whom communicates all statements addressed to him by holding his hand and talking to him on his fingers. He has been in the grocery business for 16 years.

Thinks Profits on Staples Might be Better

A Dealer's Views on the Cutting of Prices and the Three-for-a-Quarter System—He Maintains That Unity Will Cure Many of the Ills of the Trade.

By A. H. Harvey.

Does the retail grocer secure sufficient profit from staples?

Here is one answer to this question as viewed by a retailer: "The great difficulty in the grocery trade arises from the fact that the heavy selling staple lines like sugar, etc. are sold without adequate profit and the retailer has to get a heavy profit on other lines to make up for it."

Grocers know that in handling many articles they are really transacting business under a slight loss rather than a profit. But they were bound down to a suicidal price dictated by some cutter and blindly or possibly necessarily followed by the rest of the trade, whereas there was an opportunity of a good profit if there had been concerted determination not to work for nothing. For this reason it may be safely said that these small profit articles have proved unsatisfactory in the store and yet, as before mentioned, the opportunity for a good profit was not wanting.

Butter and eggs present a different consideration. The retailer has more latitude in his buying and, therefore, his profit possibilities are not so narrowly confined. Similarly with apples, potatoes and other fruits and vegetables, he is in a better position to obtain a decent profit.

The Profits on Staples.

However, a retailer discussing this question declared that the profit from staples considered collectively was not as large as it ought to be and while he tried to get away and keep away from the beaten track of price-cutters, still there was a limit even to this and in many lines he did not get the profit that he might.

Hence, with staples not returning as much as was expected of them he turned to proprietary articles for a profit that would fairly balance his accounts. Here, again there was a certain amount of price-cutting. Profits were diminished by such methods as selling "three-for-a-quarter" when they should be "ten cents straight." Of course, price cutting need not be followed in every case, but there are some articles which if cut by one store practically enforces cutting by the others.

Unity is Advised.

It is not the intention to dwell on how these evils—as they are generally termed—can be removed. One thing is certain, that as long as the trade is disunited they will never be fully remedied. But the grocer whose opinions are given here pointed out that the protected selling price plan had a certain remedial influence that should appeal to the average grocer and enlist his support in an effort to enlarge the field already covered.

Of course this is only one of the trade's views, but it is significant that the method by which he formed his opinion seems to possess at least a surface logic as far as it applies to the average or smaller grocer.

Schedule of Tares to Find Net Weight

When Goods are Purchased Gross Weight This Dealer Has Time Saving Convenience To Arrive at Selling Price—Says He Can Only Sell 98 Pounds Sugar From a 100 Pound Bag—Wholesalers Now Charge Up Weight of Goods When They Leave Their Warehouses and Not Original Weight.

Winnipeg, Jan. 19.—A local dealer has a schedule of tares which he allows on all goods which are bought gross weight. In speaking on the subject he said: "All jobbers have not adopted the practice of selling net weights. When goods are bought net weight, the actual cost is manifest but in cases where goods are bought gross for net weight, I find it necessary to have some schedule whereby I can arrive at the actual cost to me. Now, for instance I find that in both granulated and yellow sugar, while I am charged for 100 lbs., I really only get 99 lbs. of sugar, as the inside and outside bags weigh about one pound.

"In beans, rice, onions and other articles, I find the same thing to occur, so in order to ascertain the actual cost, I find it necessary to have this rate of tares. Of course in weighing sugar, I allow another pound for the weighing process, as I find that on an average I can get only 98 lbs. out of a cwt. bag.

Wholesalers Have Made Change.

"Some wholesale houses used to charge the original weight of many dried fruits, with the result that on account of shrinkage, the merchant paid for more than he received but lately I believe they charge the weight when the goods leave the wholesale house. In cases where they include the weight of the container, it has to be deducted to find actual weight—as in figs I allow 3 per cent. for tare. When wholesale houses charge for net weight only, it is not necessary to deduct tares. I find that the weight of the container, the freight and the amount that has to be allowed for weighing, makes quite a difference over invoice price."

The following is the schedule of tares:—

INCIDENTS IN COLLECTING.

Have you ever been cornered for want of ready money to meet your drafts? In such cases what do you do?

If you have ever experienced such a temporary stringency, you will be intensely interested in this week's article by Henry Johnson, Jr., on the collecting of accounts. He tells some of his own experiences in a manner which will probably recall similar incidents of the business lives of every dealer.

Mr. Johnson's article should therefore be carefully read. Besides depicting actual circumstances in collecting, it suggests means of going about this work which will prove of advantage to everyone.

STANDARD WEIGHTS FOR POTATOES.

A bill has passed the committee stage in the House of Commons, Ottawa, to establish a standard for a barrel of potatoes.

The bill provides that if potatoes are sold and handled by the barrel the standard shall be 160 pounds. There is no standard barrel existing to-day. There is a standard for a bushel and in Quebec a standard for a bag, but in the Maritime Provinces potatoes are sold nearly altogether by the barrel.

In some localities there, according to the father of the bill, farmers are asked to furnish 160 pounds; in others 165 pounds and in western New Brunswick 180 pounds to the barrel. Custom practically compels the farmer to deliver 180 pounds to the merchant. The bill will come up in the House for final decision.

There are many retailers in Canada who would like to see a standard bag for potatoes. At the present time it is general to consider that a bag should hold 90 pounds and police court cases are frequent in which the municipal authorities of towns and cities prosecute farmers for selling a bag under that amount.

That a 90 pound bag is too heavy and therefore inconvenient, is also a contention that is growing. A standard bag of 75 pounds is probably the one desired by the majority of those in favor of a standard, and at its last meeting the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association decided to petition the proper authorities to urge the passing of a bill bringing this about.

The opinions of retail dealers on this question would be interesting.

ADVANCE IN BULK PICKLES.

The attention of the retail trade is called to the recent sharp advance in bulk pickles of about 1 cent per pound or 10 cents per gallon. This occurred during the week.

Every effect of this character has a cause, and in this case the advance is due to shortage of supplies. The year 1910 was a poor one in both Canada and the United States for vegetables on account of the drought about which everyone knows. This occurred during the growing season for cucumbers, onions and cauliflower with the result that the crop was much poorer last year than in 1909, which itself was an unproductive season.

Manufacturers claim they cannot get vegetables anywhere and that their stations out through the country are empty. It is from these stations that the manufacturers recuperate their stocks for manufacturing purposes from time to time. Cucumbers they say have increased in cost 100 per cent. during the past season.

Therefore on account of the small vegetable production last year and the increased demand, the prices of bulk pickles have advanced with not much probability of any decline.

CAPITALISING A HANDICAP.

Since the Inspector of Weights and Measures of Toronto has seen fit to accuse grocers of giving light weight and using false bottoms in measures, housewives will be inclined to pay more attention to the goods they purchase.

Now, therefore, is the time for honest dealers to forcibly point out to their customers the reliability of their scales. Advertise the fact in your daily newspaper from time to time; place stickers on all parcels leaving the store bearing the words, "We Give Honest Weight;" whenever an opportunity arises explain it to the store patrons and place it in the circulars.

The inspector also advised housewives to personally visit the grocery stores instead of using the telephone. This is something else that honest dealers will appreciate. They know that women will purchase much more readily in the store than over the telephone because in the store there is in addition to the dealer's personality, persausiveness and suggestions, the power of display in the windows, on the counters and on the shelves which should further attract trade.

It is easy for the honest dealer to make capital out of many supposed handicaps of this character. He should watch carefully the trend of the public mind and if he does this he can frequently make the criticisms of others turn business his way which to the majority would seem to be disadvantageous to him.

A SUGGESTION.

A suggestion which deserves careful consideration has been made to organize clubs in the large centres of Canada for members of the grocery trade alone.

A club room centrally located could be easily maintained where retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers could frequent and talk over trade conditions. Whenever a retailer or wholesaler from an outside place comes to one of these cities he would have somewhere to go where he could get luncheon, feel at home and be amongst friends whose interests were common with his own.

The suggestion was made that these clubs be established in say Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver. The fee could be arranged when an idea of the number of members for each club would be obtained. This fee would only need to be a nominal one for members, say a dollar a month.

Views of the trade on this suggestion would be appreciated.

STOCK HELD TOO LONG.

General merchants throughout the country districts should look carefully to their stock and interior display.

A story is told by a traveler who recently visited a general store in Ontario where he noticed that a piece of calico on a table had actually been worn through by the friction of passing customers. It had been there for a long time and certainly was not conducive to a good opinion of the goods carried and it was representative of a back number in the general store business.

Stocks of any character should not be allowed to spoil beyond its power to attract some purchaser; when it does there results a total loss. Carelessness begets carelessness and eventually leads to failure.

MARKET GARDENERS SELLING TO CONSUMERS

Editorial in Toronto Globe Suggests that the Dealer be Eliminated in the Process of Distribution---Reasons Why the Market Gardener Does Not Find this Practical ---Trade Always Follows the Lines of Least Resistance.

In the course of an editorial on the proposal to establish more market gardens in the vicinity of Toronto; on market fees, and on the cost of living, the Globe, of that city, says:

"If the market gardeners were free to go where they please throughout the city, make their own contracts with householders, and deliver fresh vegetables and small fruits to the consumers there would be a fair prospect of accomplishing much good by not merely reducing the cost, but also improving the quality of perishable garden produce. It might be worth the householder's while to give his own attention and to direct the Aldermanic candidates' attention to the matter on the eve of municipal elections from year to year."

This illustrates how even large dailies who are supposed to know better, in their anxiety to cater to the masses make pretty statements in theory which when put into operation are not at all practical.

As a matter of fact market gardeners are free to do this very thing; they are free to make all the contracts they care to and undoubtedly every one of them in the vicinity of Toronto has tried this plan of campaign.

But how does it work out? The market gardeners find it unprofitable. They go from house to house, waste time and therefore money in dickering with every Tom, Dick and Harry; they open numerous new accounts and many of them small and lose money on accounts of dead-beats of which there is always a superabundant crop in every city. There is also the additional cost in the maintenance of vehicles, for a wagon that has traveled ten miles is five nearer collapse than if it had gone five; the market gardener too, has plenty to do at home every day in attending to his garden and cannot afford to peddle goods all day long. Should he employ assistants, he must always look forward to inferior service, and frequently count upon thefts.

The natural course then to pursue is to sell to the dealer. By doing this he is practically certain of his money; he covers less ground, does business with a few and has time to look after his garden duties. He has found by actual experience that trading direct with the dealer is the more profitable and economic method. That is the method he, of his own free will, desires to pursue.

Occasionally, of course, market gardeners will sell over the head of the dealer to the consumer, because they may in such cases obtain a little more profit. Who will say that the dealer is not then justified in saying: "Well if you sell goods to some of my customers, I refuse to buy from you; you must sell entirely through me or I cut you off?"

The Globe may depend upon it that the market gardeners have discovered the most economic method of disposing of their goods that is open to them. If selling direct from house to house were more profitable, time and labor considered, that would be the system used.

The currents of trade presenting the least resistance are those that are breasted.

Every character student knows the fickleness of human nature. No two housewives are alike in their purchasing; one of ten may desire to have the market gardener call with her vegetables while the other nine would become wrathy over such presumption and waste of time necessitated. They want to purchase at their leisure from their dealers and not at any time during the day or night from a peddler, whenever the latter sees fit to call. It would not be practical either for the housewife to purchase always from the market gardener. At certain times she must have the service of the dealer, and would The Globe or any other paper say she should not be allowed to have it?

The points are these: The consumer in some cases, in fact in most cases, wants the service and convenience of her grocer, and therefore if the dealer goes to the worry, risk and expense of supplying this he is entirely justified in his contention that he ought to have all the business so far as the gardener who supplies him is concerned; the market gardener has discovered long ago that by placing the bulk of his goods through the dealer he is following the currents of least resistance, and in accepting the dealer as his best aid in marketing his products he has no right to sell goods over that dealer's head.

Theory is all right in its place but it's the cold, hard, practical operation of it that counts.

SELLING AT LESS THAN COST.

Retailers in San Francisco are jubilant over the failure of the Universal Grocery Stores there. These stores have been advertising well-known staple articles at less than cost and have had some difficulty in procuring goods as all jobbers would not supply them. While in business they were the means of causing other dealers in the vicinities in which their three stores were located to sell goods at a loss.

Sometimes in such cases the men who fail are allowed to repurchase the stock and fixtures and sell out at even greater cuts than before, resulting in still greater injury to the dealers who carry on their business on a sound basis and who pay the wholesaler 100 cents on the dollar.

The latter class are naturally incensed at such methods because they have a tendency to undermine the legitimate foundations in the grocery trade and to cause trouble and loss to the business merchants who make or break any community.

TO MERCHANTS AND CLERKS.

The Canadian Grocer invites its readers to write this paper about any merchandising topic. Such communications are acceptable at all times, whether they consist of opinions on trade problems or whether questions are asked. Good photographs of good windows dressed by retail merchants or their clerks, and which are their own ideas, are solicited at all times, as well as good photographs of bright, well-arranged store interiors. Photographs should be such that when reproduced, they show up well the details of a window or interior display.

SOCIABLE EMPLOYES.

Over in Guelph, Ont., there is a retail grocery firm the employes of which in both summer and winter enjoy themselves at social functions. Last week they went out one evening on a hayrack sleigh ride and later held a concert and partook of refreshments at the home of one of their number. They were the employes of J. A. McCrea.

Such outings and social gatherings as these often serve to create a greater interest in the business with which the participants are connected. They make one feel that he is a part of the firm and on him is placed a great deal of the responsibility for the success of the business from year to year.

Purchasing Power of Grocers' Association

Twenty of Its Members Averaging Annually $20,000 Amounts to Huge Sum—Attention Drawn to This by President-Elect Miller to Point Out Importance of the Organization — Inspection of Weights and Standard Potato Bag Considered — The Election of the 1911 Officers—Mid-Winter Entertainment next Month.

Toronto, Jan. 17.—It was not until the officers of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association were elected on Monday night and installation was under way, that the grocers present spoke their minds on trade questions. But before launching out into the ideas expressed, it is well to say that the association was pleased at the larger attendance of members—among whom were some who have recently cast in their lot with this organization—than usual, and it is believed that this is a good omen for 1911. This expressed opinion was substantiated by the applications of several others who will be admitted next meeting night.

The election of officers took place after the general routine business had been transacted and to make a long story short, this was the slate selected:

Past President—D. McLean.

President—W. C. Miller (acclamation).

Vice-President—R. Davies.

Treasurer—Bailey Snow (re-elected).

Secretary—C. F. Thorne.

Executive—D. Bell, D. W. Clark, J. S. Bond, R. Matthews and the above officers.

Trustees—W. F. Johnston, D. Bell, and D. W. Clark (all re-elected).

The Combined Purchasing Power.

W. C. Miller, the new president, in his inaugural address predicted a good year for the association—one that would result in the betterment of trade conditions through their efforts. He showed why the association had a strong influence in the trade from the fact that the purchasing power of the members amounted to so much.

"Just consider," he said, "That, figuring the annual average purchasing power of the members of our association at $20,000, twenty of us buy from wholesalers and manufacturers $400,000 worth of goods in a year. With such a buying power we ought to be able to have considerable to say about trade conditions many of which are disadvantageous to us."

R. Davies, the vice-president, supported Mr. Miller in his remarks about the power behind the Association. "If you take this into consideration," he said, "we will certainly be able to handle a great many of our difficulties."

Secretary Fred Thorne promised "the best I can" in 1911, and Bailey Snow, in a jocular refrain, called attention to the amount of money still left in the strong box which "he had not spent." It wasn't in the Farmers Bank, either.

D. W. Clark pointed out that the Association had been gradually deriving more good from their meetings than formerly. The membership was being rapidly increased, and there was every possibility of having a large attendance throughout the year.

"If we have a large membership," he said, "we will be able to more effectively confer with wholesalers and manufacturers. We should take up something new every night; there are questions connected with the trade which arise almost every week, and if we follow these up we will not only strengthen our Association, but derive benefit for ourselves. I read The Canadian Grocer from cover to cover every week, and there we can find many important trade questions to discuss."

It was a good sign, considered J. S. Bond to see the membership growing so rapidly. There was a great deal of work to be done, and in reading articles pertaining to the grocery trade all should take note and bring them up for discussion at the meetings. "There should be something interesting and profitable brought up here every night," he concluded. Short addresses were also made by D. Bell, R. Matthews, G. H. Gould, S. W. Hall and O. J. Honsberger along these lines, all promising their support.

W. C. MILLER,
A Yonge St. Toronto Grocer Elected President of the Toronto R.G.A. for 1911.

Inspection of Weights.

D. W. Clark called attention to the fact that the Inspector of Weights and Measures had been talking to women on shortweighting on the part of merchants. From the fact that many of the scales which are wrong favor the customer, he intimated that the grocer was not to blame in all cases. Honest dealers did their best to have their scales correct, and he thought the Inspector had little to do in giving a lecture to women on the subject. It was a business proposition with business men.

R. Matthews did not see why the merchant had to pay for the inspection when it was no fault of his that his scales were wrong.

Some of the members ventilated some rumors about a little war in charcoal prices, but the majority considered it best to allow this matter to run its course for a time.

Standard Bag for Potatoes.

D. W. Clark moved that the Association petition the proper authorities to ask the government to pass a bill establishing a standard bag for potatoes. At the present time there was no standard weight, but it was generally considered that 90 lbs. of potatoes went to a bag. This he thought was too awkward to handle, and frequently bags were used that wouldn't hold that quantity. A standard bag of say 75 pounds or 5 pecks would be a great convenience. His motion will be acted upon and other associations will be asked to co-operate.

D. McLean referred to the deputation going to Ottawa to petition against the Co-operative Bills which have been introduced into the House of Commons by three members of parliament. The objects of these bills were discussed and when the date of the deputation has been announced the matter will be further considered.

There will be something in the line of an evening's entertainment held next month, plans for which are in the hands of the executive, and a bowling tournament is also on the winter's programme.

TO MARK NET WEIGHT.

After a conference with representatives of Food Commissioners and the grocery trade, an amendment has been introduced into the United States Congress to the Pure Food Act, providing for the marking of net weight, measure or numerical count on packages. The present law provides only that when the weight or measure is marked on a package it should be accurately stated. The propsed amendment makes such marking compulsory. It is expected that the bill will be considered sometime this month.

SUGAR DOWN AGAIN.

Just at the time of going to press the announcement was made of another decline of 10 cents in sugar. This makes the third decline in 3 weeks, and places sugar below what it has been for more than two years.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Pickles—Advance.
Tea—Firm.
Evaps—½c increase.
Dried Fruits—Firm.

Toronto, Jan. 19.—Wholesalers report a favorable business so far this month comparing well with the first month in other years. Although most dealers have completed their annual stock-taking, still some are busy yet in making up last year's financial statement.

There has been no change in sugar prices in the past week, although some dealers are looking for a further decline. Total stocks and afloats of sugar together show a visible supply of 3,192,202 tons, against 2,879,223 tons last year, or an increase of 312,979 tons. A further drop in the price of sugar of 5c would put it down as low as it has ever been in 2½ years.

Bulk pickles have advanced in price again, five gallon kegs now being quoted at $2.75, an advance of about 10 cents per gallon. The advances made in pickles have been due to the scantiness of last year's cucumber crop which fell far below the production of other years. However, at this time of the year, wholesalers do not sell a large amount of bulk pickles as they cannot be shipped to country points without a great deal of risk.

Coffee prices have now reached a point that is the highest in 23 years, and lower prices are not to be expected for some time. Tea is soaring in the same manner and is quietly hardening up.

Dried fruits are firm, there being a marked scarcity in many lines, particularly prunes. Evaporated and dried apples are also steady, an advance of ½ cent per pound being noted in these lines during the week.

Sugar.—Although there has been no further change in sugar during the past week, still there is a feeling that it has not reached its lowest level yet, but as one interested person said: "It cannot be far off the bottom price now." While some report only a fair trade, others say that business is active for this time of the year. The quotation for raws in New York is 3.61, which quotation is only a resting place towards the lower quotation made for February shipment at 3.48, indicating a further decline in spot quotations for raws in the not distant future to 3.48. It is the expectation that when this decline in raws takes place that sugar here may be affected. Beet sugar still continues to waver around 9s., which is considered about the cost of production, while the same beet quotations rule for February delivery as for January.

Syrups and Molasses.—There is a fair January trade in both syrups and molasses, with prices unchanged, although there is a slight easiness in the primary molasses market. The sale of syrups is stimulated no doubt by the fact that apples and dried fruits are high in price.

Dried Fruits.—Down through the whole list of dried fruits, firmness is still maintained and one opinion was given that the wholesalers would find it necessary to advance their prices in many lines soon as when their present stocks ran out, they will have to pay a big price to fill up again. Wholesalers report that business in this line is keeping up well, considering high prices. The boarding house mistress will regret to learn that prunes are among the list of soaring fruits. A report from California says: "The prune crop of California is almost a thing of the past. Prices have been rising and from now until the new crop, there will be very few prunes to buy here."

The world's supply of prunes this year has been short everywhere. In France, the crop turned out badly and whereas in other years the French exported this line to other European countries, this year they have had to buy prunes from California to supply their own home demand. Raisins are also firm, the supply in Spain now being all out of the hands of the farmer, while the crop in California is better cleaned up than a year ago. An advance in dried apples of ½ cent is also noted this week.

Tea.—The tea market still keeps hardening up and it is believed by many that higher prices will soon exist. No kind of tea is in over supply, while some kinds are scarce. The sales in both Ceylon and Calcutta last week brought the highest prices within the past 18 years. Especially is the higher price noticeable in the lower grades and the opinion was expressed that within a short time there would be little tea retailing at 25c, except the lower grade Chinas. The tone of the market is so firm that some holders are not disposed to press sales, believing that better prices will eventually be had.

Coffee.—The coffee market, although prices remain high, is creating no excitement just now, the trade throughout the world pursuing a conservative policy and buying only for immediate requirements. Local dealers state that the consumption of coffee has not fallen off under the advance in price, but that there has been an increase in the amount of lower grade coffee used.

The total visible supply of the world, Jan. 1911, was estimated at 14,165,640 bags, against 16,669,273 bags on Jan. 1, 1910, showing a decrease in one year of 2,503,633 bags. It is said that 1,200,000 bags of valorization coffee will be offered for sale during April. In speaking of this sale, Willett & Gray's Journal says: "Long before these coffees can be distributed it is a most fair assumption that the world's visible will have decreased much more than 1,500,000 bags, so that the 1911 valorization sale will come at a time when its 1,200,000 bags will be everywhere regarded as a welcome distribution of supplies when the market will best appreciate the relief." The new crop of coffee will not arrive until August. Prices still remain the same.

Toronto.—Dealers are inclined to let the canned goods question drop for the present, believing that it has held a position of prominence long enough. Still most houses report a fair amount of both canned vegetables and fruits moving out. The fact that the best season for canned salmon is now coming on has had a tendency to strengthen the price of that line, but no advances have been made, although prices are already high, some wholesalers believe that some lines on account of scarcity are worth more than they are asking for them at the present. Early June and sweet wrinkle peas are particularly scarce.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Weak.
Tea—Strong.
Tapioca—Firm.

Montreal, Jan. 19.—Trade this week was more than was anticipated for this time of the year.

It is the opinion of some that a further decline is possible in the sugar market. Tea and coffee still maintain their firm position; there is a good demand for tea of lower grades, and prices are firm.

The canned goods market is satisfactory; prices are firm and demand is fair. Lobster and imported sardines of a high-grade are in good demand.

Dried fruits still maintain their strong position. There is a shortage of raisins and prices are firm; prunes are scarce also.

Higher prices are anticipated in the Tapioca market, reports showing that the primary markets are steadily advancing.

Most merchants have finished stock-taking now and more activity is expected in the near future.

Sugar.—The sugar market is still on the weak side, and buyers continue to buy sparingly in accordance with their immediate needs. The general opinion is that there will be a further drop in prices before the bottom has been reached.

Tea.—The market shows no change for the week. The demand is fair considering the season. Low grades show a pronounced hardening tendency and will probably advance further within the near future. The entire list will likely show some strengthening as the season advances.

Buyers are beginning as usual at this season to make inquiries for supplies to keep them going until next fall when the new crop will be available.

Rice and Tapioca.—Tapioca is firm. Recent reports say the primary market is up ½c. Brown tapioca is scarce, and the demand for this article is somewhat irregular and there are difficulties in shipping unless in carload quantities. At present prices it is worth handling and selling, and it is surprising that buyers do not seem to appreciate its value more. There is a good demand for rice; prices remain unchanged.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—

Prunes—Advanced.
Filiatras Currants—Reduced.
Beans—Good sale.
Coffee—Strong.
Sago—Declined.

Winnipeg, Jan. 19.—The market this week has changed little since the disturbance of two weeks ago. With the exception of syrup and sugar, the general market is stronger. The heavy output last month both from the wholesale and retail houses everywhere in the country, has created more or less of a scarcity in many lines. Wholesalers find it difficult to bring in goods, and deliveries at the present time in the West are slow, due to the railway blockade. It is believed, however, that many carloads are coming to the west from crop centres and manufacturing centres of the continent, and that the seeming scarcity at the present time will be much relieved in few days. Should the storms continue in the West there will be a serious shortage of supplies in some of the outlying communities.

Satisfactory orders are being turned in by travelers, and they report the trade in general in healthy condition. Regarding general business conditions of the west there is splendid optimism prevailing, and the realty market was never better then at the present time. There are many new towns to be opened during the coming year, which will mean the opening of many new retail stores; in view of this, wholesalers are making strenuous preparations to supply opening stocks, and it is reasonable to expect that there will not be large stocks carried in Winnipeg during the next year if the past difficulty in securing goods is continued.

Sugar.—The market is quiet this week at the following prices, and no further reductions are anticipated. There is a little more activity in the ordering, due to the low prices, and it will not be long until the merchants everywhere are well stocked.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—The advances of last week are maintained, and new advances are reported. Prunes are all up ½c and may still go higher, as there is little indication that the demand is being satisfied. There seems to be a heavy stock of cleaned, dried, filiatras currants, and the price has come down ¾c. Ordering is good in the whole list, and the general line is firm.

Syrup and Molasses.—The reduced price of last week is maintained, and the ordering has been stimulated somewhat due to the good buying price from the wholesalers. Everyone is glad to see the product moving well, and if the movement continues long enough, a much better market will prevail in the near future than has for several months. Bulk syrup has not been changed, and half barrels sell at 3½c. The molasses market is good, but no new prices are quoted.

Nuts.—Only special orders are coming in for nuts, and the following prices are strongly maintained. There is always good distribution for the shelled, and unshelled walnuts have recently become popular on the market and at a price less then one-half of the shelled. Filberts are strong, and some houses are asking 12½c for best quality filberts to-day.

Evaporated Apples.—There are no new prices, but the market has been strengthened to such an extent that double prices do not prevail, which means that there has been ½c advance. Stocks are scarce as has been the case for some time, and U. S. stocks are not likely to come in any great quantity, as trial stocks have proved unsatisfactory in quality. The U. S. evaporated apple is coarse and woody, and it is claimed cannot take the place of the Canadian product.

Beans.—There is better sale for beans now then there was in December, the reason being quite unknown, except that all ordering for special lines put some of the staples in the background for the time being. There is plenty of stock on hand and in crop centres, and goods are going out freely.

The coffee market is unsettled here, and prices varying from ¼c to 2c. There is no doubt that the market is firm but the quotation of 17c for extra choice is rather high, considering that other houses quote 15½c. It is believed that when stocks are equalized, and after all houses have had their next buying, that they will find the coffee market considerably advanced, due to the action of manipulators in Brazil to protect their favorite production.

Tapioca and Sago. — Sago has been reduced ½c and the reason assigned is that there has been practically no demand. It seems reasonable to believe that a product so popular cannot diminish to such an extent as to sell for less than 4½c, and wholesalers are endeavoring to push the commodity so that it will find a better place in the grocery trade.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Jan. 19.—The continued high prices of pork products are causing considerable comment among the local dealers. Hogs this season were considered to be fairly plentiful and the price lower than for some time. At the opening of the season hogs sold at 11 to 11½ but later on the price dropped to nine cents for fairly good stock. This is two cts. per lb. below the figures quoted last season for same class of stock, and yet the grocers who handle a lot of salt pork, bacon and hams, say they have failed to get the benefit of this drop. The local packers claim that they have a demand for all pork products that they can turn out, and it is reported that one firm this week received an order for sixty tons of hams and bacon for the English market. Prices this week remain unchanged.

The grocery trade is not quite so good as usual for the season of the year. This is due principally to the unfavorable condition of the weather. The lumbering industry throughout the province is practically at a standstill owing to the absence of snow and ice. The supplies that are being sent out to the lumber camps are limited, and this fact causes dullness in business.

The dealers in provisions report business fairly good, and there is quite a demand for fruit. Apples continue scarce and high and anything of quality is quoted at $4 to $5. The poorest No. 3's are selling at $2.50 per barrel.

Butter prices are holding firm but some of the dealers say that large stocks are held by some persons, and that they would not be surprised if there was a "break" in the market before long.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Jan. 19.—This week saw quite a cold snap in Vancouver, and though the thermometer was not down to zero, yet it was cold enough to have quite an effect on the price of potatoes. An increase is not yet noted, but quotations are stiff and a rise is confidently expected. Those in close touch with the market declare that the supply is limited, notwithstanding the slight decrease in price a few weeks ago, when it was stated that many potatoes were coming in. The fact that potatoes are being imported from Australia would also lead to the belief that the supply is insufficient to meet the requirements between now and early summer, when the first crop from California begins to arrive. If the cold sends up the price, it will likely go fairly high, as information has reached provincial government officials that there may be Irish blight on the potatoes from Australia. The Provincial Board of Horticulture has been very strict in inspecting potatoes, corn and fruit coming into the country, and if there is any sign of this dread disease in the imported article, the whole consignment may be condemned. Potatoes here have been free from blemish up to the present.

TRADE NOTES.

Roswell and Gordon Johnson, Guelph, have purchased the grocery store of E. Soules on Durham street, and, after enlarging the premises, have put in a combined grocery and butcher stock, dealing in fresh and cooked meats.

M. M. Morehouse, formerly with the Yerxa Grocery Co., at their Woodstock, N.B., branch, is opening a grocery store in Fredericton, N.B.

H. R. Poussette, for some time Canadian Trade Commissioner at Durban, South Africa, is being transferred to Buenos Ayres, South America. Mr. Poussette is now on his way to Canada and before going south will visit the large commercial centres for information.

Eighty-one boxes of condemned figs, weighing more than two tons were recently disposed of at Boston by a United States deputy marshal.

Don't make it a practice to smile only when customers come in; smile also when they leave.

The clerk who stands around and finds nothing to do may soon be looking for a place to stand.

WANT SANITARY CONDITIONS

Guelph, Ont., Jan 19.—An agitation is being made here to have all groceries displayed both inside and outside local stores, properly protected from dust and other impurities. In one store a cat is observed nightly ensconced in the windows among fruit and other edibles,—a feature not highly appreciated by the customers of that store.

Questions About Tapioca and Glucose

Percentage of Starch and Water in Tapioca — Glucose Made From Corn and Other Things—Used in Manufacture of Confectionery and Leather—Is a Nutritious Food—Not as Sweet as Sugar.

Editor Canadian Grocer—I have been lead to understand that tapioca is chemically much like arrowroot and sago. Is this true? What are the percentages of starch and water in tapioca?

Summerside, P.E.I. CLERK.

Editorial Note.—Chemically, tapioca is almost identical with arrowroot and sago, so far as its chief proximate constituents are concerned. It consists of about 85 per cent. of starch and 15 of water, with small amounts of mineral and albuminous matters. But the starches of the three foods differ in the form of the granules and are readily distinguished from one another under the microscope. Sago, rice and potato starches are the most probable adulterants of tapioca.

What Glucose Is.

Editor Canadian Grocer—Will you kindly let me know how, and from what glucose is made, and what is the difference between its sweetening properties and sugar? RETAILER.

Moose Jaw, Jan. 5, 1911.

Editorial Note.—Used in the manufacture of rat poison, in the tanning of leather, and the claim made that it can be produced from sawdust, chips or shavings, as well as corn, are some of the interesting features of an article which is used extensively in many foods. Such is glucose or starch sugar.

Glucose is an imperfect sugar prepared by the action of acids on starch. There is a wide range in the quality of this article. Wet starch obtained from several articles, mostly potatoes and Indian corn, is boiled in sulphuric acid and water. This causes the starch to turn sweet and the acid is afterwards all taken out with chalk or other clarifier.

Glucose or grape sugar as it is sometimes called is produced mostly in America but large quantities are also made in Germany from potatoes. It is made in both liquid and solid form but most users prefer the liquid.

One writer on the subject says that it does not matter from what material the starch is obtained so far as the quality of the glucose is concerned and that it may be made from chips, sawdust and shavings and the chemical composition is invariably the same. A peculiar fact about its manufacture is that although the acid changes the starch to sugar, it is not affected in the least itself.

Glucose in regards to sweetening qualities is inferior to sugar. There is considerable difference between the different brands of glucose but the ordinary article has only about one-third the sweetening effect of cane sugar. It is used in the manufacture of confectionery, jams, marmalades, and several other commodities which the grocer handles, but in some countries when it is used in these articles, they have to be labelled to denote the fact.

A Nutritious Substance.

As the acid is entirely taken out of the glucose, it is perfectly harmless and even nutritious. It is sometimes claimed that certain brands of glucose contain 80 per cent. of sugar. But if the sweetening qualities of cane sugar was set at 100, the best glucose would only be 30 or 40. The thickest and freest from color is the highest priced.

Common glucose often contains some impurities due to the presence of sulphates, but these impurities are not found in the best makes and none of the large producers would allow the impure article to leave their hands.

Its uses are many and varied, and the amount used is enormous. Some of the things it may be used in making are jam, marmalade, jellies, caramels, condensed milk, meat extracts, alcohol and sauces.

Glucose at the present time is worth about 2¼ cents per pound, which is the lowest it has been in a long period, as corn from which it is mostly made has been a better crop lately.

Competition—The Commercial Sieve

Run over in your mind the history of the package tea trade as you know it for ten years. You will at once agree that the outstanding feature has been Red Rose Tea coming from a tailender in Ontario and the West to a leader during that time, while many others, once prominent, have dropped far behind in the race. This remarkable success of Red Rose Tea has convinced the trade that Red Rose Tea "is good tea." You believe it, but have you proved it for yourself? We find that when grocers use Red Rose Tea in their homes they sell more of it. Every customer to whom you sell a tea that pleases her more than the tea she is using is a better customer for you. Try a package of Red Rose Tea in you home, and you'll want to recommend it to your customers. It will please more of them than any other tea.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Vancouver Dealer Makes Specialty Out of Poultry—Salesmen of Edmonton Merchant are Nothing Else—Attracting New Business by Serving Tea—Gets Customers' Confidence in Order to Raise Standard of Quality—Ties All Parcels Without Charge.

Makes Poultry Draw Trade.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 19.—A method on which T. F. McDowell, Granville St., places a great deal of dependence for gaining new trade is making a specialty out of poultry. He not only thoroughly understands poultry himself, but he has an employe who is also a specialist in this line so that the very best service is guaranteed customers.

After a poultry sale has been made he has an employe who follows it up to the purchaser's house and who dresses and cleans it ready for the oven. For turkeys he charges 25 cents extra for this work, but nothing is charged for chickens.

His grocery stock consists of the higher classes of goods and quality is given a prominent place in everything he sells.

Mr. McDowell's entire methods for increasing sales, retaining trade and for educating customers to purchase better goods than they have been doing will be given in The Grocer in the near future. He has been in business here about 8 years having come from a farm near Owen Sound, Ontario, where he is now on a visit. Before leaving on his trip his employes presented him with a handsome dressing case, showing their appreciation for his interest in their welfare.

Good Clerks are Salesmen Only.

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 19.—"I never allow my clerks to waste their time during business hours," said a retail grocer of this city," and I never waste the time of my good clerks on petty jobs. I let my cheap help handle the less important work. Last week when I was in a dry goods store the merchant sent his best clerk out to deliver a parcel as the delivery man was busy just at the time, opening up some goods.

"Now I would never do that. While away, that good clerk might have lost a chance to make some valuable sales and the merchant would consequently lose money."

Grocer Serves Tea to Customers.

Middleton, N.S., Jan. 19.—W. H Wilson, a Middleton grocery dealer is paying particular attention to the increasing of his tea trade. The method he employs is by serving tea every afternoon to all who call. This is appreciated by the customers, especially those who drive in from the country.

Mr. Wilson states that he has increased his tea sales to a great extent by this plan.

New Fish Line Took Well.

Regina, Sask., Jan. 19.—"As a special price on a few articles about the store will interest a certain class of customers," said a local dealer, "So do I find that something new or special in goods will interest and create sales among other classes of people. It is therefore necessary that the grocer should not stick to the same old lines year after year. He should introduce new articles, thus interesting the trade and getting the reputation for being up to date.

"I remember an example of this which occurred several years ago in my fish trade. I had been selling only the ordinary lines of herring, cod and white fish. I found the customers were getting tired of the same old lines all the time, so I purchased a shipment of halibut. This was a new line in town at that time and the fish from it's size and appearance, attracted attention. People began to buy to see what it was like. Then they began to come back for more and very soon I had a good trade worked up for this fish.

"The same way in other lines, customers want something new once in a while.

Gets Customers' Confidence.

St. Thomas, Ont., Jan. 19.—If a grocer is desirous of raising the standard of quality of his customers' purchases and of selling them more goods, he has, in the opinion of P. L. M. Egan, of Egan Bros., to gain their confidence.

To accomplish this he must act as an advisory board and must be exceedingly careful not to advertise or recommend any goods to be such that they are not. When customers once know that they can depend on the dealer's judgment, they frequently leave the matter of selecting the brand to him being assured that they will not be disappointed.

Mr. Egan maintains that when his customers have this confidence in him they do not run from one store to another where occasionally they might be able to purchase a bar of soap extra for a quarter or a pound of sugar more for the dollar. As long as the dealer has the goods and the quality and understands his trade sufficiently to know what to recommend, profits of course considered, Mr. Egan believes he will have little difficulty in holding trade, introducing new goods and raising the standard of staples so that better satisfaction will result.

Tie Parcels Without Charge.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Jan. 19.—As a unique advertising method, the T. W. Robinson Co., of Moose Jaw offered during the past holiday season to provide paper and tie up all parcels which people wanted to send away.

In their announcement they said:

"Bring your parcels to Robinson's to be parcelled ready for mailing.

"About 75 per cent. of the average parcels lost through the mails is caused by improper parcelling, and how often around home just when you want a neat box, a clean piece of paper or a good strong string you fall short, then there is the bother and nuisance of hunting these up. During the holiday season bring all your parcels to us; we will parcel them free of charge."

Studies Trade Paper Ads.

St. Catharines, Ont., Jan. 19.—A local retail dealer says that he subscribes to the grocery trade paper chiefly because he wants to study the advertisements it contains. Speaking in regard to it, he said: "The advertisements of manufacturers whose goods I handle are great sources of information. There, a merchant may keep track of the most up-to-date goods, the latest novelties and in this way can find many suggestions for his trade. Besides the advertisements, the trade papers give some valuable suggestions as selling methods and contain advertising phrases that can be used with good effect in many advertisements in the local paper."

Introduced a Poultry Food.

Belleville, Ont., Jan. 19.—A Belleville dealer tells of his experience in introducing a new line into his business: "During the winter months everybody knows that the supply of eggs becomes very scarce and as the farmers are continually complaining about the hens refusing to produce the desired number of eggs, I began to think that it would be an excellent time to introduce poultry food.

"A firm has been trying to sell me a certain brand of poultry food last November and I was pretty firmly convinced myself that it was good stuff, so I put in a stock. I made a display of it in a prominent part of my store with a show card telling of its merits as an egg producer. It at once attracted the attention of my farmer customers when they entered the store. A great many who hesitated about buying, I convinced by a new method. I told them to take a quantity home and to give me half the increased number of eggs during the month and I would not charge them a cent for it. This argument generally convinced them that it would be a good investment and it usually completed the sale."

New Laid Eggs are Now More Plentiful

Better Arrival of These Has Caused a Reduction in Price — Storage Eggs Remain Steady--Butter Has Become Firmer, With Fair Demand—Provision Market Shows Little Change, While Poultry is Easier—Comparisons With Provision Prices a Year Ago.

The upward trend in hogs which took place in several centres last week has become general all over the country. There seems to be a fair supply of hogs with a moderate demand for pork products. The bacon market in London, England, is reported firmer with a slight advance, Canadian bacon being quoted there last week at 60s to 64s.

It is interesting to note the difference between present provision prices and those which existed a year ago. Dressed hogs on the Toronto market, which are now quoted at $10 to $10.25, were $12 a year ago; live hogs at country points now $8.25 to $8.50, were $17 a year ago; lard in tierces now 13c, was 16 to 16½, and long clear bacon, now 12 to 12½ was then 14 to 14½c.

For the time of the year there is a plentiful supply of eggs throughout the country. The hens have evidently started in on their good work a few weeks earlier than usual, so that arriavls have been more plentiful, and consequently sagging prices have been the result. Since January 1st, in most centres, there has been a reduction ranging around 10 cents in new laid, but the price of storage remains about the same.

The butter markets which saw a decline last week is steady again with a fair enquiry. A small lot of Australian creamery butter was offered in the West from Vancouver last week, showing that a shipment of that butter had been made there.

The cheese market has put on a firmer appearance lately. The English market is firm while a report from Montreal says: "The amount of cheese for sale here has been reduced to small proportions, the great bulk of stocks belonging to English houses."

The poultry market shows no improvement, and a slight decrease in price is noted in some quarters.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—All cuts of smoked meats are steady and unchanged, with the consumptive demand fair for the season. Both pure and compound lard show a slight reduction in price. Barrel pork is not firm, and lower prices are expected.

There is a fair supply of butter with a normal demand. Troubles in the Purchasing of E gs Country General Merchant Has Difficulty in Buying and Claims He Doesn't Get Any Profit in Selling to Commission Men—Query Regarding the Meaning of Quotations in The Grocer.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—I thought I would like to write you about a subject that I think a good many of us country general merchants are all at sea about. I mean the new laid egg question.

We pay the farmers a certain price for new laid eggs and another lower price for held or packed eggs. I think one in about ten will admit their eggs are packed; a few more will admit they are mixed but the great majority will state they are new laid. We candle them and of course separate the grades as well as we can. Here is an instance that occurred today: A farmer's wife brought in four dozen eggs that she said were all new laid but the candle showed them all held. They had been packed in salt and you could taste it on them. This is our first but not our greatest difficulty.

We ship the eggs, sorted out as well as we can, putting all the held eggs in one part of the 30 dozen case and the new laid in the other to some commission house and this is a sample return from a case sent about a week ago:

New laid 22 doz. @35	$7.70
Held 6¾ doz. @ 26	1.69
Splits 1½ doz. @ 18	.27

After deducting express charges of 35 per case and 5 per cent. commission (some houses charge 10 per cent.) you can figure out the net returns per dozen and see how much money we lost, not made, on this case where we were paying the farmers 40c. per doz. for new laid and 30c. doz. for held. Sometimes the returns are not as good as this where there is breakage taken off, which sometimes occurrs in transit.

Last week's Canadian Grocer quoted new laid eggs 45 to 50c. doz., a price we never get. I called the attention of our house to this and they said that the price you see in The Canadian Grocer is the retail price which one or two farmers may get for an odd dozen or two that they bring into the market.

I have no doubt that many of my brother merchants have about the same tale to tell. If they will only speak out, it may result in some benefit to us in the future.

J. M. STEEL.

Clarksburg, Ont.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—In Mr. Steel's letter there are voiced no doubt some of the experiences of many general merchants throughout the country. It seems that most of them cannot depend entirely upon the word of those customers who exchange country produce for groceries and who are frequently disposed to seek the highest price for held eggs by calling them new laid.

But when 40 and 30 cents are paid farmers for new laid and held eggs respectively and only 35 and 26 cents are secured by the merchant it looks as if the dealer were paying too much.

There is evidently a little misunderstanding with regard to The Grocer's egg quotations. All our quotations in every market are those charged the retailer when he comes to purchase. Therefore the 35 and 40 cent quotations in the Toronto market are those paid to the wholesale produce merchants of Toronto by retailers who have to buy eggs in this way. The Grocer never depends on any stray quotation made by a farmer. These are apt to be different; in fact cases are known in Toronto where farmers who have brought guaranteed fresh eggs to the city have secured $1 per dozen at private houses. Therefore if quotations were secured from farmers there would be prices ranging all the way from 35 or 40 cents up to $1. The bulk of the eggs consumed in any large city pass through the hands of the wholesale and retail merchants of that city and it is on this basis that The Grocer secures its quotations which are always obtained from the best of sources.

WATER IN BUTTER.

Grocer Had Over Limit and Was Fined

Montreal, Jan. 19.—A Montreal grocer was recently found guilty under the Inspection and Sale Act on two charges of having offered for sale butter containing more than sixteen per cent. water. He was fined $10 or three months on each charge.

SOURCE OF "ENGLISH" WALNUTS

It is interesting to note that "English" walnuts do not come from England, but are shipped direct to America from France and Spain where they are grown. Many years ago walnuts from France and Spain were shipped to England and from that country they were sent into the markets of the world; but although they are now shipped direct, they are still known as "English" walnuts.

WHAT IS A FRESH EGG?

A California judge defines a fresh egg as follows:—"If the white does not cling to the shell, if it it not shrunken to exceed a quarter or an eigth of an inch, if the yolk is in its place, if the air cell is not darkened or discolored and the white exhibits the natural freshness of an egg when first laid, then the egg is fresh."

The Difference Between Haddie and Hake

Dealers Should be Careful About Purchasing These Fish as They Look Much Alike—Haddie is the Better Fish — Suggestions on Keeping Brine of Proper Strength on Salt Fish—If Sales are to be Large Dealer Must Use Special Selling Methods.

By a Retail Grocer.

The best time to sell fish is from January to April. Vegetables are then scarce and the people in many districts are tired of fresh meat, while Lent affects a large proportion of the people.

With the advantage which is enjoyed in this country in that the weather is cold enough to keep fish without any great expense, the retailer has certainly a chance to increase his sales in this line. Of course, proper methods must be employed in order that the business will pay a profit.

Keep Brine at Proper Strength.

Care should be taken with salt fish to see that they are well covered with brine or they will soon become rusty and stained. Do not pour water in on the brine already in the barrel or other receptacle, but mix it first in a separate dish and see that it is the right strength before pouring over the fish.

It is well to watch that the best quality fish are purchased or there is liable to be a decrease in the fish trade. In buying cured fish, purchase only from a dependable concern. Sometimes petty vendors, finding that their fish is becoming stale, will cure it themselves, and fish cured by some of these small vendors is often unwholesome, the curing merely hiding the defects.

Finnan Haddie, the sale of which is large in some places, in some seasons when they are scarce have Hake substituted for them. They are both similar in appearance, but the consumer, if he be any critic at all, will note the difference. When Hake is served as Haddie it is found to be of a coarse quality and it has not the good taste of haddie.

The only way in which the dealer may tell the difference is that Hake has a black or nearly black streak extending down the back on either side of the back bone, the customer will not likely note any difference in appearance, but will probably think that the dealer is selling a poor quality of Finnan Haddie.

Making a Counter Display.

The method of display has a good deal to do with sales and the merchant should look after this important detail. Fresh fish can be shown to good advantage if placed in flat dishes on the counter. These should, of course be water tight, so that drippings off the fish will not run on the counter. These holders should be cleaned out often, as a cleanly appearance of everything connected with the fish department promotes sales.

Buy in Small Quantities.

It is not wise to purchase fish in large quantities for the public have changeable appetites and while one week there might be a big demand for some particular line, the next week there might be little sale for it. Supplies should be bought oftener in smaller quantities and in various lines, thus keeping stocks fresh and a smaller amount of capital invested.

It must be remembered that putting in a stock of fish will not in itself promote sales. A certain amount of advertising will be necessary in order to get trade in this line running in your direction.

Fig Growers are Not Careful in Handling Fruit

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.—E. G. Smyth, a scientist of the bureau of agriculture of the United States, who was sent to Smyrna last spring to investigate the situation there with regard to the packing and shipment of figs to America, because of some poor fruit having been received, has returned to Washington. He indicates that conditions have improved and that Smyrna can send clean figs to America if the natives care to. He adds that the State Department and the Turkish Government are drawing up regulations to cover the case.

Mr. Smyth was in the fig belt five months. He camped in the orchards, lived in the packing houses and followed the life history of the moth. He experimented with all sorts of sterilizing devices and found that, owing to their method of construction and the fact that they were always in use, it was not possible to fumigate the packing houses. After experimenting with steam, hot air and hot water, he discovered it was possible to sterilize the figs by boiling them before they were packed.

The packers generally say, according to him, that they are willing to sterilize the figs for the American market, if there is some regulation adopted compelling all of the packers to go to the same expense. It is probable that this will be done and the problem of wormy figs thus will be solved.

Mr. Smyth says there are two crops of figs a year in Smyrna. The first, or June crop, is not very good, and it is allowed to fall and rot on the ground. To a large extent the moths get into these figs, and there they multiply and increase, so that when the figs the American public eats are laid out on mats to dry, there is a moth for every fig, and eggs are laid that ultimately develop into worms.

When the figs are brought into the "khans" or packing houses they are already infested with the worm.

Sanitary conditions he claims have been bad in the packing plants and the figs get infested with other things besides the worms. The Turkish Government recently has taken hold of this end of the business, and now has an inspector-general of agriculture, who is inclined to do his duty, and the "khans" and the workmen are being cleaned up. But this does not affect the fig moths.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Thomas Wood Co., the coffee importing house whose high grade coffees have made such progress in Canada the past few years, have issued a letter to their trade on the market conditions, urging the grocers to maintain the quality of their coffees even at an advanced price, claiming that the higher cost coffees are more economical as well as more delightful. Wood's coffees have an enviable reputation in the States also, where they enjoy a large patronage.

Hugh Walker & Son, wholesale fruit merchants, Guelph, Ont., have just completed a successful prize contest among their customers, which has been in progress throughout the year 1910. They offered for the three customers buying the largest number of boxes of "Golden Orange" brand oranges in the twelve months, a free trip to California and return, including hotel expenses. The distributing territory was divided into 3 districts. J. A. McCrea, Guelph, is the winner of the trip for District No. 1, with a purchase of 654 boxes in the year; John Sandlos, Hanover, Ont., wins the trip for district No. 2, and A. McIntosh, North Bay, Ont., is the winner for district No. 3. George Walker expects to accompany the party, which will leave Guelph about the end of the present month.

By referring to the advertisement of Laporte, Martin & Co., Limited, of Montreal, which appears on another page, it will be seen that this firm is quite decided to reduce its very considerable stock of many and standard lines of goods before February 1st, date of its stock-taking. An inquiry sent to this firm should bring to every dealer a very interesting reply. Write to-day.

W. D. Watson, for many years a retailer in Ayr, Ont., and for the past seven years a western traveler for Foley Bros. & Larson, Winnipeg, has been appointed buyer for the latter firm in succession to A. Badenoch, who takes a similar position with the Hudson Bay Company.

During 1911 the majority of holidays will fall on a Saturday or Monday. New Year's Day was celebrated on Monday; Dominion Day comes on a Saturday, and Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas Day will all fall on Mondays. Good Friday of course comes on Friday and May 24th this year will be a Wednesday.

The dairy and food department have commenced a crusade against dirty and unsanitary stores in Lansing, Mich. They will also see that the sanitary standard in living rooms over stores is raised to a higher level. It is claimed that in many stores the filthy conditions are very bad and the living rooms in some cases worse.

The Flour Market in Uncertain State

A Slight Weakness in Wheat Market Has Made Millers Doubtful in Regard to Flour Prices—A Moderate Demand for Both Flour and Cereals—Some Say Flour Market is Strong, While Others Are of a Different Opinion.

The firmness in the flour market was somewhat weakened on Monday by a slight decrease in wheat quotations, which was brought about by bearish reports from several important centres. Several millers looked for an advance in flour, but whether the easiness in wheat will break up this expectation is a question. No. 1 Northern wheat is quoted at 1.04 per bushel at Ontario bay ports

In regard to what the future of the flour market will be there is a difference of opinion. Some millers have ventured the prediction that even in the face of the slight easiness in wheat that higher prices will be seen in flour. Still there are others who believe that on account of the weakening in wheat and the liberal stocks held in general that flour will remain at the same price. All grades of Ontario flour advanced 10c per bbl. in St. John, N.B., last week.

Reports show that Canadian flour exports to South Africa have increased from $629,285 in 1906 to $1,115,500 in 1909, an increase of 77.3 per cent.

A report from England says. "The flour market ras ruled firm during the past few days and prices have an upward tendency."

A report from Ottawa intimates that Sir Richard Cartwright will appoint a Canadian trade agent to Venezuela, as the outlook for business between Canada and this country is good. Flour is selling in that country at sixteen dollars a barrel, and a great many articles produced in the Dominion should find a ready market there.

A moderate amount of business is being done in both flour and cereals throughout the country, but millers agree that trade would show an improvement.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—The hope of activity in the local flour market is not being realized, although there is a moderate routine business being done from day to day. Some days there is little of this, and others it is quite fair; but of real activity there is none reported.

TORONTO.

Flour.—The firmness which characterised the flour market has been somewhat weakened by a slight easiness in wheat prices. Some millers believe that even under the present conditions flour may see a little higher price, while others think that the weakness in wheat will keep the flour market at the present price. There is a fair demand for flour just now, considering the season of the year, as millers do not look for a big trade during the first month.

CUTTING IN FLOUR

A Montreal man, and an authority on the flour market, in referring to the present condition says there is no possible chance of flour advancing over present prices in the domestic market unless foreign markets appreciate in value.

"We are not warranted in advancing present market values on the domestic consumer." he said "until we can place flour for export at a higher price than at present. We would be pleased to see the present quotations for flour maintained, as beyond question there is considerable cutting going on, and booking ahead."

A Canadian cereal company has asked the Railway Commission to reduce the minimum weight of a carload. The company argues that since cereal products are not heavy they do not come up to the prescribed minimum weight, and, therefore, its freight should be figured on the actual weight of the contents.

LITTLE FLOUR CHATS FOR YOUNG GROCERS UNDER EIGHTY

I Always Tell The Buyer To Use More Water

It's funny, come to think of it.

That I should tell the cook how to bake.

But if she has never used a strong Manitoba flour before, she may complain that it doesn't work so easy—gets tighter in the dough.

Because, you see, she doesn't know what to do with it.

Plain ignorance on her part which I find very profitable to enlighten.

Just what I told Mrs. B. this minute:

Madam, said I, when your dough tightens under hand put in more water, no matter how little you have been using.

More water and less flour — that's where the saving comes in. And you'll find FIVE ROSES works much easier, goes together quicker, closer.

Trouble is you didn't give it enough water to work with.

It's because it's so unusually strong, so granular, that FIVE ROSES needs this extra water.

The result is you get many, many more pounds of bread from your flour bin than you have ever known before.

That is the economy of FIVE ROSES.

And the extra kneading—if you care to knead it longer—gives you such lofty, close-grained loaves; satin texture, cool and porous crumb that keeps fresh for days.

This makes FIVE ROSES worth much more than the price would indicate.

Customers who take this hint take FIVE ROSES evermore.

The moral, of course, is:

We both make more "dough."

Little Change in Fruit Trade Conditions

Retailers are Buying Only for Immediate Needs — Export of Apples from Nova Scotia According to One Estimate will be Only 200,000 Barrels This Year—Supply of Oranges Still Keeps Plentiful.

There are no important features in the fruit and vegetable trade just now, retailers ordering small amounts to supply their immediate needs. Reports of the apple crop from Nova Scotia show that the export of last year's crop will be only 200,000 barrels compared with 700,000 barrels in 1909, and of the crop, 135,000 barrels have already been forwarded.

Oranges are selling well and prices remain the same. It was expected by some dealers that a break might take place in the price of oranges, after the holiday, on account of the large quantities being shipped, but the good quality of the oranges increased sales in all parts of the country with the result that the price has been maintained.

Green Fruits.—Trade in these lines shows a slight improvement and while there is a fair demand, still dealers agree that things might be brisker. There is still a good supply of oranges with a fair demand. Some dealers believe that apples will rise above the present price.

Vegetables.—There is little change either in demand or price in this line. There is a good demand at the present time for California celery and the price is remaining firm at from $4.50 to $5 per case. There is also a fair trade in cucumbers and similar lines. Imported tomatoes have not yet come down to a level that would create much of a demand, the price now ranging at $6 per case of 6 baskets. Lettuce are quoted at an advance. The potato market has been somewhat weakened by the arrival of quantities from New Brunswick.

FRUIT MEN CONFER.

Toronto, Jan. 19.—On Monday of this week the fruit section of the Toronto Wholesale Fruit and Produce Association entertained wholesale fruit dealers from outside points and Toronto fruit brokers. During the afternoon there was a bowling game in which nearly all participated and showed their prowess over the ten pins.

In the evening a banquet was tendered the visitors at which addresses were delivered and trade conditions and evils talked over with a view to straightening out matters. It is the intention of the fruit men to hold further conferences along this line in the future.

H. Peters, Toronto, left last Sunday on a trip to Florida and the Bahamas.

Kelly, Taylor Co., Ltd., is the name of a new firm which has recently opened a grocery and provision store in Charlottetown, P.E.I. The company was incorporated by letters patent in Nov. 1910.

Annual Staff Gatherings

On Tuesday evening, January 3rd, the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, held their annual conference and banquet in the Royal Alexandria. There were present the entire Western traveling staff, and the local office staff, numbering about twenty-five young men. W. C. Mooney, vice-president, and manager occupied the chair, and beside him was J. S. Cooke, sect.-treasurer and assistant manager. An excellent menu had been arranged for, and unique programmes were prepared outlining the menu and toast list. After the banquet, a toast list was run off, consisting of music and speeches from members of the staff. Mr. Mooney in speaking to "Our Company," outlined the history of the Mooney Biscuit Co. since its birth, eight years ago, refering to the business in Stratford, Ont., and the purchase of the new branch in Winnipeg, from Foley Bros. & Larson, last year.

The social gathering, as remarked by Mr. Mooney, was a fitting conclusion to the relationship which existed between members of the staff and all departments of business. Co-operation, he said, was the keystone to all successful business enterprise, and he wished for the year of 1911 that co-operation between all departments and employes, as well as the customers, would be the motto. During the evening, a telegram was read from W. G. Mooney, president of the Mooney Biscuit Co., at Stratford, regretting that he was unable to be present. This message was received with hearty applause.

SAVES MONEY IN FREIGHT.

An Eastern Ontario country dealer states that he can save considerable money in freight and express by combing orders coming from the same place. For instance, last week he wanted a shipment of groceries and as he was also getting some fish from the same city, he had the two orders combined in one shipment, thus saving freight. He also keeps his stock up better in that way as when he runs short on goods handled by a special house, he can have a shipment included with his groceries.

The Fish Trade in Splendid Condition

A Good Trade in Fish for this Time of the Year—Better Supply of Fresh Fish at Coast—Newfoundland Herring Fisheries Did Not Turn Out as Well as Expected.

The fish trade seems to be in a healthy condition at the present time. Some improvements in arrivals of fresh fish, especially cod and haddock, are noticed at the coast. On account of stormy weather, the catches of lobsters have been small. There are good supplies in nearly all lines of smoked fish. The herring fisheries on the coast of Newfoundland have not turned out as well as at first expected, which has caused a noted firmness in that line.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—There is considerable improvement in the receipts of fresh fish at Halifax, several vessels having arrived during the week with fair sized cargoes for the season of the year. The fish consisted principally of cod and haddock for which there is a good demand. Halibut is scarce and no fresh stock is being landed at this port. Reports from along the western shore say that only small catches of lobsters are being made. This is due to the stormy weather that has prevailed along the coast, the fishermen being unable to set their traps. Most of the lobsters that are being taken are shipped alive to Boston, where high prices are obtained.

The local market is now well supplied with smoked fish such as finnan haddies, fillets, and kippered herring. There is a good demand for dry and pickled fish, the stocks of which are gradually becoming smaller. There is a much better demand for fish in the foreign markets, and the shipments are increasing, thus greatly reducing the home supply. One schooner sailing from here recently took away over 4,000 packages for Brazil, the cargo being valued at $35,000.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO—The trade in fish is running along smoothly with a fair demand, especially in sea fish lines. Prices remain about the same. Pickled lake herring in 100 lb. kegs are quoted at $4.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

St. John's—The latter stage of the herring catch did not prove as successful as it at first promised. A fortnight ago herring were reported plentiful on the west coast but have now apparently gone into deeper waters. Several vessels which were unable to get full cargoes, offered higher prices. Conditions, however, seem to be somewhat better on the south coast. There is a good demand on the United States markets for herring just now. The same prices for this line prevail in St. John's, but there is reason to believe that higher prices may be seen on account of the shortage.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—Trade in frozen fish is as good as could be expected this time of the year, weather is favorable, and the market does not show the least sign of anxiety. Some lines, particularly haddock and haddies, are more than ample to fill the requirements at present, but there are possibilities of fishing being stopped any moment now on the coast, when the apparent surplus will vanish quickly. Frozen lake fish are in good demand, a rough spell of weather has stopped the fish coming east, but when normal conditions are restored fish will be more plentiful. Halibut and salmon are in good demand, salmon particularly. Pickle and salt fish are beginning to move, holders expect to sell at too big a price and it has a depressing effect on the demand and for this reason the quantities sold will be much below the average. Oyster trade, both in bulk and shell, is satisfactory.

Items Done in Brief for Busy Dealers

Pleasant Odors Should Emanate From the Grocery Store—A Hint to the Order Clerk—Grocers' Association Want Government to Prevent Fake Sales—Small Dealer Having Difficult Time in San Francisco—People Looking More to Quality Than Formerly.

It is claimed that the successful grocery store can be detected by odors, at least in many instances, and that the store which greets the nostrils with a certain glorious combination of odors of coffee, tea and spices is almost always a paying investment.

Orders clerks should remember not to waste time when an order is presented to them by indolently scanning the items and gazing over the orders. Take the first item and start to work and the order will certainly be prepared with greater rapidity.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Spokane will urge, the Washington Legislature to enact a law prohibiting false and misleading advertising such as those of "damaged goods," "bankrupt sales," "fire sales" and the like where merchandise that is not in any way "damaged" etc., is offered for sale.

If the man who works with care, precision, energy and economy cannot succeed, what is to become of the fellow who does not recognize any of these virtues in his business?

During 1909, the Montreal markets disposed of over $200,000 worth of frog legs, 50 per cent. of which were produced in Quebec Province.

The Hartford City, Ind. butchers have by agreement cut out the free delivery of meats, claiming that present high prices have made it necessary for them to curtail expenses. Nearly every shop has heretofore maintained a delivery system.

A letter from San Francisco says:—The small grocer appears to be at more disadvantage in San Francisco than formerly, a marked tendency being noticed of late towards the increase of the large stores' business at the expense of the small competitor. The high class trade seems to gravitate towards a few large grocery establishments even more than in former years, being attracted by fine displays, good delivery service and persistent advertising, while the department stores are picking up a large volume of the cheaper trade.

System is a splendid thing and a virtual necessity to the success of any business. But it should not be carried so far that it becomes burdensome.

People who used to pay a lot of attention to prices are looking for quality now. Don't be afraid to ask the price for high class goods.

Following a decision in favor of protected prices handed down by the Federal court of Northern California, another protected price suit has been brought in the Superior court of that State. This is expected to settle the question of protected prices and the manufacturers' rights in this direction. A retail grocery firm is being charged with cutting the price of chocolate made by the manufacturers in this case. On each chocolate container there is a sticker bearing notice that the goods are sold to the retailer only on the agreement that he sell them at the price fixed by the manufacturer. These are the bare facts of the case which it is believed will be fought to the last ditch and may only be settled by the Supreme Court of the United States.

In Australia the public wants its coffee mixed with a certain amount of chicory. A grocer who was prosecuted for selling adulterated coffee said in court that 99 out of every 100 persons never asked for nor expected to get pure coffee. It was shown that this grocer's coffee contained from five to ten per cent. of chicory, and the court fined the grocer $25 on the ground that the coffee was adulterated.

Bologna sausage is named from the town of Bologna in Italy, where it was originally made.

The salmon pack runs in cycles of four years, there being three "lean" years and one "fat year;" 1909 was a "fat" year while 1910 was a "lean" year.

The honey bee annually produces a crop of honey valued at $20,000,000.

HALTING THE DEAD-BEATS.

Story of How Western Merchants Prevent Them Running Up Large Bills.

The following is one example of how Oregon grocers assist one another:—

"Not long ago a family which has been trading with me for some time got offended because I asked them for the money they owed me. It amounted to $25. They transferred their business to another merchant in town. He came to me at once and asked me about them. I told him that they had owed me for nine months and when I asked for my money they quit. We both investigated and found they were not paying their bills. He shut down before his bill amounted to more than $3. They went to another, and he came to us and cut them off quickly. The family is running a bill in a small town several miles down the road now. We merchants get together and talk things over. Competition is good and active between us, but we believe in fair competition."

CALENDARS FOR 1911.

The calendar issued this year in connection with the Intercolonial Railway is typical of the provinces down by the sea. The moose's head occupies a prominent position to the top of the calendar encircled by pine needles and cone decorations. The illustration shows an Intercolonial Railway train passing a beautiful body of water bounded by mountains topped by sunlit clouds. The calendar is indeed an attractive one.

HINTS FOR GROCERS.

To keep tobacco from becoming dry, keep a glass of water in the tobacco case.

To keep cheese, moist and fresh and free from mould, wrap in cloth wet with vinegar.

To prevent evaporation, keep the lid of your coal oil tank tightly closed.

Do not unwrap more than one day's supply of oranges or lemons at a time, as they keep much firmer when wrapped.

If you want your coffee to keep its strength and flavor, see that the container is always kept tightly closed.

Keep molasses and syrup in a place where they will do no damage to other goods if a can should start to leak.

Grocery Advertising

By Wm. Borsodi

It contains suggestions for special sales, bargain sales, cash sales, etc.; ideas for catch lines or window cards, and many hints for the preparation of live advertising copy. A collection of short talks, advertising ideas and selling phrases used by the most successful grocery advertisers.

PRICE $2.00

ALL ORDERS PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

MacLean Publishing Co.

143-149 University Ave., Toronto

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

When writing advertisers kindly mention having seen the advertisement in this paper.

The Advertising Manager of what is Probably the Largest Firm in Canada Manufacturing a Grocery Line Writes as Follows : : : : :

"At a time when no salesman could hope to see him the dealer eagerly reads trade news, profit news, news of price changes. And advertising is news. So he reads the advertising too. If he doesn't, then the advertiser is at fault. The Grocer introduces you to its readers—it's now up to you to plead your case.

"Do the merchants read the ads? Well our salesmen report many references to our copy in the course of interviews. Prospects called on for the first time seem familiar with our selling points. Some have adopted suggestions made. This saves selling time, does part of the salesman's work, interests the buyer before he has been called on, makes him impervious to Cheap-Johns because he is a 'knowing' retailer.

"We have received inquiries from British Columbia, from the West Indies even, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, Ontario, Quebec, and Canadian parts remote. This is the reach of The Grocer. And it goes where it wouldn't pay a salesman to go unless he were sure of an order.

"Once we had a little booklet for retail distribution. Casually and meekly we mentioned it in The Grocer without the foreknowledge of our own agents throughout the Dominion. Immediately our agencies asked for supplies to meet the demands of the readers of The Grocer. And letters came, and postals came for a month after that issue from people we had never heard of before. Sure The Grocer knew a lot of people we didn't know and a lot of people knew The Grocer who didn't know us, or, somehow, didn't know us exactly as we wanted them to know us.

"Eight thousand interviews 52 times a year for $800. Yes, I consider it an investment of the gilt-edged type.

"But you must stay with it. It is like every other advertising—no place for a quitter. It'a year or nothing. It is even more important than consumer advertising—it secures distribution, without which a moderate general appropriation brings in nothing but bills. And, you know, scratch a retailer and you find a hundred families.

INSURE THE CONFIDENCE OF YOUR CUSTOMERS

It is the Confidence of your prospective customer you desire to get.

It is the Confidence your customer has in you that leads him or her to purchase an article that you may draw to his or her attention.

Your customers are going to advertise your business for you, if you see that Quality Products only are sent them.

On the other hand, a poor article sent to a particular customer, and your customers are all particular more or less, means Loss of Confidence, Loss of Trade, and having your business advertised as not being just as it should be.

A Faultless Product

¶ There is no better factory in the world adapted solely to the production of Macaroni and similar pastes than that of Felix Codou in Marseilles, France. Every modern appliance is there—it is scrupulously clean—the original has been enlarged several times to meet the steadily increasing demand from particular people.

CODOU'S MACARONI

¶ Vermicelli, Spaghetti, Fancy Letters and Figures, as well as Macaroni, are the specialties produced—each one has a national reputation for high quality.

Taganrog Russian Wheat is used exclusively—the wheat that yields the BEST results—the wheat that is peculiarly adapted to the desired purpose. "Codou's"—that is the name to think of when the best is wanted.

call your customers' attention to CAMPBELL'S SOUPS, which they will find more palatable than they can make; more convenient. "Just add hot water, bring to a boil, and serve;" more economical, because everything but the hot water is in the can; and, it is not necessary to buy several ingredients. All of which points will cause them to buy CAMPBELL'S SOUPS regularly— even to keep a supply in the house if you suggest it, because, among the "21 Kinds" can be found a meal or part of a meal for any occasion. And CAMPBELL'S SOUPS pay you a good profit.

"Red Cross" Brand Baked Beans

More for your customers' money—more quality and more quantity.

There is a green label on the top of every "Red Cross" can, telling your customer that it contains more beans to the can than 3's flat sold at higher prices.

And it tells him how to verify it. "Red Cross" Beans are hand-picked from the choicest crops grown in the vicinity of our factories.

The sauces and spices used are chosen with exceeding care as to flavor and purity. Better beans are not packed.

"Red Cross" Beans are supplied also in 1's, 2's, 3's Family and 3's Tall. The 1's are suited for small families; the 2's for families of medium size; the 3's Family for large families; and the 3's Tall for boarding houses and hotels.

IMPORTANT DECISION

New York State Pure Food Law and Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce

Department of Agriculture declares Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce to be a Genuine Worcestershire Sauce.

(Copy)

STATE OF NEW YORK

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Raymond A. Pearson, Commissioner.

George L. Flanders, First Assistant Commissioner.

Hon. William F. Sheehan,
37 Wall Street,
New York City.

Albany, January 11, 1911.

Dear Sir:—

The ex-Attorney General before retiring from office, failed to render an opinion upon the question which was argued by you before him relative to Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce."

He stated, however, in a conference with the Commissioner of Agriculture, that the question involved was, in his judgment, similar to the question involved in the case of Lea & Perrins' "Worcestershire Sauce"; that he found it difficult to distinguish between them; and that the line of demarkation was so indefinite as to make it doubtful, in his mind, whether the Commissioner of Agriculture would be able to maintain the position that the Holbrooks Company should brand or label the said goods to show the constituents thereof. He further stated that his judgment was that this sauce should be treated in the same way as the Lea & Perrins' sauce and for similar reasons.

In view of this attitude, I am therefore constrained to say to you that no further attempts under the provisions of the present law will be made to require the manufacturers of Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce" to label the goods so as to show their constituents, nor to prevent them from using the word "Worcestershire."

Respectfully,

R. A. PEARSON,
Commissioner.

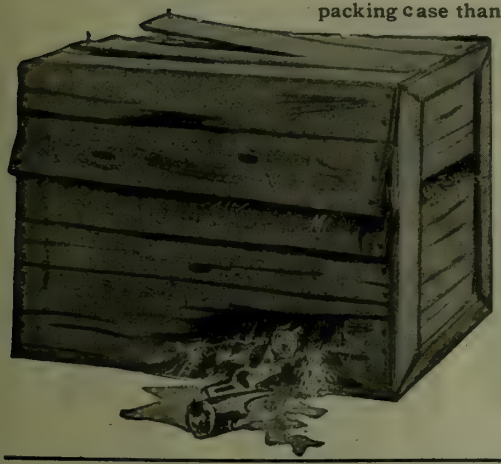
HOW DOES YOUR PRODUCT REACH THE CONSIGNEE?

Do you wish it to reach your customer in a broken, splintered case, battered and bruised?

Do you want the first impression to be a bad one?

Are you fond of negotiations over replacement of damaged goods, and return freight charges?



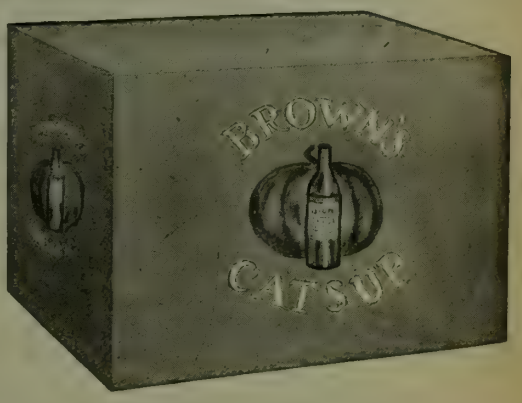
Or do you wish your product to arrive as clean and fresh as when it was packed—a condition to invite further trade?

Don't you want your printed label on the package to be thoroughly legible, and the consignee's name to be clear and readable? Then use

"H and D" Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes

They will surely protect your shipment against water, damp and damage, and will save on each shipment the unnecessary freight expense of wood.

No matter what you have for shipment, we can design a better, cheaper and more satisfactory packing case than you are now using—a case that will save from 10% to 87% in freight charges, 25% to 50% in packers' time, and 90% of your storage space.



A request to have us design a specimen case specially suited to your needs, will put you under no OBLIGATION. We will be only too glad to do so! Write us what you ship, and ask for free booklet

Why Farmers Should Trade at Home

Treasurer of Ontario Retail Merchant's Association Reasons That This Tends To the General Good of the Country and Tells the Farmer so—Mail Order Houses are Unnecessary Institutions He Claims—The Part the Merchant Should Play in the Distribution of Food Products.

By M. Moyer in Farmer's Magazine.

After an extended trip through the great North-west, studying the conditions of the country and trade conditions in particular, I am more firmly convinced than ever that our methods of supplying the consuming public with their requirements are decidedly unsatisfactory, and that a radical change is imperative if that country is expected to develop into a desirable place in which to live.

We have already decided proof of the ill effects of the lonliness of the prairie, on the health of the people, as shown by the rapid increase of the inmates of the lunatic asylum at Brandon. The tendency is to have large farms, which isolates the settlers from each other, and, therefore, the desirability or the necessity of having towns and villages within easy reach from all parts of the country is evident. These towns are springing up all along the railway lines, but as soon as they are started they are handicapped and crippled by the mail order houses, which do nothing to improve the country or make it more desirable for the people.

One Depends on the Other.

The towns are all suffering, and in proportion as they cease to thrive so will the farms in the neighborhood. I do not think that all these new towns should grow to be cities, but they should be thrifty enough to give the farming community good service, and afford them the convenience of meeting for social and business purposes.

All the farmers, in fact, everybody in the country, desire these towns in which they take considerable pride, and regard them as absolute necessities. While they do this they have, however, never learned to understand their own interests sufficiently to support them for the benefit of the neighborhood. A good town in a neighborhood is what a good house is on a farm, and where the latter enhances the value of the farm, the former enhances the value of the neighborhood. The success of the one is so closely connected with the other that neither can suffer without affecting the other. It is, therefore, important and necessary that the relations of the two are well defined and understood.

If this is done it will be clearly seen that the mail order houses cannot possibly on any reasonable ground claim any support from them. Besides, they are an extra expense, and a destroyer of the means which make for happiness and comfort.

Advises Educational Campaign.

With these concerns, powerful as they are, I believe if the people understood trade conditions and a fair and just division of labor, the trade of the country would soon revert into its natural condition and the business would be done through the retail stores in home towns. A properly arranged educational campaign throughout the country would, in my judgment, right the wrong which now exists. Owing to the unsatisfactory trade conditions the farmers have organized themselves into "Farmers' Institutes," the labor people into "Labor Unions," the retail merchants into the "Retail Merhants' Associations," the wholesale men into the "Guild," and the manufacturers into the "Manufacturers' Association." Each organization seems to have built a fence around itself and within its own limits it tries to improve its own conditions.

While all were doing some good, they were, however, getting more suspicious, as well as more antagonistic to each other, and while the desired results were not fully obtained, they, however, prepared the way to do the great work which now has to be done, and that is to work out the proper relations of the industries represented by these different organizations.

The Distributor Neglected.

The Government has done something to assist the farmers in agriculture, and by protecting the manufacturing industries, but no assistance was given to the distributors of food products. It paid no attention to them, and even some of our legislators considered the wisdom of putting the middleman out of business, and yet the prosperity of the country depends more on these men than on any others. The man who makes or produces a useful article does well, but the man who finds a market for that article and brings profitable returns is a better and a bigger man.

When one essential branch of our industrial fabric has been so badly treated and the others have been petted and fostered, is it any wonder that the former suffered from unfair competition, and that it has fallen into a state of almost helplessness in filling the responsible position it must occupy?

All these industries are essential. The merchants are an important factor in the complete outfit, and must be treated with as much consideration as any of the others. This the merchants demand as their right.

The only system that can give the people complete and satisfactory service is admitted to be, through the wholesale and retail stores, and if this is true, then the consuming public cannot afford to have that system crippled, on which it must depend for its supplies. The people demand the convenience of these stores and, therefore, they must remain and be protected and supported. If this system must remain, is it reasonable to suppose that anything can be saved by the additional cost of supporting mail order houses which can only cripple the stores on which the people must depend, and are not able to render the service they need?

Believing that a double system is too expensive and not in the interests of the people, it is natural to conclude that the people will cheerfully support any effort that will be made to revive and improve the true system, rather than add the expense of a counterfeit which cannot fill the bill. We do not ask for Government aid, we appeal to the people, and ask the people themselves to settle this matter. Business conditions should be investigated and confidence between the consumer and the merchant established.

Merchant and Farmer Should Meet.

Representatives from the Farmers' Institutes should meet with representatives of the merchants. If the merchants expect the farmers and working people to deal with them, they also have the right to say what kind of service they want. Therefore they should meet and work out in dollars and cents the best that can be done for the country.

This movement is in the interests of the general public and not for any one class. The object is to work out the true relations of the various industries and build up a system which will be fair to all and make our country the grandest in the world. The conditions in Ontario and the eastern provinces are somewhat different from the west, but the same unfair, unnatural and deceptive trade conditions prevail, and the same remedy will apply as in the west, and as the east is better organized they should take the initiative.

Every Board of Trade, every branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, and every individual merchant should take an active part in this movement. If this is done, the equilibrium of trade will soon be restored, and the wealth of the country will be distributed among its people and not flow to one centre at the expense of the entire country.

Merchants are Asked to Sign Petition

Concerted Action Against the Co-operative Bills in the House of Commons—Letter and Copy of Petition Sent Out by Dominion Treasurer of Retail Merchants' Association.

Montreal, Jan. 26.—J. A. Beaudry, Dominion Treasurer, Retail Merchants' Association, has been sending out letters to the various trades calling attention to the Co-operative Bills before the House of Commons and urging all to sign an enclosed petition to be eventually forwarded to the House of Commons and Senate if necessary.

Mr. Beaudry's letter reads as follows :

RE CO-OPERATIVE BILLS.

Dear Sirs,—The Co-Operative Bills which have been introduced at the present session of parliament propose to grant special privileges for the formation of wholesale and retail Co-operative Societies, whose object is to do away with the individual wholesale and retail merchants.

The members of our association, all over Canada, are strongly opposed to the adoption of these measures, and to oppose them successfully this year we feel that we want to show the government and the different members of parliament that the great majority of those interested in trade to-day are opposed that special privileges be granted to any one class of the society.

We do not desire to shut out any one from starting into business, but we believe that every one who desires to limit his responsibility should do so according to the Companies Act, under which any can become incorporated, whether they are industrials, merchants, farmers or laborers.

Therefore, will you please have the enclosed petition signed by your employes and return the same at once. The time is short and your immediate attention is requested.

Also please write the representative of your electoral division in the House of Commons and ask him to oppose the measure.

J. A. BEAUDRY,
Dominion Treasurer, R.M.A.
Montreal, Que.

The petition which is ruled for the name, occupation and address is printed in both French and English. It is :

Montreal, Jan. 12th, 1911.

To The Honorable the Senate and House of Commons of the Dominion of Canada in Parliament assembled :—Ottawa.

The Petitioners undersigned, humbly sheweth :

That we, the undersigned, electors of the electoral division of ..... in the province of ..... are strongly opposed to the adoption of Bill No. 29. "An Act respecting Co-Operation," and also Bill No. 11, "An Act respecting Co-Operative Credit Societies," now before the House of Commons as both bills purpose to grant special privileges to Co-Operative Societies and do not offer any guarantees to the investing public, as to the organization and administration of such societies ;

That we hereby support the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, Inc. in opposing the passage of the said Bills and pray that you will reject these bills, when they come before you for consideration,

And your Petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray, etc.

A large number of merchants are taking active parts in this opposition and interesting developments are expected.

Suggests Free Lance Arrangement in Buying

Opinion of a Dealer Who Believes in Quantity Price—Advises Clerks to Have Specified Duties—Carefulness Necessary in Sending Out Goods—Running a Special Saturday Sale.

By R. J. E. McCrea.

System in store management should start with the buying end and finish with the delivery service.

Buying should be a sort of free-lance arrangement, the lowest prices and the highest quality, irrespective of friendships with different firms of travelers. When a staple or a sure seller can be bought in quantity it's good buying. An experiment, no matter what the price, should be bought lightly. Every article should have a cheaper price for large quantities.

Travelers are a merchant's best friends and the Trade Paper an invaluable counsellor.

Clerks should all have definite duties ; one ought to be the window-dresser and in charge of the front shelves, another responsible for the cellar and the back shelves, the junior the top flat and back room. One clerk should be responsible for store cleanliness, sweeping, dusting, etc., and where there are four clerks, two should be order fillers and two order takers.

An imperative rule in our store is that all orders be checked by a second party bearing his initial so that in case of error he may be held responsible.

Freight and Want Books Advisable.

A Want-Book should be kept ready for reference for the buyer, and all incoming freight entered in a freight book for invoice checking. Clerks should be encouraged to push the profitable lines, one each day.

A ticketed article is half sold. If clerks could be taught to realize the great importance of sales over everything else and the consideration and courtesy due a customer for giving his trade to you there would be fewer complaints of unobliging salesmen. Their very position and possible increase in salary depends on the amount of sales made and they should realize that every customer confers a personal favor on them by dealing with the store and they should show their appreciation by their manner and pleasant word of thanks.

Special sales are a big help to Saturday's business. Say you buy ten cases of oranges a little cheaper than the regular price—a 28 cent line for 22 cents—fill your window with them alone in pyramid piles, etc., and ticket them something like this :

GET THE HABIT.
Buy a Dozen,
29 Cents,
Regular 35 Cents.
Oranges are Better than Medicine.

A January clean up sale always rushes off the odds and ends besides moving many profitable lines. Advertise your sale well in an ordinary over-the-counter style of talk. Dress your window and display on the counter the advertised line and you will pretty nearly be guaranteed a successful sale. Remember a woman will buy a 49 cent article when she will pass by a 50 cent line.

Pay Drivers for New Names.

Where there is more than one delivery man, the route should be divided and one man go the same trip all the time. One man should be responsible for the horses and the buying of hay, oats, etc., as he can buy cheaper tnan the proprietor since he can beat the farmer's prices better than the merchant. The sellers are likely the dealer's best customers and expect more from him. Drivers should be encouraged to bring new customers in and be paid 25 cents for names of new residents. Above all the proprietor should strictly adhere to all rules and regulations himself as clerks naturally attempt to pattern themselves after their employer.

Some store windows would justify the belief that the real original "old curiosity shop" had been discovered. Although a good variety of articles in a window is wise, there is no necessity for a heterogenious collection of odds and ends. Slovenly confusion of goods will never awaken the desire of possession in the mind of the passer-by.

A merchant's business system should not be like Dickens' Circumlocution Office—the maximum of red tape and detail combined with the minimum of effectiveness. A simple system of bookkeeping is all that is necessary in the average sized store. Nevertheless, it is essential that the books be well kept so that the merchant can always tell where he stands.

Criticism of Two Western Canadian Ads.

Ad.-Critic Sees Many Good Points in Copy Sent From Winnipeg and Brandon—He Considers That Short Talks Telling of Merits of Goods Mentioned is the Most Effective Method of Getting Readers Interested—A Catchy Introduction Advisable.

By A. H. McKay.

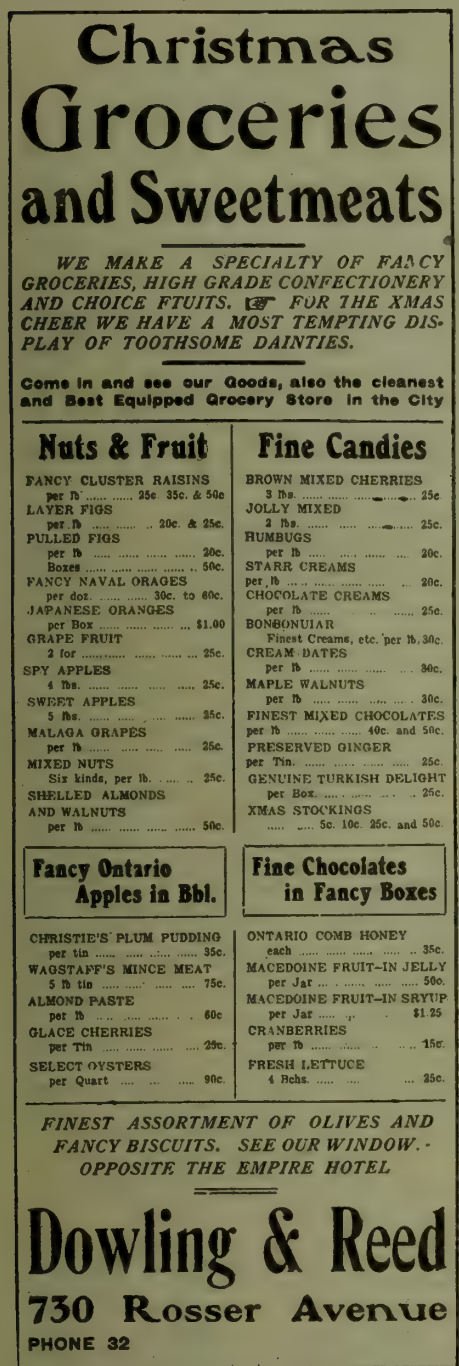
The Christmas advertisements contributed for criticism by The W. H. Stone Co., Winnipeg, and Dowling & Reed, Brandon, Man., illustrate that Western Canadian grocers are up to the front in the matter of writing effective copy. On previous occasions we have had the opportunity to congratulate the former company on their ad-writing ability and particularly A. E. White, the secretary, the man who is responsible for them.

As we have frequently before pointed out, the selling power of a newspaper advertisement depends upon its ability to attract attention, its power to hold attention until the prospective purchaser had read it carefully and last, but of the most importance, to make such an impression on the mind of the reader that he or she decides to purchase an article advertised.

Watch Fancy Borders.

In the first place the ad. of the W. H. Stone Co., is set in an attractive and appropriate Christmas border, but it is not overdone. Fancy borders should be carefully and sparingly used. Better use a straight rule than something too fancy which will detract from the ad. itself.

In writing the introduction to this ad. Mr. White used very good judgment. The first part of the opening sentence at once demands attention and just The remainder of the statement and also about the proper sized type is used. of the introduction is strong enough to convince any prospective unprejudiced purchaser.



By advertising a list of the goods carried and naming the prices, the company aims to impress upon readers the truth of the statement made in the introduction, that the prices are right. The talks about poultry and mincemeat are the kind that make the mouth water and if similar statements had been made about the dried and green fruits, the ad. would have been still more effective. If there is anything distinctive to be said about any article advertised it is generally conceded good advertising to say it.

The same may be said about the Christmas puddings. Some critics would say that an advertiser was assuming that the general public knew more than they really do when the advertiser simply mentions the brand. A little talk as well about the merits of the article is far better than simply naming the brand even if that brand is actually a name and quality familiar to every householder or prospective purchaser.

Strive for Catchy Heading.

The writer of the Dowling & Reed ad. is also to be commended. Possibly a more catchy and stronger first-introduction could have been secured than, "Christmas Groceries and Sweetmeats," for instance: "You want the Best at Christmas Time," or "To Make Assurance Doubly Sure," and follow up by saying, "purchase your Christmas groceries where quality is made the particular feature, etc." No criticism can be made of the remainder of the introduction as it contains convincing talks and is not too lengthy. The naming of a list of articles with prices is another good feature of this ad. but, as stated above, it is always a good policy to devote a little space describing the quality and other merits of the goods advertised.

Let us suppose there are two advertisements side by side and occupying the same space with exactly similar introductions in a newspapee; but in the one the items are simply mentioned with their prices, while the other has brief, spicy little talks telling about the goodness and good value of the goods advertised. Of course the same number of articles could not be mentioned in the one as in the other but every akvertiser will admit that the latter will produce the best results because it arouses a greater desire on the part of the reader to buy.

MERCHANTS CONSIDER ADOPTION OF UNIFORM SIGN

This Would be for the Purpose of Assuring the Public That at Least These Dealers are Honest—How an Agency Collects Accounts for its Clients—Inspector of Weights and Measures Criticized.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—The Toronto branch of the Retail Merchants' Association held its annual meeting last week, when besides the election of officers for the coming year, some interesting discussions in regard to matters pertaining to the retail trade took place.

The officers who will guide the affairs of the Association for the coming year are :—

President, R. W. Dockeray ; first vice-president, H. Ellis ; second vice-president, G. A. Cooper; treasurer, F. C. Higgins ; secretary, George E. Gibbard.

Delegates to Exhibition Board, J. F. Holloway and George E. Gibbard.

Delegates to Associated Charities, E. M. Trowern and W. J. Hanna.

The association expressed its disapproval of the statements made by J. J. McConvey, inspector of weights and measures, who addressed the Household Economic Association on January 10. In his address he warned the women of Toronto to be on their guard against being given short weight by dishonest merchants. A heated discussion took place and a resolution passed, "that this branch protests most emphatically against any public officers of the Crown being permitted to insult a body of citizens and we call upon the Minister of Inland Revenue to demand an explanation of the charges or a public retraction of the same."

The members of the general executive board were requested to consider the advisibility of adopting a sign or trade mark suitable for placing over the store doors of all members of the association and that advertisements be placed in the leadiog papers calling public attention to the fact that the merchants over the doors of which these signs appear are endeavoring to conduct trade on a fair and square basis.

The opinion was expressed that the city should not charge the merchants on the business street any additional sum on account of the cluster lamps placed there, as a large sum is already paid by the merchants in the form of a business tax.

The attention of members who give accounts to collect to a local agency with head offices in the United States was drawn to the fact that for the first 15 accounts they hand in they will be charged $1.50 each and additional ones, a graded fee and that this amount is deducted from the sum collected. Many merchants it was affirmed were not aware of this fact when they hand in their accounts.

The advisibility of forming a Board of Arbitration to settle disputes among members as provided by the charter of the association was discussed also, while the inactivity of branches of the association throughout the province in urging helpful legislation gave rise to a lengthened debate, so that it was a late hour before all the business had been concluded.

Various lines of future activity were presented, the principal and one for immediate action being that of opposing the co-operative bill introduced into Parliament at Ottawa at the present session.

A keener interest in municipal affairs was recommended as well as the desirability of members taking more active part in municipal life.

The financial statement presented was a detailed report of the operations for the nine months preceding the 31st of December last. This showed that the Executive had been enabled to pay off a considerable amount of the old indebtedness and start the new year with a surplus of $589 of asets over liabilities.

TO OVERCOME ACCOUNT DISPUTES

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 26.—Several Woodstock merchants have started a system of billing customers every Monday morning. Each customer receives his or her bill. In this way they hope to overcome a great deal of disputing which arises out of long running accounts.

Merchants, particularly grocers, have their troubles regarding delivery. Here several have certain hours for delivery to certain parts of the city. This is appreciated by customers and saves the grocer many an unnecessary trip.

Squeezing the Employer for More Pay

A Clerk's Demands at a Time When he Considered the Business Needed His Services—He was Allowed to go—A Blind Ad. for a Clerk and One of the Replies—He Wanted to Take Home the Spotted Fruit and get off to Play in the Band—What a Good Organization Does.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Perfect organization, the kind which builds up a force capable of doing extra work without strain when occasion demands, is one of the greatest factors for betterment a merchant can have in his business. Many times I have thought that my force was such as would just enable me to jog along at an even pace through the daily work, but would not stand any extra push or demand; and I have been pleasantly surprised to find that, on the occurrence of illness, or from some other cause, the gap left by the absent one was filled without seeming to disturb things, and business was done without inconvenience. It's a great thing so to work yourself and so to train others that they will think of the task to be accomplished as much more important than any little matter of personal convenience.

When Phone Wires Failed.

I have just had an experience which illustrates this point. We no longer take orders by means of an order route, finding it a waste of time; but we do have a large business by telephone. A recent storm covered our 'phone wires with sleet and broke down a great many. The damage was so great that in many sections of town there was no 'phone service at all for many days together. But our customers did not suffer for a minute. Immediately on learning the condition of things, I planned order routes for two men and started them out. This served the double purpose of getting the business and notifying all customers in all directions that we were going to care for them. Next day it was only necessary to send out one man; and he has alternated ever since between the two main lines of travel, still continuing to call on those whose 'phones are "hung up."

This matter of taking two men right out of a business which is busy enough every day, might seem to endanger the correct doing of the regular business; but the way things adjusted themselves was very gratifying. No time was lost; no customers were disappointed; things went along much as usual. It all came about through having the men willing and ready. I had simply to assign new pieces of work to each man, in addition to his usual duties, and the gap made by the order men was filled. True, we all had to do some extra hustling, but that seldom hurts anybody.

Clerk Wanted More Pay.

Christmas is the season when some clerks "go on a strike." They seem to reason that it's a good time to "squeeze the old man for a raise." Looking around through the busy store and calculating how things will be during the "Christmas Rush," they figure to take advantage of conditions and get more money. They further reason that, if they fail to get more at the place where they are working, they can get in somewhere else, where extra hands seem to be needed, and maybe they may be able to retain the new job after the holidays. At any rate, it's worth taking chances on, or seems to be worth it, to many of them.

One came to me just before Christmas with this kind of a demand. He made it as smooth and soft as possible, saying he knew I was under heavy expense already and that I could get men for what I was paying him. Said further that he did not want to "do me dirt" and that he had nothing against me or my treatment of him; it was simply a question of more pay and he knew he could get more. He went on to say that he knew also, that this was a bad time to quit; but he felt it needful to look up more wages now, if he were going to get fixed elsewhere for the winter. He ended by giving me two days' notice!

Fifty Dollars Per Month.

I was thinking over matters as he was talking. I reviewed before my mind the kind of treatment he had had. He is a hood clerk; does his work well and with unusual intelligence, and I was truly sorry to have him go back on my expectations of him in that way. He came about three months ago. Being a man of some experience, I hired him for fifty dollars per month. I told him when I engaged him that fifty dollars was probably the limit of wages he could expect to earn in the vacant position. During the time he has worked he has had his check regularly, as all others; and somehow, it seemed to me that, comparing his present position with his situation when he was out of work, he was doing well enough to wait and take chances of betterment right where he was.

As he went on with his remarks (which I listened to without comment), I could not help thinking that he was exhibiting a sad flaw in his makeup in proposing to give me such notice on leaving such a position; and I have found, or think I have, that one can't work out flaws very easily when once they become part of a character. Thus, when he had finished his "little spiel," I simply said that more expense was out of the question with me now, and that I must let him go. As to there being anything particularly "bad" about the month of December as a time for leaving, I did not think much of that, for there were really only two or three days during which it might be "bad," and we could probably plow through that time. I told him I was sorry to lose him; that his work was O.K. and that I had hoped he'd be one of the permanent ones; but, if he felt as he had outlined, it were best for him to go. Then I went into some details of his plans with him, and asked him what he thought of doing; threw out a suggestion or two to help him along, and bade him good night.

Gets His Back Up.

Seems to me that's about the right way to look at these things. I do not mind having a man ask for higher pay providing he asks right and at the proper time. Had this man come to me sooner, or had he waited until the pressure was over, he would probably have gained his desired advance. At any rate, he'd have held a good job, at fair wages, which he may not succeed in doing elsewhere. But whenever a man tries to "squeeze" me I get my back up and am apt to feel that I'll run the store alone before I yield one jot or iota of the demand.

Prosperity is a good thing, but when it comes to paying $40 to $50 per month for work we could readily have done for $25 to $30 a few years ago, it seems to me that something should be definitely expected in the way of conscientiously intelligent service in return. Too often is the clerk ready enough to fix the price of his services without any commensurate idea of what service he will render in return. Thus it many times occurs that this or that piece of work is not "his work" according to the standard he has fixed, as a kind of "mental reservation," for himself.

Should Keep Their Obligations

Such being the situation regarding those who work for us, and they being ready enough to insist on a liberal construction of their side of the contract, I feel that we, as employers, must look out for our side of the bargain with great diligence and hold the young men up to something like a full performance of their duty. Failing this, they should be allowed to slide out any time. As I have before insisted, we must be considerate and kind. We must pay fair wages. We must not be unjust. We must hurt nobody's feelings needlessly. But, as I have also said before, we are poor guardians of the best interests of those under us when we allow them to become careless or indifferent about keeping their obligations of any nature.

While on this subject, I want to consider our obligations to each other, as merchants, in the matter of hiring help. In our town there is a growing sentiment against hiring from one another, though, I am sorry to say, there are still some who disregard ethics in this connection. No matter how we are treated, however, Johnson & Son will not hire a man who is at the time working for a neighbor—if we know it—and this stand not only seems right, but it appears to pay in neighborly good will and further, in the comparative security of our help from outside temptations. But the best intentions fail us sometimes.

The Hiring of a Clerk.

About two months ago I inserted a "blind ad" for a clerk, and got several letters. One appealed to me because I knew the man slightly, though he wanted some things I would not grant. His demand for $15 per week might be met; but he also wanted to be allowed to take home spotted fruits; to have 10 p.c. discount on purchases; and he belonged to a band and wanted it understood that anytime the "band played" he was to have his time off, with pay—of course. I was considering the proposition with a view to offering him $15 per week and cutting out the rest of it, when he came in and I talked with him. He first said that, had he known I was the advertiser he would have written a different letter and my proposal seemed to please him. But then he said: "But I am working at Jenkins' now, though, as I am getting only $13 per week, I'd be glad to change." I told him that in that case it was all off and I would not care to talk with him at all unless the time ever came when he had actually left my neighbor and came to me unemployed. Well, he went right over and held up Jenkins for $15 on the strength of our interview, and it was some time before I could get Jenkins' good will again, though I was frank in my explanation. However, what might have been expected happened, the fellow left my neighbor in the lurch at a critical time later on, so we reached an understanding again.

Merchant Saves $90 by Taking Discounts

Doing a Comparatively Small Business in a Country Town Store—Savings are Made on Sugar, Biscuits, Tobacco, Confectionery and Vinegar—Necessity of Looking Closely After Purchase of Goods—Every Dealer Should Aim at Development of Salesmanship.

By W. J. B.

A large number of retail dealers do not bring all their available resources into play that help in increasing the profits and giving larger returns on their investment. By more careful attention to the many things that assist in building up profits, most merchants could make more money. For it is a well known fact that the merchants who have not made a success of business are those who have paid little attention to the many things which influence to a large extent, the percentage of profit.

The Buying Problem.

Perhaps one of the most important items in this line is buying. How many merchants have completely wrecked their businesses by poor buying methods? Sometimes this is due entirely to carelessness, merchants ordering goods without ascertaining extent of their stock. Bad arrangement of goods is mostly responsible for this. Articles of one class scattered all over the store, and the merchant thinking he is out of a line will order a stock while he already has a good supply in some other section of the store.

Many dealers think that a big stock is necessary to sell goods and will order any quantity without first making an estimate of their selling ability for that line.

Other merchants buy large quantities in order to get a little better price, while the interest on the money which is invested amounts to more than the difference in price and besides running the chances of being left with a heavy stock of some unsalable article on his hands. Many dealers find that buying often and in small quantities, providing he is situated properly, is the best system.

Thus if a merchant runs against some article that is of an inferior quality and therefore a slow seller, he will not have a large stock to get rid of.

Besides in the grocery business, one of the essentials is that the stock be kept fresh or trade will soon run behind. What is a little difference in price compared with having the goods only when you need them and not having them when you don't want them? Therefore a merchant should be on his guard.

What Discounts Amount to.

Another important detail that helps in increasing the profits, is the taking of discounts. Let us consider the lowest discount, 1 per cent., the amount allowed on sugar for payment within 10 days. Otherwise sugar is net 30 days, and if payment is not made during that time interest is charged. This 1 per cent. does not look very large, but a dealer must remember that he is saving 1 per cent. on his money in 20 days—the difference between 30 and 10 days. If he could keep his money out all the year at the same interest, it would mean about 18 per cent.

We receive, too, 3 per cent. discount on biscuits and confectionery. This is for payment within 30 days instead of 2 months net; 3 per cent. for 30 days means 36 per cent. per year if we kept it going all the time. But even if we turn over the biscuit stock six times per year, it means 18 per cent. on our money.

Although the goods in a grocery store on which discounts are now allowed are somewhat limited, still in a year they amount to quite a sum. Discounts are allowed on sugar, biscuits confectionery, some brands of tobacco, extracts, spices and vinegar.

A Saving of $90.

I know of a merchant who during 1910, kept track of the amount saved in discounts on five items sold in the grocery store. The merchant in question conducts a store in a small country town. On sugar during the year, the discounts amounted to $30; on soda and fancy biscuit, $20; on tobacco of all kinds, $20; on confectionery, $15, and on vinegar, $5 amounting in all to $90.

At one time this dealer did not consider the small discounts of one, two and three per cent. of much importance, but he began to think over the matter, and now looks carefully after all discounts he can get.

Losses From Wastefulness.

Still another avenue of loss in many grocery stores is wastefulness; and under this heading many items may be included. Very important is the weighing of goods and the fact should carefully be impressed upon clerks that they are to give exact weight, no more and no less. Care should be exercised in weighing for although overweight may not be given, quantities of goods are often spilt over the counter and floor.

Another source of wastefulness is unnecessary use of twine, wrapping paper and other articles; for example, using 24 inch paper when 18 inch would do, or 16 lb. bags when 10 lb. would do. The care in using these articles should be increased by the fact that we are all giving them away. It must be remembered that the small things in business count a great deal. Waste of paper, allowing taps to remain untightly closed, breakage of package goods, bad care of stocks all help in decreasing the profit.

Developing Salesmanship.

Of course, all merchants recognize the fact that the way in which to make more profit is by selling more goods. Under this heading may be included all items pertaining to salesmanship and advertising. The merchant should be constantly on the lookout for plans and methods which will promote this important part of the business. He should continually develop higher measures of salesmanship himself and select clerks who can sell goods. He should bring into play every idea or method that will help in the great object.

Each merchant, if he finds after stock taking that he has not made the profits that he should, needs to make a careful examination of affairs, as there must surely be some reason.

Salesmanship Needed to Move on the Old Lines

Smith's Falls, Ont., Jan. 26.—"Don't get tired of showing old lines." Such is the advice of a Smith's Falls grocer. And he is not one of those who purchases a cheap stock and lets it become mouldy for lack of progressive salesmanship methods.

But he claims that the best grocer sometimes gets some line or other that does not find the market he expected and if it persists in remaining on his shelves he becomes discouraged and allows it to drop back and back until some day in going over his shelves he discovers it and wonders how it ever became so completely hidden. In cases such as these he advises redoubled efforts in order to clear the stock away. The grocer should not allow himself to become discouraged. He has more than one means at his disposal of starting the particular goods on the way to the buying public. It is this discouragement, he says, that is responsible for so much old stock on the shelves. There are other reasons, he admits, but this he claims to be one of them.

THE LOW PRICE OF SUGAR.

The Grocer was on the press a week ago when another announcement of a decline of 10 cents in refined sugar was made. This news, however, was briefly conveyed to our readers in last week's issue.

In two weeks, therefore, sugar declined 30 cents per cwt., placing it lower than it has been for a good many moons. The price is now $4.30 for standard granulated, Montreal basis, which is 5 cents lower than the lowest price of 1909, a year of comparatively cheap sugar.

The market is still weak, due to the abundance of raws, and even in the face of attempts to keep the market on its present feet, there may be cause for another decline next month.

KEEPING TRACK OF ORDERS.

In order to conduct buying successfully the grocer must have some method of keeping track of his orders—unless he may be gifted by a wonderful memory. If he does not he will find himself getting loaded up with too large a stock of some particular article.

A dealer who does quite an extensive business told the writer recently that before he began keeping his order-book he found himself many times with an over-supply of some article. A traveler would call and in his order he would include, say a case of condensed milk. Then, perhaps, before the goods arrived, he would be giving another order, and, noticing that the condensed milk stock was low, he would order another case.

The merchant has so many things to look after that this is liable to happen in many cases. But if he has a system of keeping track of his orders, this will not occur.

Another merchant in describing his system said that he kept an order book in which he pinned a copy of all orders given to travelers. If he ordered goods by mail, he placed a list of articles ordered in this book. When the invoice arrived it was checked over with the order to see that the price was the same on invoice as on order. Besides, he noticed if the seller had neglected to send an article ordered, so that he would be able to get it on the next opportune occasion and not run short. By this method, knowing exactly what he had on order, he was not liable to overstock on any article by ordering twice.

THE PROFIT ON EGGS.

When new laid eggs are purchased wholesale at 40 cents, is a retailer justified in selling them at an advance of 10 cents per dozen?

This is a question which is interesting particularly to the larger cities where retail merchants buy from wholesale provision houses.

Figuring it out on a percentage basis it will be seen that 10 cents on 50 allows a profit of 20 per cent. In these large centres the cost of doing business is generally conceded to be in the neighborhood of 15 per cent. and therefore the retailer is left with a net profit of 5 per cent. minus the broken eggs.

There are not many business men who will claim this to be unfair. The dealer actually makes 2½ cents profit per dozen and from this must be subtracted loss through broken eggs.

GET BEHIND FISH TRADE.

Good Friday falls on April 14th this year. The season for selling fish is, therefore, long, and the merchant who has started or does start now in the development of his fish trade will find a substantial period in which to develop and reap the benefit of his work.

Besides the business from this line itself, it acts as a magnet in drawing customers to the store, thus giving an opportunity to develop salesmanship ability in introducing other lines. This increases business in general. If the dealer has not already got started, now is the time, before a near-by competitor snatches away the opportunity. But even if the trade is already headed in some other direction, there is still plenty of time if the proper methods are employed.

One of the essentials for building up a trade in fish is to have a good assortment. People's tastes vary, and if you wish to interest all, you must have different assortments. As to the kinds and assortment, the merchant must be guided according to those things which affect his trade. One of the main things to remember is to buy in small quantities. In this way a better assortment may be secured, the stock is kept fresh and the dealer is not loaded up with some unsalable line. Display is one of the important factors in selling fish, and it should be carefully looked after. Most dealers cannot devote a window to this line all the time, but occasionally the window should be dressed with fish. When this is done, great importance should be paid to the cleanly appearance of everything connected with the display, and a liberal use of price cards will usually be found a help in attracting sales.

The clerks should be acquainted with the different kinds of fish, know where they are caught, what varieties of fish they are similar to, and all other information which may be useful in interesting the customers.

Good display and proper salesmanship may sell to the ordinary customer, but in order to increase the range, some advertising to back these up ought to be done. A part or whole of the advertisement in the local paper should be devoted to fish, at least for a time, until a trade is worked up. Call attention to the assortment of fish in stock, name several of the varieties carried and the price. Do not confine yourself to working up the trade of the town customers alone, but issue a circular, if necessary, to the farm trade, calling attention to your fish advertisement, and you will find an increase of business from this source.

The handler of fish wants to make as much money by this portion of his trade as possible. More money can be made by handling those brands of fish which pay the best profit, quality considered. It is to the dealer's advantage to always sell the brand which gives the best profit, if it is equal in quality to the other.

A case exemplifying this, and which was recently related by a retailer, will show the point. He said that one time on oyster firm recently started in to advertise extensively to the public. When he decided to put in a stock of oysters, he thought he would purchase this brand. But, on enquiry, he found that a comparatively small margin of profit was allowed, so he looked around until he found an oyster of just as high quality. Although not advertised to the consumer, he was, nevertheless, able to easily introduce it to his trade and on account of its high quality and the profit concerned, he soon worked up a good business with a good profit.

RESULT OF KNOWING THE GOODS.

A Smith's Falls, Ont., grocer recently told a story of a little feat in salesmanship that is worth relating.

A lady asked for salmon in his store not long ago and he commenced to talk several brands he had on his shelves. He found that she used the best for table use and also for salads. On learning this he pointed out the value of the one as a fish and also emphasized a lower grade as a good salmon for salads.

The result was that while the woman came into the store to buy one can and had a half notion to take a second-grade brand, she actually bought the two cans and felt that she was buying to advantage.

NEARLY A MILLION CATALOGUES.

Do merchants in western Canada realize the importance of the fact that a large mail order concern is distributing 350,000 catalogues throughout that section of the country?

Do eastern dealers note the significance of the fact that this same house is sending out to their customers 400,000?

This makes a total of 750,000 catalogues going to that many families in Canada. Presuming that each of these families spend on an average of $5 with that concern, what is the result?—$3,750,000 going from the country to enrich a single company, which returns little or no good to the sections from which it draws this vast sum.

There is no legislation to counteract this sort of trading. It remains with the retail trade to work hard to prevent as much as possible of this money leaving the country districts to enrich one or two persons in the large cities. Modern store equipment, careful business management, up-to-date methods, the best possible service and salesmanship on the part of employer and employe will do much to alleviate the harm being done. But it means good solid work on the part of every dealer.

HINTS TO GROCERS.

Old newspapers make good glass polishers.

See that the lock on your door works easily. It is often a great annoyance to customers.

If you wish your brooms to be in perfect condition, always keep them in a rack.

Spend spare moments in giving your clerks information about your goods that will help them to make sales.

WHEN FREIGHT IS ALLOWED ON CANNED GOODS

In the issue of The Canadian Grocer of October 14, 1910, there was an article written by the representative of a Canadian canning company on why prices of canned goods would be high this season. In the course of that article he said:

> "Prices appear high contrasted with those of last year, for the reason especially, that this year's prices include allowance for freight, wholesaler's profits, etc., whereas last year's prices were net F.O.B. factories."

There appears to be some misunderstanding on the interpretation of this point which according to a wholesaler is this: "Prices on canned goods include freight allowance and wholesaler's profits in carload lots to Ontario points and in less than carload quantities to all distributing centres—that is, centres recognized as wholesale points.

"But when a retailer who lives elsewhere than at these competing points buys in less than carload quantities he has to pay the existing prices plus freight from the nearest distributing point."

To make his point clear the wholesaler pointed out that supposing he were doing business in Toronto and sold a quantity of canned goods, less than a carload, to a retailer 10 miles west of Hamilton, that retailer would be billed with the price of the goods plus the freight from Hamilton only, since Hamilton would be the nearest distributing or wholesale competing point. But if a wholesaler in Toronto sold canned goods in less than carload lots to a retail dealer in Hamilton, that wholesaler would make no charges whatever for freight, since the retailer could purchase the same goods from Hamilton wholesalers and have no freight to pay.

WANTS SUGAR TO RETAIL AT 22 lbs. FOR $1

Toronto grocers are again incensed over articles which have appeared in one of the daily papers of that city, intimating that their profits are too large on sugar, eggs, etc.

As an example of how little that paper knows about trade, it is only necessary to point out that it permitted itself to make the statement that grocers could now give 22 pounds of sugar for a dollar.

The facts that it should have based this assertion upon were that standard granulated sugar now wholesales in Toronto at $4.40 per cwt., and that the cost of operating a retail business in that city is generally estimated at 15 per cent. on turnover.

Let us analyze these figures. Fifteen per cent. on turnover is approximately equal to 17 per cent. on cost, reckoning at a gross profit of 20 per cent. on the sales. Seventeen per cent. of $4.40 is 74.8 cents, bringing the total cost of a hundred of sugar up to approximately $5.15. If 22 pounds sold for a dollar the hundred pounds would bring about $4.55, assuming that 100 pounds could be actually weighed out of a sack—which really never happens.

It is a simple matter in arithmetic to find the "profit." Did we say "profit?" Yes, well it just means a loss to the business of 60 cents on the handling of 100 lbs.

Let us even suppose that the grocer does business for nothing but his health. The 100 lbs. of sugar would cost him $4.40 at the outset. He loses two pounds on the weight of the sack, plus the loss in weighing, which brings up the cost to practically $4.50. His profit is, therefore, five cents for handling $4.55 worth of goods; for acting as a convenience to the general public; for insurance risk, investment of money; taxes; light and fuel; wages and delivery expenses; adequate service, etc., in all of which expenses that hundredweight of sugar must bear its share.

And yet the daily paper which is so interested (?) in the welfare of the community, through the success of its merchants, allows itself to say that sugar ought to be sold at 22 lbs. for the dollar!

It certainly is a believer in charity with a vengeance.

To clean pencil and finger marks on show cards, use fresh white bread and rub over them. It will make them perfectly clean.

Keep goods that have a tendency to dry out, some distance from the fire.

To make cloth fireproof, take one part sulphate of zinc and one part spirits sal ammonia, dissolve in six or eight parts of water, dip cloth in and then squeeze out and put to dry and cloth will be fireproof.

Signing Papers Without Reading Them

How Dealers Suffer Losses Simply Because They Neglect to Study Documents to Which They Place Their Names—See That Express Parcels Are Received Before Expressman's Book is Signed—Alberta Merchant Gets Loaded Up With Flour Because He Didn't Read the Contract.

Everyone knows the evil results that often arise over the haphazard signing of documents ; writing your name without first thoroughly ascertaining what is contained in the article signed. This practice has always been denounced, but the sermons on it have often fallen on stony ground.

It is unfortunate that some of the best merchants in the country are careless about putting their names to documents, a practice which any merchant will find it greatly to his advantage to discontinue.

Receipting Expressed Goods.

Although there are many documents which all persons should be careful about signing, still there are some that pertains to the merchant particularly. Perhaps one of the simplest of these is the signing of the express book without checking off the goods. This is a charge to which many merchants will have to plead guilty. Frequently the express man enters with some goods, collects the charges, gets the express book signed and then his part is over. But not the merchant's; for when he starts to check over the shipment he finds that he is short. When he appeals to the express company, they point to his signature on the express book and while his troubles may be heard the company will do very little to straighten matters.

In this position, the case certainly looks bad against the merchant. If the lost parcel should turn up, he will probably get it and if it doesn't, he will likely suffer the loss. If the parcels are checked up before signing and if there are any mistakes, they will be more readily attended to. Especially should goods be thoroughly checked when several shipments come in together.

Study Contracts Carefully.

Then there is the signing of order contracts without looking the conditions of the contract over. Many a merchant has had things turn out very differently to what he expected when he gave the order. A case of this was related to the writer by an Alberta merchant: "A traveler for a flour and feed firm wanted to sell me a car load of his goods. I told him that I would not mind buying at his prices but that I did not have store room enough to hold a whole car load. He was anxious to make the sale and said that if I would give him an order for a car load that I could get it as I wanted it—say in five ton lots at the car load price.

"This was certainly a good offer so I at once signed the order but without reading it. I found out afterwards to my sorrow that the order said nothing about me getting the goods in small quantities and that I was due to take the whole car at once."

There are many cases similar to the one related by this dealer in which the merchant finds out too late that it is best, to read before signing.

Haphazard signing of contracts with collection agencies has often put merchants in difficult positions. Although there are many collection agencies which are responsible, still there are others that are not. Many merchants have signed contracts which have proved to be entirely in favor of the collection agency, with all the burden resting with the dealer.

While there are many complaints where unrated agencies have collected money of which the merchant never received the smallest portion, still contracts with some companies with a financial rating are very binding.

One merchant tells of an account of $60 which he gave to an agency to collect and after it had tried in vain to collect for over two years, the merchant thought he would attempt it again himself. He succeeded in collecting $40 of the bill but found that he was due to pay the agency their commission of 25 per cent., amounting to $10, as the contract said that even if the money were paid directly to the merchant that the agency must get it's commission.

FIRST DECISION CHANGED.

Interesting Legal Case Under Pure Food Law of New York State.

Some interesting developments have recently arisen from a decision made last November by the New York State Department of Agriculture under its Pure Food Law which has affected Worcestershire sauces.

On the 15 of that month the above mentioned Department of Agriculture issued a circular the import of which was that all Worchestershire sauces not the production of the original manufacturers were imitations and as such must, therefore, have the ingredients stated on the label, excepting in cases where the goods are manufactured wholly in Worchestershire. This matter was taken up by Holbrooks Limited with the Attorney-General of New York

State and the Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture. It was pointed out by them that the use of the word "Worchestershire" became common property by a judgment dated on or about the 26th day of July, 1876, rendered in an action in the Hight Court of Chancery in England.

After considering the matter the Attorney-General expressed his opinion that Holbrooks Limited as well as the original manufacturers were entitled to the unrestricted use of the word "Worcestershire" as the question involved was, in his judgment, similar to the question involved in the case of the original manufacturers as mentioned above, and he found it difficult to distinguish between these cases; that the line of demarkation was indefinite; that, in his opinion, both should be treated in the same way so far as the food law relating to Worchestershire sauces was concerned.

Would this Bill Prevent Giving of Tips?

Member in House of Commons Introduces Bill to Prohibit Secret Commissions—He Declares That Tips are Degrading to Our Country and Cites Case Where Man in England Was Fined for Giving One to Railway Employe

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—Another bill has been introduced into the House of Commons respecting Secret Commissioners. It will be known as Bill 87, and is along similar lines to the one which became law early in 1909, and which has on different occasions been published in The Grocer. It's main provisions are the following:

1. If any agent or employe corruptly accepts, obtains or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain from any person for himself or for any other person any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or if any person corruptly gives or agrees to give or offers any gift or consideration to any agent or employe as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or if any person knowingly gives to any agent or if any agent knowingly uses with intent to deceive his principal any receipt, account or other document in respect of which the principal is interested and which cantains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particular, and which to his knowledge is intended to mislead the principal, he shall be guilty of a misdeameanor and shall be liable on conviction or indictment to imprisonment with or without hard labor for a term not exceeding two years; or of a fine, not exceeding $200 or to both such imprisonment and such fine or on summary conviction to imprisonment with or without hard labor for a term not exceeding four months or to a fine not exceeding $50 or to both such imprisonment and such fine.

2. For the purpose of this Act the expression "consideration" includes valuable consideration of any kind; the expression "agent" includes any person employed by or acting for another; and the expression "principal" includes an employer.

3. A person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any municipal, county or district corporation, or any board of guardians, is an agent within the meaning of this Act.

Mr. Currie, M.P., who introduced this bill, stated in explanation that its purpose was to prevent minor acts of corruption such as the taking of secret commissions. He pointed out that recently under the English Act a man was fined 20 shillings and costs at Manchester for giving a shilling to a carter of a railway company and went on to show his aversion for tips.

The habit of tipping was a relic of the later middle ages and was, he considered, becoming too common in this country. It was degrading to any man as well as to his family to accept a tip to which he was not entitled.

In just what particulars the above bill differs from the present Act is hard to define. From Mr. Currie's latter remarks one is led to believe that he would prohibit the common, ordinary tipping and if so this would be a radical movement indeed.

However, secret commissions as given by travelers to agents and employes in order to secure business is something that should be prohibited. It is morally wrong as it tends to undermine the foundations of honest business and at the present time is against the Criminal Code.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Regina Dealer Emphasizes Importance of Watching Smaller Details—A Suggestion to Give Clerks an Opportunity to Plan Some Sales—Apples Sold by the Pound in a Quebec Store—Praise for an Account Register—London Dealer Demonstrates of His Own Accord.

Watches Twine and Paper Bags.

Regina, Sask., Jan. 26.—One thing to which many merchants pay little attention, is counted as a matter of importance by a Regina dealer. He recently said: "I pay particular attention to the buying and use of twine, paper and and paper bags, more so as the merchant gets no returns on these items. He gives them away. One quarter of a cent a pound on paper may not seem a great deal in itself, but when figured for a year it makes quite a difference to many merchants. Beside the buying end, there is also the use of these articles.

"In many grocery stores there is a large waste in these items. A 20 lb. paper bag costs about ½ cent, and a 30 lb. bag close on to 1 cent, so that it does not take long for the amount wasted in some stores to count up. One of the methods of waste is having no holder for the paper bags. They are carelessly strewn about the store, constantly falling on the floor and being destroyed. The clerk often takes a bag twice as large as is needed, tears off a piece of paper much larger than required and has many other wasteful habits that shave a substantial slice off the profits. My clerks are thoroughly trained to use no more of any of these articles than is absolutely necessary."

Give the Clerks a Chance.

Halifax, Jan. 26.—A retail dealer of this city finds that it is a good thing for the business to get the clerks interested. He has many methods of keeping their enthusiasm up.

As the end of the old year was approaching for instance he went to his clerks and said: "January is generally a pretty dull month. It really shouldn't be, so I am going to give you a chance to show that it can be made a real busy month. You can get together and plan how you are going to promote business. I leave it entirely in your hands as to the method of procedure, the writing of the advertisement and the general management of the whole affair."

As a result, the clerks became enthusiastic over their chance to show what they could do and so far this month they have been making a record showing.

Sells Apples by the Pound.

Quebec, Jan. 26.—Apples are being sold by weight in the grocery store of A. Drolet, Quebec. This is done so that each purchaser of apples will be treated fairly even if one does receive a few larger samples of the fruit than another.

"If a customer wants a dozen big apples," said a representative of this firm, "she pays for those big ones at the same rate as if she received small apples. Sometimes you know, clerks are tempted to supply customers with large fruit first so that eventually only small fruit remains and often losses result in this way.

"In receiving apples we find the net weight of the barrel and then it is easy to make the selling price by the pound so that a sure profit will be realized on the outlay. It would only be guess-work if we sold by the dozen. Generally the selling price is five or six cents per pound.

"Some of our customers think this method strange, but we are able to convince the majority that they pay no more for a dozen by the pound than they would by the dozen.

"If we cannot convince them to believe in our arrangement, it is easy to sell them a dozen of apples without mentioning the price per pound."

LIKES ACCOUNT REGISTER.

Digby, N.S., Jan. 27.—A. A. Shortliffe, a local grocery dealer is well pleased with results which he has secured from a book-keeping register, which he purchased last year.

In speaking of it he said: "The register which I purchased last July is giving excellent satisfaction. I would not care to do a credit business without a account register, and if I could not purchase another I would not sell the one I now have for five times what it cost me. I find with this register, mistakes are not so liable to occur as with our former system; forgotten charges are a thing of the past.

"The price of the register is soon forgotten as the system pays for itself in in many ways. The traveler who sold it to me said that it would reduce my outstanding accounts and I can truthfully say that it has reduced them 25 p.c. in the short time I have had the register. Our customers like the idea of knowing what they owe and I like to have them know that I know what they owe."

A "Taste and Try" Campaign.

London, Ont., Jan. 26.—John Dinrose inaugurated a "Taste and Try" campaign during the last part of last week-Thursday and for the rest of the week folks were invited through the daily papers to call in and sample a particular brand of soup at No. 3 store. Friday and Saturday the products of another firm were on display at No. 2 store. Tomato Soup, Apple Butter, a relish and a variety of pickles were open to all customers who cared to become better acquainted with these lines by the "Taste and Try" method.

A few days ago, the arrival in London of a consignment of so-called "pineapple oranges" was deemed worthy of a descriptive item in one of the daily papers. John Dinrose determined to grasp the undoubted advertising value of the article, and in his next ad. made "pineapple oranges" the leader, explaining (as had the news item) that they were "from the Cuban plantation of Rev. J. G. Stuart, of South London." Coupled with the attractive price of 20 cents per dozen, and the double advertisement sales were created, amounting to an adequate response to this little departure from Mr Dinrose's usual orange advertising.

Meat Slicer Helped Profits.

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—"Although an annual stock-taking is necessary in order that the merchant can accurately ascertain how his business stands," said a local grocer, "still it does not show whether all departments are paying a profit.

"Once in a while I keep account of some particular department of my store to find if it is paying the profits that it should. To do this I first take stock of that particular department, keep account of all goods added to the stock as well as all sales made from this section. In a month's time I take stock again and can tell whether this department has been paying a profit and how much.

T. F. McDOWELL,

A Vancouver grocer who makes a specialty out of poultry and thereby gains new trade.

"This can be done without very much trouble and a merchant need only do it for two weeks if he wishes as that will give him a good idea of how matters are going.

"Last year I kept account of my meat department and found that it was barely paying a profit. After a careful examination as to the reason for this, I changed my method of keeping meats so that they would not dry out while in stock and also installed a meat slicer and when I again looked into this department I found it was paying me a good profit."

POINTERS—
Evaps—Advance.
Canned Goods—Firm.
Tea—Firm.
Sugar—Weak.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—The decline in sugar briefly noted in the last issue made the third decline in two weeks' time and placed sugar below what it has been for at least two and one-half years. Some dealers are looking for a further decline in the market. The total stocks and afloats at the present time show a visible supply of 3,787,342 tons against 3,215,145 tons last year, or an increase of 572,179 tons. Willett & Gray say in regard to New York refined that the tone and tendency of the refined sugar market is to lower prices, in conformity to the declines in raw sugars, as fast as the latter becomes available for use. Of course it must be remembered that the local market is at present below that of New York. On account of the low price of sugar, there is a larger consumption and this has had a tendency to make sales better.

Dried fruits of all kinds maintain their firm position and it is likely that the consumption on the whole will see a great falling off over other years, although wholesalers report a fair amount of trade at the present time.

There is a noticeable increase in the amount of syrup being sold, due no doubt to the high prices of dried fruits and to the reasonable price of syrup, which is considerably lower than this time last year.

The supply of prunes is running low and the small sizes are very scarce. Along with the other soaring fruits, evaporated apples have advanced again. The stock of currants in the primary market is reported small and prices there have an upward tendency. On account of small sales in this line in the local markets, no great attention is being given to it.

Although the past has been an unsatisfactory sardine packing season in both America and Europe, still there will not likely be any advance at the present to retailers here as holders seem to have sufficient stocks to supply the trade for a time.

Canned goods have not lost any of their former strength and dealers are looking for a "lean" year in all kinds of canned goods. It is predicted that even higher prices will be seen before long.

Sugar.—As announced in last week's issue, the sugar market declined for the third time in two weeks and extra granulated in bags at Toronto is now quoted at $4.40 per cwt. Raw sugar in New York is now quoted at 3.51 per lb. and a further reduction to 3.48 per lb. which is the present quotation for February shipment is expected soon. When this takes place it is possible that a further slight decline in refined sugar may take place here. Although there is a fair amount of sugar, moving, still it is only on the hand-to-mouth basis. One wholesaler pointed to the fact that the consumption of sugar in Canada is gradually growing larger, caused by the increased population and also to the increase in the use of foods in which sugar is used.

Syrups and Molasses.—Under the high prices of dried fruits, there is a large sale for syrups in both the maple and corn product, and most houses report a larger sale in this line for January than ever before. There is a slight easiness in molasses but the price has not been affected.

Dried Fruits.—No changes have taken place in the price of dried fruits but the market still maintains its firmness. Retailers are not buying to any great extent under the high prices, but it is said that when wholesalers' present stocks run out that prices will have to advance. No changes have taken place in prices.

Tea.—The position of tea is still as strong as ever and while no reason is visible for any material setback in the price of low and low medium teas, still it is thought that these grades are on as high a basis as the situation warrants. As the high grade teas have not been affected to the same extent as lower, it is suggested that the trade make an attempt to sell the higher grades, thus relieving the situation to a certain extent and introducing a better class of tea which will be beneficial to all concerned.

Besides the decrease in crops, there are other reasons for the advance in tea,

The duty on tea going into Russia is so great that a slight differenece in the original price of tea does not matter much to the Russian buyers who when they want the tea outbid the buyers from the minor markets. Russian and Australasian buyers have taken some 15,000,000 lbs. more than they bought last year. If they had not done this there would have been enough left for other buyers, as there has been no expansion in the total amount of business done in Colombo and Calcutta with other countries and there cannot well be until production increases.

Coffee.—The present situation of coffee offers no idea of lower prices. The Brazil crop is rapidly nearing an end and yet at the present time the World's visible supply is only 445,009 bags larger than on July 1st last and nothing but a decrease in the visible can be expected from month to month for the next six months. The world's visible supply decreased during December 573,336 bags figuring a total on Jan. 1 of 14,165,640 against 16,669,273 on Jan. 1, 1910. Willett & Gray say that the trade proper have fought the advance vigorously, but to-day, the same as months ago, they are without adequate supplies and in no position to defend themselves. "It is here and there suggested that prices have gone high enough, forgetting the main fact that the advance is natural, founded on a short crop and sustained at each step by decreasing supplies, the few holders who have stocks exercising their right to name values in keeping with the situation, knowing that consuming markets must buy the merchandise."

Trade locally is not brisk, retailers buying for immediate needs only.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Demand for canned goods is quiet in general with the exception of salmon, for which the demand is fairly good.

Canned fruit has a fairly good demand, while other lines are a little below the average. It is expected that February will see a brightening up of this market, with a better demand for all lines of canned goods.

Toronto.—High prices still rule on all lines of canned goods and such is liable to be the case for several months. One wholesaler believes that corn which is reported so plentiful will be higher in price before long. He says that under the high prices existing on tomatoes and peas, that a much larger quantity of corn is being used and that evidently stocks will become so scarce that the price will be forced upward. Tomatoes and peas are scarce and one dealer passed the remark that he could sell to a wholesaler at the same price as he is now quoting to retailers. A fair amount of business is being done in both canned vegetables and fruit, while salmon is going out freely.

POINTERS—
Molasses—Reduced.
Cloves—Advanced.
Prunes—Firm.
Sugar—Weak.

Montreal, Jan. 26.—Most dealers have completed their annual stock-taking. Business is favorable for this time of the year, and will compare favorably with the corresponding time of other years.

One of the leading local coffee dealers declares that it is many years since the coffee market has shown so much strength. One merchant showed The Canadian Grocer samples of coffee which he had picked up when visiting different merchants throughout the Province. "I don't know what brand this is," he stated, "but as far as I can see it is a combination of coffee, chicory, beans and roasted peas. This is what makes it hard for us to sell the purest stuff as this adulteration can be handed out at lower figures."

Only a fair business is reported in the sugar market. The reduction on Thursday last did not have much effect on the buyers. One of the leading wholesalers here thinks that the readjustment of prices will go further.

There is a decline in the price of molasses in sympathy with the sugar market.

The demand for canned goods is not what might be expected, with the exception of salmon, the demand is quiet.

Sugar.—The reduction in sugar Thursday did not have a very stimulating effect on the market, only a fair business being reported. Dealers are going slow on purchases for the present, realizing that the readjustment of prices might go further, though temporarily the markets may be steady.

Syrup and Molasses.—The demand for molasses is fairly good. Prices are reduced in sympathy with the sugar market. The supply of desirable molasses is none too large and present prices are quite firm. Prices of syrups are firm; business done is only moderate.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Jan. 26.—Foreign sugar is still coming into Vancouver. It is sold by large dealers in competition with that sold by a large departmental store. The latter firm sell local sugar at five cents per pound, though the wholesale price is more than that, and the China article is sold at the same figure.

Since a local milling company offered its flour direct to the retailer, objection was raised to the Grocers' Association by manufacturers in the east. It was pointed out that in Winnipeg, the home town of large flour manufacturers that flour was sold direct to the retailer, and it was not unfair that the same thing should be done in Vancouver by a Vancouver concern.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Jan. 26.—Sugar declined ten cents again last week, bringing the price down to $4.45 and $4.55 for standard granulated; $4.35 and $4.45 for Austrian; $4.25 and $4.35 for bright yellow and $3.95 and $4.05 for No. 1 yellow. The market seems to have a downward tendency and a further reduction would not be surprising. Ontario flours advanced twenty cents per barrel, making the price now, $5.20 to $5.65. Hennery eggs declined ten cents per dozen, as a result of the recent snowfall which has allowed the countrymen to get into the city with supplies.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Jan. 26.—The hard weather during the week has improved the roads throughout the Province, and there is now considerable activity in the lumber camps. As a result trade is a little brisker, the volume of orders going out showing a considerable increase.

There is only a light demand for eggs and the receipts of fresh laid stock are small. The choicest fresh laid stock is selling at 35 cents per dozen. Case eggs are quoted from 26 to 28 cents.

There is a slight improvement in the receipts of butter and the price is a little easier but the expected break has not yet come to hand.

Sugar prices this week show no change standard granulated going to the trade at $4.50.

Pork prices remain unchanged. There is considerable activity in the molasses trade and some small shipments of new stock has arrived. From now on it is expected that shipments will increase. Several vessels have already left here loaded with empty puncheons for Barbadoes and Trinidad. There is no Trinidad molasses on the market. Fancy Barbadoes in barrels is quoted at 30 to 31 cents, and tierces at 31 to 32 cents.

Bovril Never Goes Wrong

Frost, heat, moisture or dryness cannot spoil it.

It is a Safe Line

At the School of Physiology, DUBLIN, Ireland, a series of independent experiments were made last year to ascertain the feeding value of Bovril. The results of the tests proved (see "Times" report, September 3) that Bovril is a valuable food and that it helps the system to assimilate ordinary diet. Under the tests the body weight increased 20 times as much as the Bovril consumed, and fell back again when Bovril was discontinued.

BOVRIL is a genuine body-builder and stands in sharp contrast against a crowd of would-be imitators.

Knowledge Means Power

ANY merchant or clerk who enters The Canadian Grocer's competition on Constructive Salesmanship will in the future know more about the details of his selling organization than before. He will become more thoroughly acquainted with his several methods used to dispose of goods other than those he would be asked for if he made no effort whatever to sell above actual demands.

To the three winners in each of the three classes a medal of the above design will be given---gold, silver and bronze. The primary object of the competition is to aid dealers and clerks in realizing their selling power, and the winner of a medal can always point with pride to the fact that it was the result of his ability as a salesman.

Provision Trade in Good Condition

Dealers are Looking Forward to a Good Year—Arrival of Eggs Continues Plentiful—Storage Eggs Brought From United States—New Laids Make Another Drop — Creese Market in Better Condition.

The provision and produce trade throughout Canada seems to be in a healthy condition at the present time and an extra good year is being looked forward to by dealers. In the face of this expectation, dealers are busy in preparing plans that will assure them a good-sized portion of the trade.

The arrival of hogs during the past week has been plentiful, but no large changes have taken place in prices. A report from the English market says that the bacon trade is quiet, the late advance having curtailed demand. Canadian bacon is quoted there at 62s. to 66s.

The arrival of new laid eggs continues free and further reductions have taken place in prices. In the United States market, egg prices have taken a big tumble and some Canadian dealers say they are bringing in storage eggs from that side of the line. A further decline in eggs is looked for in some centres if the hens do not call a halt in their supply of the new laid article.

Prices of butter in the United States have also dropped a great deal, but in Canada the market is keeping steady. The duty on cream is much lower than that on butter, so that an enormous amount of Canadian cream was imported by United States firms, and the butter manufactured from it on the other side of the line is said to be held at a cost of about 5c per lb. more than can be realized to-day. Cream equal to 150,000 boxes of butter was imported, so that the Canadian market has been greatly relieved by it. The opinion has been expressed that all the supplies of butter in Canada will be needed within the next three months and probably at a little higher price.

The cheese market on the whole shows a better state, there being some improvements in export business for England during the past week at steady prices. The market in England continues firm with an upward tendency in prices, Canadian cheese being quoted at 59s. to 61s.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—There continues to be a moderately steady market in compound lard. Small sized hams are scarce and prices show a slight increase. Bacon also shows an increase in price. The rise in prices is attributed to the heavy demand. Business is good, and still better is expected during the coming month.

Butter.—The market is fairly firm, and the demand not heavy. The demand for fresh creamery is a little better. It is believed that lower prices will soon prevail in all lines of butter, as the supply is quite heavy, and demand light.

Provisions.—Wholesalers are well pleased with the amount of business that is being done in provisions and predict a good year for this line. Live hogs, the arrival of which has been quite satisfactory during the past week, have shown a slight advance in price, being quoted at $7.10 to $7.15 at country points and $7.40 to $7.45 locally. However, long clear bacon shows a slight reduction the price now quoted being 11½c to 12c, while pure lard has been reduced ¼c per lb.

Butter.—Although there are no further changes in the price of butter this week, still a little easier feeling seems to exist. The arrival of fresh butter is plentiful and the large amount on the market of course has a depressing tendency. Choice dairy prints are now quoted at 20c to 21c. The opinion was expressed by a local dealer that even with the large arrivals at the present time and the amount in storage, that all would be needed within the next three months to supply the demand and probably at higher prices than now exist.

Eggs.—The price of eggs still keeps on the downward course and for the past three weeks the quotations have gradually been growing lower. The arrival of more new laids this week has caused another general reduction and new laids are now quoted at 30 to 35 cents compared with a price of 50 to 55 cents one month ago. Most local dealers state that their stocks of storage eggs is low, but it has been hinted that some have good reason in some cases to at least wish that to be the case. Some storage eggs from the United States are being brought in by local firms this week and it is intimated that on account of the recent tumble in egg prices there, that eggs may be imported from there and sold below the prices of Canadian storage eggs.

General Merchant Thinks He is Loser

Claims That Commission Man Pays Him According to Quality and Condition of the Eggs Received—The Returns he Received From one Case—An Objection Voiced Against Egg Circles.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—We have read with interest the letter regarding the egg question, from the Clarksburg merchant, and can say that our experience is just the same. We have not taken the trouble to candle as he has done, but just to show what kind of eggs are brought to the store, we herewith give you the details of one of our account sales received lately:

1 Case Eggs.—New laid	10 doz.	@	40
Held	7 doz.	@	28
Stale	3 doz.	@	24
Cracked	1 doz. & 2 eggs	@	20
Broken	6 eggs	@	10
Bad	4 eggs		...

Some time ago we noticed an article giving this loss through bad eggs as the cause for the high prices to the consumer as if it were the commission men who stood this loss. But we can say that if it is with others as has been in our case, it is the country merchant who has to bear the loss since the commission men deduct for all stale, held, bad and broken eggs as shown by the above table.

We have been thinking of trying the ';circle" idea, but one party speaking about it thought that the honest producer, would be at the mercy of the dishonest consumer, for, he reasons, although the eggs may have been gathered and shipped promptly, some time might elapse before they were consumed and meanwhile the freshness would have gone; or if they were very much inclined towards dishonesty they could declare that they were not good, when they were all right.

Re Drafts.—The article in last week's issue by W. J. Bryans, gives some good ideas; but we have no bank here and papers come through all the banks in Barrie and Stayner. The best way we think would be for us to have an account with some one of them and make all the paper payable at that one, and have such a book as mentioned in the article.

THE A. RONALD CO.
Minesing, Ont., Jan. 25, 1911.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—The Grocer appreciates a great deal such letters as the above and the one from the Clarksburg merchant which appeared in last week's issue and it is to be hoped that other merchants will let us know more about the exact conditions existing and the difficulties with which they have to contend.

OVERSTOCKED MARKET BRINGS DOWN PRODUCE PRICES

New York, Jan. 26.—At a recent meeting of wholesale egg and butter dealers here, the retail trade was mildly criticized for the present prices of these articles to the consumer.

One of the members submitted the following schedule of prices from wholesaler to retailer showing the decline in their prices from a year ago:

BUTTER

	Jan. 14, '11. Pound	Jan. 15, '1 Pound	Decline
Creamery specials	2[illegible]c	3[illegible]c	8c
Creamery extras	2[illegible]c	35c	9c
Held specials	26½c	33½c	8c
Process specials	22½c	29½c	7c

EGGS

	Doz.	Doz.
Fresh, extra firsts	29c	40c	11c
Firsts	28c	39c	11c
Refrigerator firsts	23½-24c	25½-27c	3c

CHEESE

Fancy colored	Sept.	15½c	17c	1½c

In discussing the question one of the wholesalers made the following statements:

"Values have increased steadily for the last five years, and until this year the advance seemed to be justified, because at the end of each previous year the goods were cleaned up by the consumer. In other words, when the season was closed the consumer had not paid more for the goods than the conditions warranted.

"The present season in both products opened in eggs last March and in butter last June at high prices at the producing points, and there was sufficient demand for the products to maintain the pace at which they started.

Decrease Consumption.

"But the effect of high prices is twofold. While they encourage production, they decrease consumption. Gradually there piled a burdensome stock of holdings. As the season now draws to a close these holdings have to be disposed of. These large stocks are in the city. The demand is not sufficient to absorb them and they have to be sold regardless of cost.

"The consumers should get the advantage of these conditions very shortly. In justice to the retailer it should be stated that he has not been robbing his customers. These lower prices have just arrived, and we would be unjust to give the housewife the impression that the retailer has been charging her unjust prices.

"Still there is no reason why the finest eggs should not be retailed at 35 cents, and there are grocers who are still getting from 40 to 50 cents for them. Good eggs can be sold at 26 to 30 cents, leavng the retailer a fair margin. With the finest butter on the market retailing at 33 to 35 cents and good butter at 26 to 30 cents, there is no reason why any one should eat oleomargarine as a substitute for but-

Mr. Grocer: It is more profitable for you to encourage the sale of a well-known and well-advertised brand of Baking Powder that you know will please your customers than to try to substitute some cheap kind that may cost you a few cents less per dozen but which may result in the loss of a good customer. Think it over.

"There is simply a readjustment of values going on in all food commodities. The producers have been the only gainers for the last five years, while the merchant, the jobber and the retailer have been the sufferers. The dealer has had to pile away his goods at high prices and is now selling them at a considerable loss."

Flaked Tapioca, Package Held Too Much Dirt

St. John, N.B., Jan. 26.—The importance of a grocer keeping goods in a clean place and of not allowing any goods to go out of the store that are not perfectly clean and salable was emphasised by an instance that occurred recently with one of the local dealers.

A customer purchased a pound of flake tapioca and on opening it when it arrived at the home it was found to be full of dirt of various kinds. There were evidences of mice having been around and bits of bird seed, indicated that it had been kept in a drawer or bin, alongside of some such goods, where the divisions were not tight enough to keep the goods divided. The result of the examination was that the package was thrown out and the customer went elsewhere to get clean goods.

Because a merchant does not hear of a complaint is no reason for supposing that no ground for complaint exists, as many people do not take the trouble to complain when they find things are not satisfactory, but go elsewhere. Grocers cannot be too careful in seeing that goods are kept in clean places and that nothing is allowed to leave the store that is not first class in every respect.

Association Has Conferences to Settle Disputes

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 26.—Grocers in this city are beginning to appreciate the advantages of co-operation. Time was, and not very long ago, when they were not particular whether they belonged to the association or not. After the aggressive work during the past year or two, when it has been shown what results may be obtained, things have gone along well under the management of R. D. Dinning, the secretary.

During the last six months, there have been no backsliders among the members, and several new ones have come in. Matters of interest are taken up promptly. These do not consist of theoretical discussion of trade topics, but the adjustment of complaints. For instance, when prices are not maintained, the parties are interviewed and perhaps got together, and if a settlement is not reached they at least understand each other.

Along the line of organization, after doing the mainland, E. J. Wall, of Victoria, T. S. Fletcher, Victoria, and Fred Welch and R. D. Dinning, of Vancouver, will shortly visit Duncans and Nanaimo to confer with the merchants there, in connection with the provincial organization.

A TIP TO CLERKS.

It is a poor clerk who cannot keep busy. If you would succeed, you must not be idle during business hours. It creates a much better impression on a customer to enter a store where the clerks are busy than where they are idling about. If you cannot find anything else to do, pull down a counter or shelf display and rebuild it again. Time may be spent to good advantage by clerks in preparing show cards. Especially in a grocery store, where there are so many little things to look after, the clerk should always find something to do.

E. B. Tracey, retail grocer, corner of Jacob and Grafton Streets, Halifax, N.S., has assigned to George E. Faulkner. It is stated that his liabilities will total $6,000. A meeting of the creditors has been called for next week.

Dullness in the Flour and Cereal Trade

Price of Flour Remains Unchanged — Wheat Market Continues to Fluctuate—Flour Market is in Uncertain State—Present Prices May Rule for a Time — Cereal Trade is Not Overly Brisk, With no Immediate Price Changes in Sight.

With the price of wheat moving up and down within a small margin, as it is affected by reports from day to day, it is exceedingly difficult to gauge the position of the flour market at the present time. Some are inclined to believe that it will likely remain at its present level until the wheat market has settled down to a definite position. The flour market in general showing some dullness, although there has been some improvement in inquiry for Canadian flour from European markets.

While present prices are expected to rule at least for a time, still there are millers who see it in a different light. One Ontario miller remarked this week: "I believe that flour is good buying at the present time and that wheat is at as low a point as it will be for the balance of the crop. I would not be surprised to see an advance in flour before very long."

The wheat market in England continues to fluctuate as in other parts of the world, while the flour market remains quiet, Canadian patents being quoted at 27s. 9d. to 28s. 3d. ex-ship.

Beerbohn in his report of Jan. 6 says that under all the circumstances, a moderate level of prices, such as the present one, ought to draw sufficient wheat to satisfy requirements up to the time when some idea can be formed as to the probable outturn of the winter wheat crops of America and Europe. With the exception of Russia, present conditions are not so favorable as at this time last year, although there has been a general, even if only moderate, improvement in prospects compared with a month ago.

Rolled oats are not very active at the present time as retailers are no doubt cleaning up their stocks after the New Year. The oat market is firm, causing a steadiness in rolled oats at present prices.

MONTREAL.

TORONTO.

Flour.—While trade in this line is reported rather dull at the present time, still some millers state that they are doing a fair trade for the season. While it is stated that the market is quiet and no changes likely to take place in the price of flour just at the present, still one company have advanced their prices in markets east of Montreal and believe that prices here may follow before long. Ontario flour is reported steady at present prices.

Cereals.—Some mills report trade in cereals rather slow this month, due no doubt to the fact that retailers are clearing up their present stocks. They state that the far approach of spring which usually has a depressing effect on the trade is not the cause of the present lull. The rolled oats market remains steady and while most mills do not anticipate any change in price, still one mill has advanced its price for export and intimates it may advance it here in the near future. Rolled wheat is firm under the present high price of wheat.

CALENDARS FOR 1911.

The civic authorities in Winnipeg have recently issued a unique calendar portraying the advantages of that city as a place of opportunity. One of the features of the calendar is "An Open Book" which tells in brief the facts about its electric power, building growth, manufacturing, etc., which is all the more interesting through its conciseness. The calendar also includes a map illustrating the location of Winnipeg and picturing it as the "Bull's Eye City of America."

Findlay, Speer Co., general merchants, of Sealsgirth, Man., have sold to Spear, Gregg Co.

W. J. Parkes, who has for a number of years conducted a grocery store on Ontario St., St. Catharines, Ont., has disposed of it to James Marshall, who has been in his employ for about 3 years.

A report comes from London, Ont., that many retail dealers there have large supplies of apples in their cellars while there is little demand for them. Apples were scarce last autumn and there was a considerable scramble for them, but the high prices have apparently taken the edge of the sales.

SHORT TALKS TO CLERKS

By An Ex-Clerk

Loyalty.

When I get on this question of loyalty, I sometimes get very enthusiastic, and I wish I could instil into everyone within hearing, the real inner meaning of loyalty. Loyalty is one of the greatest assets any house can have from its employes, and loyalty is one of the best things any employe can have. Show me the man who is loyal, and I will show you the man who has the right kind of material in him.

So important is the question that I will say either be loyal to the house you are working for, or you quit the house or you will help to wreck it. The man who is loyal is, in the vast majority of cases, successful. Nature will help a loyal man. If you are careless, slipshod, indifferent, nature assumes that you wish to be nobody and will grant your desire. A man must be true to his art, to his business, to his employer, and to himself. Loyalty is a quality woven through the very fabric of one's being, and is never a thing apart. Loyalty makes the thing to which you are loyal, yours.

Keep the Grouch Under Cover.

Don't come to the store in the morning showing that you are out of sorts, showing that you have a "grouch." If you have one, keep it to yourself ; don't impart it to others. Don't go noising around that this doesn't suit you. Remember, YOU have no capital locked up in the store ; YOU are taking no chances. You have got a sure thing—small, probably, but yet sure. The proprietor of the store has many things to think of besides you, and the first-class retail clerk will cause him no thought at all—will be of great assistance to him. And if one clerk will show a firm, determined loyalty, it will be contagious and it helps the others.

Remember what I told you before—your employer sees everything ; and if you are loyal to him, he feels that he can depend on you ; can rely on you taking care of his interests at all stages. You know that if you are careless (which many clerks are) giving customers overweight, spilling sugar or tea on the floor, letting the syrup barrel overrun, it means you are not loyal because you do not watch your employer's interests. All these little losses are a drain on the business. In other words, you are disloyal to the man you are working for. If YOU owned the business, what a different view you would have of it. The retail clerk, as a rule, stops but little to think of the many losses in a retail store, the great majority of which he is directly or indirectly accountable for.

Every nation in the world depends on the loyalty of its individual men. What would England and Canada be if it were not for loyalty ? When our nation gets in trouble, does not its whole population rise up as a unit ? That is loyalty—and loyal is what you and every clerk—no matter how small or big the business is—should be at all times. So, without question, I believe we will all agree that to be loyal shortens the road to success.

Behind Iron Bars.

The hospitals, jails and asylums are full of disloyal people—people who have been disloyal to friends, to society, to business, to work—disloyal to their employers.

How often have you heard, in a retail store, an employe criticizing an action of his employer ? I was in a store some while ago and there was being delivered there a large shipment of a certain cereal, some hundreds of boxes ; and one of the clerks—a junior—remarked : "Gee whizz ! Look at the stuff coming in here ! It's all one kind !" And the older clerk, standing right in front of me, replied : "Well, what do you think of that ? The proprietor must be crazy. We'll never sell that stuff in a thousand years,"—and he never would, with that disposition.

Wasn't that fine ? I tell you it made my blood boil. What business was it of his how much the boss purchased ? Did HE have to pay for it ? No ! Did he have to pay rent to store it ? No !. Yet the proprietor must be crazy. And I suppose when that clerk made the reply to the junior clerk, the latter thought that what was told him must be true—and so it goes on down the line.

The Proper Spirit to Show.

Instead of taking hold of the shipment of goods with a whole-heartedness, seeing that it was properly displayed, and saying to himself and the rest of the clerks : "That's the stuff—we will sell it like hot cakes"—backing up his employer's judgment in its every sense. My, what a difference there is between the right way and the wrong ! Now, you boys know that what I am saying is true. It happens every day.

Another case I call to mind was where a retail merchant had just purchased a certain wagon, and drove it up to the door. No doubt the clerks had heard of it and were waiting to see it. On looking at it, one of the clerks immediately said out loud : "Why, that rig will never do ; that won't suit our business. I can't make out what the boss is thinking of, doing these things."

I tell you it is bad enough to have a grouch, but it is worse to impart it to other people. Remember what I told you one time before ; and if the employer bought a pair of mules, there is only one stand to take—that is a dandy pair of mules, that is the best pair of mules in the country !

Approves of 75 lb. Standard Potato Bag

Retail Grocer Expresses His Opinion on the Proposal Mentioned in Last Week's Issue—His Reasons for Considering This a Good Standard—Says Farmers Would Then Purchase Sugar Sacks, Which are Now Too Small — What do Others Think?

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I noticed in last week's issue of The Grocer an article headed "Standard Weight for Potatoes," and also that you requested opinions on this question. I am of the opinion that a 5 peck 75-pound bag should be made the standard for a bag of potatoes. My reasons are that besides being easier to handle, we grocers can dispose of our sugar sacks to the farmers to a much better advantage than at present, because now a sugar sack will not hold much more comfortably. They are just the right size for that quantity.

As it is now farmers do not want them. A few have been fined for selling them as a bag of potatoes and therefore are very reluctant about having anything to do with them since they do not hold the 90 lbs. generally recognized as a bag. Therefore if we had a standard potato bag of 75 pounds, farmers would soon become aware that they could make good use of sugar sacks. At the present time they freqdently have to use good grain bags for potatoes.

Bags Not all Same Size.

Then again many of the bags in use vary as to size. There are some 2 bushel grain bags and a farmer, onto his job, will not fill these since unless they are tied down close they are awkward to handle, and if they are not tied down they do not look full even if there are 90 pounds in them. Such being the case disputes arise as to the quantity they contain. Some people are particular in getting the 90 pounds ; I am not, so long as I know I'm getting 6 pecks of salable potatoes, as I do not sell them by the pound. It is an easy matter to get 100 lbs. of potatoes into the large bag and 85 lbs. into a sugar bag if there are plenty of small potatoes. I usually tell the farmer to keep his little "spuds" at home, because he is only giving them away by mixing them with the large ones.

Not long ago I surprised a farmer by telling him that he still had a bag of potatoes by measure after taking out almost a peck of small ones. The remainder were large and the small potatoes served to fill in the holes between. When he saw the operation performed he was astonished that he had not noticed the circumstance before. Around here farmers usually sell by the measure, therefore they would be considerably in pocket if they only sold the large potatoes.

If we were to sell by weight in one and two peck lots—15 and 30 lbs.—keeping out the smaller potatoes we would often find we only could get 75 lbs. from the 90.

While on this subject I might say that last week I purchased from a farmer a bag of apples, apparently in a nice clean bag, but on emptying them into a box I found that the bag contained, along with the apples about 2 quarts of sand, chaff, buckwheat and other dirt. What would this have done to a nice sample of wheat ? It certainly caused me a lot of extra work cleaning the apples for display. This shows we must look out for ourselves.

It Has Been a Revelation— An Eye-Opener

That I'll readily admit.

And my best advertising agent bears the name "FIVE ROSES." It has been my strongest business puller in the past year—full of varied selling points—pleasing each cook in a different quarter.

And each new housewife that comes into the fold grows delightedly enthusiastic over her oven consequences, bursting with the pride of creation she burns to unbosom herself to envious friends of the burden of her success secret.

This is human nature — to share with others our joys and triumphs.

And where is the woman who does not delight in showing the way to baking happiness.

Cooking is as much their profession as selling is yours. This kitchen talk is good business. If I counted all the new faces that FIVE ROSES has brought me—smiling faces—customers I would have given almost anything to secure. All this whispering about FIVE ROSES excellence has been grist to my mill.

The cheapest advertising—the most effective.

Never apologies to offer—never humble pie to consume—nor costly salve to be applied on wounded feelings.

And sales keep piling up.

Marmalade Oranges Arrive This Week

Prices of Bitter Oranges are Quite Reasonable—Big Season in California Oranges—4,250 Cars Shipped From Southern California From Nov. 1 to Jan. 9—No Heavy Buying by Retailers.

Supplies of California oranges remain plentiful with excellent quality and a good demand. Shipments of oranges from Southern California from Nov. 1 to Jan. 9 amounted to 4,250 cars, compared with 1,931 cars last season up to Jan. 10. The latest estimate of the present season's California citrus crop published in Southern California gives a total of 48,000 cars. The number of cars of oranges for Southern California is placed at 38,200 cars; lemons, 6,800 cars; north of Tehachapi oranges, 3,000 cars. This is nearly 8,000 cars larger than the record citrus crop of 1908-1909.

Marmalade oranges have arrived and a good season's sale is looked forward to, as prices are reasonable.

A Montreal report of the apple situation says that there is not much change in the market there. Stocks are light and so is the demand. A few mixed cars are being offered from the west where, it now turns out, they are less scarce than reported some time ago.

Trade in most lines of vegetables could show an improvement over present conditions, but dealers report that potatoes are moving quite freely this month.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—There is little activity shown in this market. Prices for California oranges are on the decline, and the demand is fairly good. The prices for bananas are lower, and more activity is expected. Lemons maintain their firm position.

Vegetables—There is little change in the demand in this line, the market remaining somewhat dull. The supply in many lines is not heavy, and prices show an increase. Beets, carrots and cabbage have all advanced in price. There is a good demand for new Bermuda potatoes, considering present prices:

TORONTO.

Green Fruits.—Trade is drifting along in about the same channels, and although there have been no exciting splurges, still a fair amount of business is being done. The first shipment of bitter oranges for this market arrived this week. The price is about the same as last year, ranging from $2.50 to $2.75 per case. The wholesalers are looking forward to a good business in marmalade oranges as soon as trade in this line gets under way. California lemons are being offered ar $3.50 per case of 300's. So far the lemon trade is reported excellent, the quality of the stock being good, except in the best lemons which showed a slight falling off in quality. The heavy selling season for lemons is now approaching, as they are used in making marmalade and the lemon market has taken on a little firmer appearance. Grape fruit is going out quite freely. Malaga grapes which are getting scarce are quoted at a higher price, while cranberries are also a little dearer.

Vegetables.—A fair amount of trade continues in this line for the time of the year. Potatoes are staying at their high price and most dealers are quoting them at $1 per bag straight. Choice stock of New Brunswick potatoes on the local market are bringing $1.05 and $1.10 per bag and trade in this line is reported good. There are no heavy supplies of onions on the market just now and Spanish are quoted at $3 per case and yellow at as high as $1.50 per bag. There is a good demand for California celery at present prices, while cabbage and lettuce are selling fairly well.

A Dealer's Idea of the Value of the Fruit Trade

Sherbrooke, Que., Jan. 26—A local grocer believes that the fruit department besides being a profit payer itself, brings customers to the store who buy other goods also, and is therefore of double value. In speaking of how he conducts this department he said: "I find that the greatest asset in selling fruit of all kinds is proper display. Fruit, unlike the staple lines of groceries such as sugar, must be shown in order to be sold. A merchant would sell little fruit if he placed it in some dark corner and waited for customers to ask for it.

"Of course fruit must be displayed properly in order that the best advantages will be reaped. The merchant should therefore make a careful arrangement of his fruit stock and use plenty of price cards if he wishes to get the best results. Without carefulness, there is a big chance for most of the the profit being lost on this line. The buying has to be well looked after or the merchant will find himself at times confronted by big losses. The stock has to be well looked after also. No more fruit should be opened up than will be sold within a couple of days as unwrapped fruit soon becomes soft.

"Each morning, the stock should be assorted and all bad fruit picked out. If a dealer wants the continuance of a customer's trade, he must be particular about the quality of fruit sent out to customers as nothing spoils the trade like poor quality goods."

STANDARD FOR QUEBEC BAG.

Potatoes There Are Bought and Sold With 90 Pounds to the Bag.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—I notice in last week's issue of The Grocer you say in the course of an editorial on a standard bag for potatoes that in Quebec a standard exists. I would like to know what it is. I might add that I find your paper not only exceedingly interesting but a first class investment.

HAMILTON GROCER.

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 26, 1911.

EDITORIAL NOTE—The standard weight of a bag of potatoes in Quebec Province is 90 lbs. On the Montreal markets, however, farmers are allowed to use an 80 lb. standard.

A delegation of vegetable growers from Quebec and Ontario recently visited the capital and asked for the following standard weights :—Potatoes, 80 pounds; onions, 75 ; turnips, 70 ; artichokes, 75 ; beets, 70 ; carrots, 70 ; parsnips, 60.

An interesting address was given to the Canadian Club at Montreal recently, by H. B. Ames, M.P., on the subject of Canadian Trade with Australia. Mr. Ames in the course of his remarks pointed out that the geographical position of Canada as the antipodes of Australia, with its seasons also at opposite, offered magnificent facilities for an exchange of such products as apples, etc. At the time of year when our apples were becoming a scarcity, Australian apples—which by the way are said to be fully equal in quality to the luscious Canadian product—are just beginning to come in plentifully, and vice versa.

Fish Trade Still Remains Steady

A Fair Amount of Business is Being Done in Most Centres—A Shipment of Halibut has Been Made From Alaska to Nova Scotia—Weather on Eastern Coast is Cold and Stormy and Receipts of Fresh Fish Were Small Last Week.

Reports of the fish trade throughout the Dominion are favorable and it looks like a good season for this line. During the past week, halibut has been imported from Alaska to Halifax as none of this fish has been landed by the eastern fishermen at that port. This is the first shipment from Alaska, as stock was brought before from British Columbia in case of a shortage. The weather on the eastern coast is cold and stormy and the receipts of fresh fish during the past week have been small. Bank cod, stock of which is scarce, has reached the highest price in years. The lobster catch continues small.

Supplies in most lines are not over plentiful and will be required for use before the end of the season.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—Haligonians are now eating halibut from Alaska. For the first time in the history of the Maritime Provinces halibut has been imported from Alaska. During the present season there has been a marked scarcity of halibut on the local market, no fish being landed by the native fishermen, so the dealers had to look elsewhere for a supply. Heretofore some halibut has been imported from British Columbia. Local dealers state that the Alaska fish is of a splendid quality. Despite the fact that the Halifax firm has had to pay heavy transportation charges and also duty, the halibut is selling at the same price as was charged for local caught fish. The past week has been unusually cold and stormy along the coast and the receipts of fresh fish were small. All kinds of fresh fish, with the exception of halibut, are now scarce, while the lobster catch is also small. Advices from Oporto say that prices are firm, and a vessel is now loading a cargo here for that port. The wholesale price of bank cod in Lunenburg is now $6.25 per quintal, the highest price for many years. Stocks are getting low, and prices will remain firm, but it is thought that they have about reached their limit. Pickled herring and alewives are advancing, and the spring catch of the latter is about used up. Few herring are now coming from Newfoundland, the season's imports being about over. Prices quoted now are :—Large shore cod, $7.75 to $8; medium, $7 to $7.25; large bank, $6.75; haddock hard shore, $5.25 to $5.50; western, $5; hake, $4.75 to $5; pollock, $4.50. These prices are ex-store.

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—The trade in all lines of fish on this market remains brisk and the amount of business passing compares favorably with that of other years. Under the favorable weather conditions, frozen lake fish have been in good demand, while a big trade is being done in salt fish. Oysters are selling well for the time of the year. Prices for most lines remain the same but there has been a drop in the price of smelts, No. 1 dropping from 12 to 10c., and extra from 18 to 15c.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—There is sort of speculation in the market just now in many lines, due to two principal causes,—The lateness of Lent and the weather.

Fishing on the Atlantic is closed for the season, frozen herring fishing is also at an end. The catch in both these lines has been above the average, but as the absorbing power of the market is getting greater there is no fear of a surplus in any line.

As anticipated, halibut is advancing steadily in price, the visible supply running low. Frozen fish such as Tom cods, smelts and herring, are the bulk of the demand just now. In the pickle, prepared, and salt lines the market is quiet, and the supply is not over needful.

Oysters, both shell and bulk, are a little quieter now.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John.—The severe cold weather last week practically tied up the fishing business at this port. Heavy gales and the thermometer below zero made it impossible for the fishermen to do anything and there was not an arrival during the week. Some of the retailers in order to get supplies brought shipments in from Nova Scotia by rail. A few Gaspereaux were offered last week. They were taken through the ice on the St. John river.

Haddock and cod are selling at 3 cents per pound. Smelts are scarce and are quoted at 9 cents per pound. Frozen mackerel, from Canso, are bringing 27 cents each and lobsters are selling at 10 cents for small sizes and 35 cents for larger ones. British Columbia frozen salmon and halibut are on the market, the former at 15 cents per pound and the latter at 10 to 11 cents.

Items Done in Brief for Busy Dealers

Medicinal Qualities of the Orange — Large Area in Texas Onions—How the Banana is Attended to in Transit to Markets of the World—Enormous Business Done in Chicago Mail Order Houses.

An eminent lord chancellor of England (Baron King) served his apprenticeship in a grocer's shop. Thirty-nine lord mayors of London have been grocers. John Ruskin, the famous author and critic was also engaged in the business for a short time.

The more a retail grocer knows about the various goods he offers for sale, the better it will be for his sales account.

Eight thousand acres in Texas are growing onions and it is expected that the production should total 4,500 cars.

The orange has acquired a reputation as a curative for several ills. In Paraguay the natives regard the orange essence as a valuable medicinal ointment with extraordinary healing properties. The Arabs cut and dry the green orange, afterwards steeping the pieces for forty days in oil, thus preparing an essence which the women use for restoring a brilliant black color to their faded hair. As far back as 1743, the orange was used as a cure for cold in the head as follows: "Thin the rind of an orange, roll this up inside out and thrust a roll in each nostril."

A health officer of North Dakota states that asparagus and cauliflower are frequently affected by a bacterial growth which secretes a virulent poison. He warns the residents to prevent the development of this poison by not eating either vegetable unless thoroughly boiled and well cooked.

Few people have any idea of the extent of the banana industry or the process by which bananas are brought to market. The banana being a strictly tropical plant, has to be transported a great distance. It is an exceedingly sensitive and delicate fruit, responds readily to atmospheric condition and is easily bruised. All these things have to be taken into consideration in transportation. The fact that heat will ripen bananas renders it necessary to take such precautions as shall guard against the fruit ripening before it reaches its destination. Ventilation has been found to be the only efficient method of treating banasas in transit, as refrigeration, that is ice, will not do the work. The banana plant varies in size according to location and the prevailing winds. Ordinarily it is about 15 feet high with leaves six or eight feet long, and perhaps a foot or eighteen inches wide. A single banana plant produces but one bunch, taking eleven months to do it. From this a person may form an idea of the vast acreage that it requires to grow the amount of bananas now exported from the tropics. In the fruit stores and markets, bananas are generally hung with the fruit curving downward but it grows on the plant with the fruit curving upwards.

Two of the big mail order houses in Chicago do annual businesses amounting to $80,000,000. Supposing the average sales of the small country retail merchant are $8,000 per year, this income of $80,000,000 would represent the sales of 10,000 of them who might have been helping to build up small towns all over the country.

Are Combining to Operate Many Grocery Stores

New York, Jan. 26.—A chain store organization known as the United Grocers' Company and capitalized at $500,000 has been formed here. This concern expects to begin with about 100 stores in Brooklyn before branching out into other sections. It will be composed principally of retail grocers and all the stores going into the combination will have a uniform sign.

In referring to the new company the organizer gave out these statements:

"We propose to organize into one big institution a large number of retail grocers, for the purpose of conducting the assembling and distributing of goods on a modern and economical basis; to systematize and strengthen the individual retailers who are members of our company; to elevate standards of all kinds of food; to elevate the standard of the retail grocery business; to demand a high degree of sanitation where goods are prepared and sold; to give our support to the proper food authorities, looking to the promotion of the health and welfare of the consumer; to conduct the retailing of groceries with care and cleanliness; to give full weight and measure, and to recommend goods of superior quality and better value to the end that the cost of living may be reduced.

"Our plans are so arranged as to prevent an individual from gaining control in the company.

"The company will give to the retail grocer all the advantages which accrue to the chain stores from buying goods at the lowest possible price. It will deliver and haul goods most economically, and the routes will be so arranged that a lot of energy will be saved, one wagon covering a territory that under other conditions would be covered by several. We shall haul sugar direct from the refineries without putting it in a warehouse and trucking it out again.

"Our stores will be designated by a characteristic sign, and they must measure up to the standard we shall establish. We shall insist upon honesty, cleanliness and proper weight. We shall require that everything in connection with the stores be of the highest grade. The stores will not be owned by the company. The proposition will be entirely an individual proposition and a profit-sharing plan for the consumer. Every stockholder in the company will have an equal show."

In Elmvale, Ont., there is an agent who acts as the representative in that district of a large Toronto mail order house. He simply takes orders from the farmers and forwards them on to the house in question and gets his commission. He was formerly in business in Elmvale, but sustained loss by fire some time ago. His name is S. Draper.

The Montreal Grocers' Clerks' Association have transferred their headquarters from 89 Berri Street to 80 St. Denis, the headquarters of the Retail Merchants' Association, and become affiliated with St. Peter's Union. The Association has a strong mutual benefit department, and with a membership of 200 should be in a sound financial condition before the end of 1911. N. Gagnon, of Gervais Freres, is their secretary and all grocers' clerks are requested to make inquiries of him about the association.

A Novel Method for Encouraging Early Purchases

New York, Jan. 26.—Many merchants are constantly wondering which is the best system for the bigger business and the better profits, a cash or credit. The Siegel-Cooper Company, of this city, undoubtedly think that the charge system is the best. In a recent half page advertisement, the following words appear in a prominent position: "If you are not a charge customer, we will make it easy for you to become one."

The argument given is that it saves the customer the delay in waiting for change and that it will put him in a more satisfactory position to purchase.

This company also had a novel manner of inducing customers to purchase early during the holiday season, by stating that charge customers who made purchases from Dec. 1st to Dec. 10th, would have the goods billed on February 1st instead of January 1st.

A GROCER'S CO-OPERATION

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes gives a lustre which far outlasts all others under the heat of the stove, and that is why it has so many friends that call for it over the grocery counters the world around. We believe that the real live grocer wants to push the goods that please his customers, and that is why we have the hearty co-operation of thousands upon thousands of grocers everywhere. It pays you to push it.

The Best Proposition!

Looked at any way you please, no line of goods holds out the same inducements to the Grocer as

UPTON'S
Jams, Jellies and Marmalade

First, they are made from the finest fruits in the world---Canadian Fruits---selected by experts and preserved and bottled in an up-to-date, sanitary factory, which is a model of cleanliness. Second, the "Upton" line never 'sticks,' because our extensive consumer advertising has created a demand for these goods; and third, selling "Upton's" specialties invariably leaves a satisfaction and profit-margin behind that makes trading a pleasure.

Are you featuring "Upton's"? If not, fall in line with the 'wise' ones.

IMPORTANT DECISION

New York State Pure Food Law and Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce

Department of Agriculture declares Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce to be a Genuine Worcestershire Sauce.

(Copy)

STATE OF NEW YORK

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Raymond A. Pearson, Commissioner.

George L. Flanders, First Assistant Commissioner.

Hon. William F. Sheehan,
37 Wall Street,
New York City.

Albany, January 11, 1911.

Dear Sir:—

The ex-Attorney General before retiring from office, failed to render an opinion upon the question which was argued by you before him relative to Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce."

He stated, however, in a conference with the Commissioner of Agriculture, that the question involved was, in his judgment, similar to the question involved in the case of Lea & Perrins' "Worcestershire Sauce"; that he found it difficult to distinguish between them; and that the line of demarkation was so indefinite as to make it doubtful, in his mind, whether the Commissioner of Agriculture would be able to maintain the position that the Holbrooks Company should brand or label the said goods to show the constituents thereof. He further stated that his judgment was that this sauce should be treated in the same way as the Lea & Perrins' sauce and for similar reasons.

In view of this attitude, I am therefore constrained to say to you that no further attempts under the provisions of the present law will be made to require the manufacturers of Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce" to label the goods so as to show their constituents, nor to prevent them from using the word "Worcestershire."

Respectfully,

R. A. PEARSON,
Commissioner.

In the Lead for 75 Years

FOR the above lengthy period, during which tea has been the popular drink of the British people, RIDGWAY'S TEA, one of the first imported, has always been in the front rank.

Ridgway's Teas

because of the care in selection and the art shown in blending, have always enjoyed the highest reputation for quality and flavor, and will surely be as welcome in the homes of Canada as they are elsewhere.

Good tea means good trade! Why not try a line of RIDGWAY'S? The housewife will surely place her grocery order where she gets her tea, and it is 'up to you' to get her custom by selling her good tea—RIDGWAY'S.

Simple, But Oh, How It Sold Dates!

Here's a simple little thing one grocer did that brought him three days of splendid date sales.

He cut our advertis e ment of Dromedary Dates from a monthly magazine — we advertise in nearly all the good ones—and pasted it on the front of his window. Over it was a brush sign, "We Sell These," and in the window a display of the cartons with one open. He says he never sold so many dates in his life.

Dromedary Dates are sure to sell if people see them, because they are the finest selected fruit, wrapped carefully in oiled paper and packed in cartons. They're clean, fresh, and indefinitely moist. All jobbers.

The Tea Peddlers of This Province Sell Over 1,500,000 Pounds of Tea Annually!

This is a startling statement, and this is how we found it out. Since October 1909, our representatives have sampled 56 towns. These towns are located in every part of Ontario. Our men have collected accurate statistics showing the condition of the tea trade in each town. Before leaving the "SALADA" package they enquire from each householder the kind of tea she uses. They do this before she is aware that our men are in any way connected with "SALADA."

This information tells precisely the kind of tea sold in each town. It tells us that the peddler controls well over 15 per cent. of the tea trade for the whole Province.

By way of illustration

In West Toronto,	over 29½ per cent.
In Almonte,	over 19½ per cent,
In Fergus,	over 22 per cent.
In Tweed,	over 22 per cent.
In Beaverton,	over 25 per cent.
In Brantford,	over 30½ per cent.

This ought to arouse the fighting blood of every grocer. It ought to arouse you.

The peddler doesn't hold back. He doesn't wait for the policy, plan or effort of others. He goes straight ahead—he hustles for business—he acts alone.

Adopt his tactics. Don't wait for Association, Convention or Meeting to discuss this condition. Get after the peddler yourself. Act alone. Get the people to buy a better tea than the peddler sells—a tea the peddler cannot buy—a package tea of the highest quality—"SALADA."

"SALADA" Tea and no other will regain this trade for you. Every package represents the utmost in tea value. Each package contains tea, plantation fresh, fragrant and pure.

Put a pile on your front counter.

Recommend it to your customers. And watch the peddler join the largest organization in the world – The Down and Out Club

In the sections where the choicest Canadian Butter is made, you will go a long way before you find any but

Opinions on Proposed Tariff Changes

The Views in Brief of Business Men Throughout the Dominion on Recent Negotiations Between Canada and the United States—These Indicate the Complex Nature of the Proposals—Many Canadian Industries, Some Claim, Will be Adversely Affected—The Milling, Salt and Fruit Growing Industries Among Them —The Prospects for Fish Trade.

Are the proposed tariff changes to be or not to be? This is the question of the hour.

In the meantime the interests affected are busily engaged in either trying to ing it on, according to their respective it on, according to their respective points of view. That it is unwise to tinker with the tariff is heard on all sides, while others see a greater future for Canada, providing both the United States and Canada see fit to ratify this agreement reached by the representatives of both countries.

"Let us give it a full trial anyway," comes from one who is completely at sea on account of the complexity of the proposals. "We will never know what good or bad there is to it if we reject it."

In view of the many and varied expressions of opinion that have been given, The Canadian Grocer has endeavored to collect a number bearing particularly on the grocery trade and assemble them so that readers may have a fuller knowledge of the points at issue and be more acquainted with the objections raised by some and the favorable criticism of others.

Below, therefore, are given views from interested men in various parts of the Dominion.

In Western Canada.

Winnipeg, Feb. 2—Among produce dealers and market gardeners entirely different opinions prevail. A similarity of views occur only once in the statements of the five factions of the produce business and this is that the consumer will get the best quality of provisions at a rate almost 30 per cent. lower than that which is at present charged.

V. MAGER, an ex-president of the Manitoba Market Gardeners' Association said: "The market gardeners were opposed to such a step and they are yet. The effect will be that greenhouses in particular will have to shut up. We cannot compete in the open market with the United States, because the winter is so long. From this it is apparent that the price of fuel puts us out of the race so far as greenhouse vegetables are concerned, and the same applies to all kinds of flowers."

WILLIAM BURDETT, stated his views as follows: "It means a reduction of thirty per cent. in the cost to consumers here of fruit and vegetables. Even paying this duty we are now able to sell the better lines of U. S. vegetables at almost the same prices as we can handle local produce."

Grain Men's Views.

A. D. CHISHOLM, president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, thought that free trade in wheat would be a decided benefit to the country.

"Producers," he said, "would get higher values for their products. The Minneapolis market is, as a general rule, higher than the Winnipeg, and as the spring wheat producing area in the States is becoming limited, Minneapolis millers will be wanting Canadian wheat which is of superior milling qualities. The Canadian railways and terminal elevators may be affected to a certain extent for a short time, but I believe that eventually conditions will so arrange themselves that we will not notice the amount of wheat that will be shipped to the States, owing to the fact that such large quantities will be produced in Western Canada. I cannot see that it will have any effect on the Hudson Bay Railroad, nor a detrimental one on Winnipeg as a trading centre. In my opinion, if the proposed agreement goes into effect at once, we will see a great difference in the price of oats, as they will be needed in large quantities in North Dakota and Northern Minnesota for seed and feed."

ALEXANDER MACDONALD, of the A. Macdonald Company, wholesale grocers, had not had much time to study conditions, but taking it all round he did not think that the proposed changes amounted to very much. Free wheat would benefit the farmers, but as far as vegetables and food stuffs were concerned, although he had seen nothing definite, he thought that it must mean a saving to the consumer in prices to some extent.

A. W. CHAPMAN, manager of the Codville Company, wholesale grocers, thought that if the treaty were finally agreed to, it ought to make a big reduction on foodstuffs.

What a Miller Says.

ANDREW KELLY, Winnipeg, president of the Western Canada Flour Mills, said it was a great mistake to interfere with the tariff, and that if the changes would go into effect, the milling industry would be hit hard. "If these changes are made," he said, "the government should see that duty is removed from all products made from wheat, but if the United States is determined that wheat is to go in free, our government should do everything possible to have the duty on flour and other by-products going from Canada into the United States, removed, so as to put us on an equal footing with U. S. millers. Then if we can't do business it will be our own fault and we cannot blame the government. The farmers should insist upon this and not leave it to the millers. If this were done there would be much more wheat grown in Canada, and the farmer would get by-products to feed his stock."

A Fruit Dealer's Views.

R. R. SCOTT, manager of the MacPherson Fruit Co., speaking on the matter, said: "I note that fruit and vegetables are on the free list, and this is what we have contended for all the time. The products of the soil should be as free as water between the two countries. The effect will be to give our eastern farmers the benefit of a larger market in the large cities across the line, and it will mean cheaper fruit and vegetables to the farmer in the three western provinces, where for about ten months in the year all vegetables have to be imported, while all the year around fruits, with the exception of what little British Columbia can send. Of course, the tariff changes will have no effect on the present prices charged for oranges, lemons, bananas, pineapples, grape fruit, and several others of the green fruits which are at present free from duty. The fruits I have detailed are the principal ones consumed in the west."

Some Nova Scotia Opinions.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 2.—The general opinion expressed here is that the proposed reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States will be of great benefit to Nova Scotia, particularly to the farmers and the fishermen.

ARTHUR BOUTILIER, president of the Halifax Cold Storage Company, said that the agreement will be of great benefit to all concerned.

H. H. BANKS, of Banks & Williams, commission merchants, and who is interested in the Cape Breton fisheries, stated that it would greatly benefit the Cape Breton fishery business, but from his causal reading of the announcements already made he thought it might affect the local consumer of potatoes, butter, eggs, etc., by stiffening the prices.

Prospects for Lunenburg.

Lunenburg, N. S., Feb. 2.—It is predicted here upon all sides that a new era is about to dawn upon the fishing industry. The admission of all kinds of fish, fresh, pickled, smoked, kippered and boneless, will boom Lunenburg as a fishing port. It is said that it will revolutionize the trade entirely, for instead of the dried produce, immense quantities of fresh codfish will go into the U. S. market and be sold on a high scale of profits. It also means that the people will get their returns more promptly than under any other system, and naturally bigger prices.

Do Not See Eye to Eye.

Digby, N.S., Feb. 2.—H. B. SHORT, manager of the Maritime Fish Corporation, says free fish will prove an injury to their business; but if the United States begin butting into N. S. markets, N. S. dealers would retaliate, especially with finnan haddie shipments. He says: "In any event we will lose no sleep over the affair."

MAJOR M. C. DENTON, of D. & O. Sproule, wholesale fish dealers, says that it is a wide question to consider. He believes free fish will be a benefit. Free lobsters has been.

CAPT. JOSEPH E. SNOW, wholesale fish dealer, says it will be the best thing that has ever happened for everybody concerned in the fish business in Nova Scotia.

E. M. ROBERTSON, wholesale fish dealer, Digby, formerly of St. John, says that it is a big thing to consider, but on the whole will benefit the wholesale fish firms, but will be liable to injure the vessel and boat fishermen. For instance, fresh haddock are offered in Gloucester at present for $1.60, when they are $2.75 here. They can be imported by our firms cheaper than they can be bought from our own fishermen. Nova Scotia fish has a good market in the Upper Provinces at present, a business worked up by one dealer during the past 20 years. This will now be entered by the United States, and we in turn will have to get into their markets.

Yarmouth merchants generally predict that it would give a great impetus to trade.

Effect on N. B. Fish and Potatoes.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 2.—P. A. SMITH, wholesale and retail fish dealer, said there was no doubt that the exporters and fishermen would benefit as a result of fish being placed on the free list, but he felt satisfied that the price for the consumer in this section would be advanced. Better prices could be secured by sending to the United States markets. Great quantities were sent now with the duties as they are, but without a duty, much more would be shipped. About the only item in this line that would benefit the Canadian consumer would be oysters. The yield of New Brunswick oysters has been growing less every year, and with the ten cents removed from the United States stock, there would likely be heavier importations from Cape Cod.

THOMAS GORMAN, wholesale grocer, thought the proposed arrangement was decidedly favorable to Canada, and more especially to the Maritime Provinces in the way of natural products. Everything was in our favor, he considered, and the exportation of vegetables, more particularly potatoes, to the United States from this province, which was large even in the face of the duty, would be given a great impetus. The reduction on lard and pork would be of immeasurable benefit to the fishermen, and would in no way injure us, as the large clear pork imported was not obtainable here.

F. A. PETERS, of C. H. Peters' Sons, flour and feed dealers, said the new tariff would open a wide market for all products of the farm, and should be advantageous to the growers of potatoes, hay and similar articles. There should always be a good market in the States for hay and for some other lines on which the U. S. prices are now much higher than the local prices.

E. ALLAN SCHOFIELD, a recognized authority on agricultural matters, felt convinced that reciprocity in natural products would be a great stimulus to the farmer. It would be possible to ship cream from here to the United States and other lines of produce could also be profitably exported.

W. F. LEONARD, of Leonard Bros., discussing the fish business, said free fish would undoubtedly be a benefit to the men engaged in the fish business, as it would create a wider demand for their catch, and increase their sale. One sure result of this would be an increase in the price to the local consumer. Mr. Leonard said Nova Scotia would benefit even more than New Brunswick. He did not think there was any likelihood of the fish trust in the United States seeking to secure control of the business in this section.

C. B. LOCKHART, who is interested in the provision business, expressed the opinion that putting potatoes on the free list would not operate to the advantage of New Brunswick. This year, he said, the United States had a surplus of potatoes. Aroostook (Me.) farmers were sending potatoes to St. John for shipment to Cuba. Under the new arrangement the farmers of Maine would send their potatoes to Montreal and other Canadian markets, and the probability was that New Brunswick farmers could not meet this competition, and the agricultural development in this respect would be retarded.

What Quebec Men Say.

Montreal, Feb. 2.—The reciprocity deal is no doubt the most talked of question in Montreal at present, and opinions are rife as to the ultimate effects on trade between Canada and the United States.

So far as putting fruit on the free list was concerned, dealers seem to be unanimous that it would be a splendid thing for the latter and the consumer, and would not interfere greatly with the producers, since fruits and vegetables were only imported into Canada when they could not be grown here, or during seasons when there was no home production.

MR. MEIGHEN, of the Fruit Auction Co., is of the opinion that by placing fruit on the free list we will get a much greater quantity of California and Southern States fruit than in the past. "We have previously had to face an import duty of 50 cents a crate on grapes and pears, which dealers in United States cities had not to meet, while the same fruit was not being grown in Canada. In the same way there was a heavy duty on U. S. strawberries, at a time when there was no such thing as a Canadian strawberry. It simply meant that to the extent of the duty the Canadian consumer was prevented from using U. S. fruits and vegetables at times when they were not grown at all in Canada."

Produce Mens' Views.

Much interest was evinced by the produce men of the city over the reciprocity proposal, but they are generally averse to discussing them until a meeting of the "Produce Exchange" could be held to discuss the situation.

"It is evidently a farmer's tariff," said A. A. AYER, "but I do not think it will work out to the benefit of the farmers, as Hon. Mr. Fielding seems to think it will. The whole thing has come as a great surprise to us. We thought the duties might be reduced in certain things but we did not look for free trade in anything, as is proposed. I think it will injure the farmer in the end."

Fish Men Pleased.

E. J. BYRNE, of Leonard Brothers, dealers in fish and oysters, said that there would be new fields opened up, and consequently an increase in trade. The fish producers and packers would, of course, be the most greatly affected for good, and would be able to get into the close markets of the United States, where the demand has always been of the best for the commodity they handle. Business in this line for the distributor, would have to go ahead of former marks, and he did not think that, as some claimed, on account of the increased demand for fish from across the border, that there would be any raising of the price to the consumer of the home market.

J. A. PAULHUS, of D. Hatton & Co.: —"While putting fish on the free list will not make any great general difference, so far as I can see. It will prove of great advantage to the producers and packers of fish for general trade."

"To the people who catch and sell the fish this change will mean a big thing, because it will open up to them the big market in the United States, whose demand for fresh fish is much greater than that in Canada. On the other hand it will mean a good thing for dealers in a big distributing point like Montreal, because now we shall be able to supply such places as Buffalo, Detroit and Saratoga, which have hitherto been closed to us by the tariff. So far as I can see it will be a splendid thing for the trade generally to be able to handle fish all over the continent without duty."

He thought that letting down of the barriers might mean higher prices along some lines. There were various fish products which had been exclusively caught off the Canadian Atlantic coast, and chiefly sold in Canada, owing to the United States duty. But now that the barriers were to be let down they would be freely sold in Boston, New York and other centres, and the result would be that owing to the increased competition, the demand prices on this side might be made higher.

"But," said Mr. Paulhus, "It will work both ways. Take the oyster trade, for instance. We do not produce any bulk oysters in Canada, and it will help that trade by the dropping of the duty of ten to twelve cents a gallon and as we import into Canada every year something like 200,000 gallons of bulk oysters, it will mean considerable, although the reduction to the consumer of bulk oysters will not amount to much."

"Taken all round," said Mr. Paulhus, "the putting of fish on the free list, I think, will be a good thing for this country, and will help the trade materially. It will undoubtedly make some lines of fish dearer to the consumer, but on the other hand it will make other fish, which are not produced in Canada, cheaper, so that on the whole, I think the advantage of the change will with Canada."

The Milling Industry.

ROBERT MEIGHEN believes that a severe blow has been struck at the milling companies of Canada. Speaking of the effect of free wheat Mr Meighen said: "The United States does not afford us a new market. It may purchase our hard wheat to mill in its extensive plants in the West in order to produce a flour suitable for consumption by our best foreign customers, retaining the by-products for home consumption, of which it is greatly in need. We were capturing from the United States miller the foreign consuming market for our hard wheat flour. This was decidedly in the best interest of the Canadian farmer. The United States millers are our aggressive competitors in all wheat products—excepting mill feed—in every consuming market of the world; and let me say that they will continue to be our competitors even when they have a population of 200 millions. They have now under wheat cultivation over fifty millions of acres from which the average yield is about thirteen bushels per acre. They have still large areas to be brought under wheat cultivation, and they will increase the yield to from twenty to twenty-three bushels per acre."

S. J. MATTHEWSON believed our representative had made as good a deal as possible looking at the matter from a broad standpoint.

Ontario Men Interested.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—W. C. OMAND, of the Saskatchewan Milling Co., thought that if the proposed free entry of wheat to the United States comes into force, it would demoralize the flour trade in Canada.

"At the present time," he said, "Canadian mills sell bran in the United States and are able to do so because the bran obtained from Canadian wheat is of such high quality. But if there is no duty on wheat, the United States mills will make their own bran out of the Canadian wheat and Canadian mills will not be able to compete on account of the duty on bran entering the United States. As a result Canadian mills will not make as much out of their wheat. The price of Canadian flour will be higher and millers will not be able to compete with the United States flour in foreign markets. It will not make any higher prices to the farmer for his wheat because no higher price can be paid for wheat than will allow flour to be exported at a profit. Canada has built up a trade for flour produced from Canadian wheat and the United States millers will under the proposed reduction reap the benefit by being able to undersell Canada in flour made from Canadian wheat."

By-Products of Grains.

R. K. McINTOSH, of the Canadian Cereal & Milling Company, said: "The proposed placing of wheat on the free list will certainly be an extremely bad thing for the Canadian flour industry. It is just what the United States millers have been wanting for some time. Manitoba wheat is of a much higher quality than that produced in the United States, the flour that is made from it being of better quality. One of its good points is that it will not dry out as quickly as United States flour. Giving as it would, a better flour it would give the United States millers a better chance to export their product. This gives them equal advantages with the Canadian miller but it does not stop there, for they have still a greater advantage over the miller in Canada. The mills in the States are large, some of them capable of producing as high as 70,000 bags of flour daily and much larger than anything we have in Canada.

"By giving them access to the Western wheat which they can get to the mills as cheaply as the Canadian millers and producing as they do such large amount, the cost of production is reduced so much, that they can easily export their flour cheaper than any Canadian mills. The result will be that the Canadian mills will have only a home demaud and the United States besides getting their own home demand will also control the export business.

"The rolled oats market will be just as badly affected as the flour. The Canadian miller at present has been able to sell the by-products of oats such as oat hulls in the United States markets, which has allowed him to manufacture rolled oats so as to compete with the States in export trade. If the duty is taken off oats, the United States miller will be able to import Canadian oats and sell the oat hulls at home while the Canadian mills in order to sell his oat hulls in the United States market will have to pay a duty of $2.50 per ton which the United States propose to leave on. Thus as in the case of flour, the Canadian mills will have to be content with home demand only as they will not be able to compete with the States in export trade."

H. W. THORPE, of McWilliam & Everist, wholesale fruit dealers, said that the proposed change in duty would make the goods which are imported from the States during the winter and spring, a little cheaper to the consumer.

He expressed the opinion that Canadian growers of fruits and vegetables do not like to see any goods imported from the States even in the spring because by the time their goods are ready, the appetites of the consumer has been satisfied to a certain extent by the imported goods. The novelty being over, the demand for Canadian goods is not so great, especially if the prices are inclined to be high.

WHITE & CO., wholesale fruit dealers thought that the proposed reduction of 2 cents per lb. on strawberries would make little difference in prices. We import them from the United States when the price is high and a reduction of a little over one cent. per box makes little difference. The removal of the duty of 30 per cent. on vegetables would give us lower prices on all that we import. Some cabbage are brought in during the spring when the Canadian article is not available and the new terms would mean a lower price on what goods are imported. It would make little difference when Canadian goods can be secured unless the prices in the United States were considerably lower than Canadian at the time, in which case it would tend to keep prices lower.

CLEMES BROS., wholesale fruit merchants in speaking of vegetables, cabbage, onions and strawberries, considered that the proposed removal of the duty on these lines would be beneficial to the Canadian consumer. It would not, in the opinion of Mr. Clemes, cause a conflict between United States and Canadian goods because we import the articles only when they cannot be had in this country.

"In the case of vegetables we import them when there are no supplies here but as soon as they may be had here, we discontinue importing because fresher goods may be had from Canadian dealers and the freight is less.

"The removal of the duty on strawberries will give up cheaper United States berries which we usually import before our berries have ripened. I do not think that United States and Canadian strawberries will conflict; for while we are getting our berries here, there is a plentiful supply on the other side for the United States markets. We have plenty of cabbage in Canada except in the spring when we are importing them and spring cabbage would be cheaper by the amount of reduction in duty. Few onions are imported from the United States as our own crops supply the demand pretty well. On the whole I think the placing of these articles on the free list will mean lower prices on them to Canadian consumers at a time when the Canadian article can not be had."

J. J. RYAN, potato merchant, Colborne St., considered that the potato market would not be affected to any great extent by the reduction in tariff.

"When new potatoes are being imported from the States in the spring before the new crop have matured here, it would mean that they would be cheaper by the amount of the reduction proposed. This year and in years when crop conditions are the same, it would make little difference in the price of potatoes here. Without shortness of crop demands it, potatoes are rarely exchanged between the two countries. During a year when there is a short crop here and a plentiful crop in the United States, it would tend to keep the price here moderate while on a short crop in the States it would cause potatoes to be dearer."

W. H. MILLMAN, of W. H. Millman & Sons—"The proposed free tariff will undoubtedly make the price of beans in Canada higher, and especially will this be noticeable in the best quality beans.

"Canada exports large quantities to the United States now with the present high duty and with 45 cents per bushel reduction the shipments to the other side will be greatly increased with the result that the price of beans will be higher here,

"Evaporated apples are about the same price at the present time in both Canada and the United States, and as the duty in both cases is much the same the price will not be affected to any great extent. In years when the supplies in either country were extraordinary low, their free entry might make a difference."

THE T. F. JAMES CO., wholesale fish dealers, remarked that only time would tell how prices or trade in fish would be affected by the proposed reduction in tariff. The change would tend to make a larger market for fish products, but whether prices would be affected could only be ascertained by a trial.

Butter and Egg Prices.

WM. RYAN CO., wholesale provision dealers, thought that the proposed reduction of tariff on butter and eggs would mean lower prices on these articles here. At the present time, if there was no duty on eggs or butter, they could be imported from the United States at a price conslderably lower than the present price here.

"Under the proposed tariff Canadian firms would not get large quantities of butter or eggs in storage in the fall as they are accustomed to now, because being subject to the markets in Chicago and New York, they could not tell whether the price would stand or not." He justified this opinion by referring to the recent slaughter of prices in these lines in the United States.

Fruit Growers to Protest.

St. Catharines, Ont., Feb. 2.—In this district the tariff proposals with regard to fruit are viewed with alarm by the fruit growers. A meeting of these men was called here last week the outcome of which was the decision to send a big deputation to Ottawa to protest against the change.

E. D. SMITH, Winona, states that should the change as proposed come into effect it would sacrifice the fruit-growing interests in order to obtain some little things from the United States.

It would kill, he claimed, the fruit industry in the Niagara district and British Columbia to such an extent that owners would not be able to obtain a hundred dollars an acre for lands now held at from four to six hundred dollars. While Northwest consumers wanted Canadian fruit, the sellers wanted California. The result would be the loss of the market and no more would growers sell tomatoes at good prices in Winnipeg, because the west would get them cheaper from Ohio.

The Salt Industry.

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 2.—That the Canadian salt industry would be adversely affected is the general opinion of Western Ontario salt manufacturers.

It is, however, also the opinion of some manufacturers that the proposals will not be ratified by both countries. It is their hope that it will not pass and from what can be learned of the attitude of the United States Senate they do not think that it will.

E. G. HENDERSON, manager of The Canadian Salt Co., states that at the present time there is an over production of salt in the United States and believes that should salt go on the free list it would probably be disastrous to the trade here.

N. A. LEACH, manager The Western Salt Co., Mooretown, Ont., expresses the view that, should the agreement be ratified, it would be disastrous to a number of salt plants in Canada.

UNEASY LIES THE SUSPICIOUS DEALER'S HEAD

Grocer Talks About Dishonesty Among Clerks Which He Believed Was Existing, But Which He Could Not Fathom For a Long Time—Suspicions Borne Out by an Oyster Sale.

Probably there is nothing that gives a grocer more cause for concern or is responsible for more worry than the honesty of his clerks. For instance, an actual happening not long ago aptly comes to the point. A woman came into a store, secured a quart of oysters and walked out. But she left no financial equivalent behind, neither cash nor credit.

If a grocer has any feeling that such a condition exists in his store he is continually worrying about something he is not sure actually exists. As day follows day and the sales pile up, he wonders just how much profit he has secured. The fact is that he does not know how much he has lost through the dishonesty of some clerk.

One grocer who recently disposed of a clerk who had charge of a separate department discovered that this department was nothing but a sink-hole. At least that is how he described it. He had an idea that some irregularities were going on, and he was irritated and peevish because he could not find out for sure.

The above oyster sale was one case, and it settled the question. There were others that were more than fancied and at any rate the grocer is looking after that department now himself. He claims that a dealer cannot do business if he has any suspicion that something is going wrong. His mind is diverted from his work, and the honest clerks are likely to suffer from his imaginings and the whole system becomes practically disrupted.

In this case referred to, it was difficult to obtain a direct clue or a "straight case." This clerk was receiving $15 a week and as the grocer made his sales he wondered to what extent his profits were being eaten into. "Uneasy is the grocer who has suspicions of this kind."

HONESTY OF CANADIAN RETAILERS.

Winnipeg, Feb. 2.—A complimentary luncheon was tendered George Landis Wilson, of the F. Cartz Wilson Co., Chicago, by the Credit Men's Association of this city. President H. H. Pigott, of the J. H. Ashdown Hardware Co., occupied the chair, and about seventy seats were occupied by representatives of every branch of retail commercial concerns.

Mr. Wilson pointed out that the most striking difference he could see in the credit system of Canada and the United States was that in Canada the personal equation, the integrity and reliability of the individual is first considered, whereas in the United States the chief factor is the material resources or assets of the person to whom credit is extended. He thought that taking all things into consideration. Canada had the advantage as the chance of an honest man making good given opportunity and sufficient ability, are greater than that of assets being there when you want them with a dishonest debtor. At any rate Canadian wholesalers were not making any more bad debts than their confreres across the border.

The merchants of Kindersley, Sask., have decided to close their stores at 7 p.m. every evening except Saturday. The early closing will be effective until the first of March.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

New Brunswick Grocers Use Their Coffee Mills to Good Advertising Effect—Regina Dealer Makes Sure He Carries High Quality Tea—A Flour Window That Made Sales—Selling Codfish by Means of Newspaper Advertising—Rolled Oats Window in Smith's Falls.

Advertising the Coffee Mill.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 2.—Several of the retail dealers recognizing the importance of the coffee trade have installed electric coffee mills. In two of the stores, the mills are placed in the rear of the show windows, raised about four feet so that they can be seen from the outside of the store, and yet so placed that they do not interfere in any way with the window trimming. One of the dealers has been sending out a series of circulars, enclosing them in envelopes with accounts or placing them in the order baskets. Some of the catch lines on the circulars are:

> "Good Morning; Was your coffee Good this Morning?— The "Daily Grind" is a daily pleasure here. We refer to grinding coffee. —Have you a drip coffee pot? Then you want your coffee pulverized, etc."

These have had the effect of directing attention to the coffee department and consequently sales have been materially increased. Another dealer has placed his mill in the centre of the store, and as the windows are low it is always in plain sight from the street or interior.

Buys a High Quality Tea.

Regina, Alta., Feb. 2.—"I find that a uniformly good grade of tea is an excellent advertisement for a grocery store," remarked a local merchant. "Families like a good cup of tea at every meal and if you can give them something that will suit their tastes, they are sure to return for more. The women especially are particular about their tea and as they do most of the buying of groceries, the fact can be used to good advantage. Of course, if a merchant wishes to be noted for his good tea, he must take particular care in the selection of stocks to get the class of goods that will really bring returned trade. The tea trade can be made of double use by introducing and selling other lines of goods."

A Selling Flour Window.

Winnipeg, Feb. 2.—A flour display in a local grocery window which attracted considerable attention and created new business was arranged as follows: In the centre of the window was a dish of the loose flour on which was a ticket "note the whiteness." On either side was placed a pan of nice clean wheat. Back of this was placed three bags of flour, each one standing upright. On the top of each bag of flour was a huge loaf of bread. Above the centre loaf was placed a show-card with the words, "Best Bread from Best Flour." On one side of the window, a show-card bore the words, "Makes Bread for 3c a loaf," while on a show-card at the other side was the inscription "$3.35 per cwt."

To Operate Cash Business.

Castor, Alta., Feb. 2.— That their business shall in future be conducted on a strictly cash basis is the recent decision of the Williston Trading Co., of Castor. In advising the public to this effect they advertised that all accounts upon which time is asked must be settled by cash or note on or before the 10th of the following month. A discount of 5 per cent. will be allowed on all accounts if paid at once. In addition they will give a $5 painting with every cash purchase amounting to $20.

A Good Talk on Codfish.

Picton, Ont., Feb. 2.—Smith & Ball, Picton grocers, have found it good advertising to run readers in the local press conveying personal talks to readers. Here is one appetizing conversation they recently ran:

> Codfish is without a doubt the peer of the ocean, it carries with it the "tang" of the sea. Physicians recommend it above all other fish, because it is wholesome, nutritious and appetizing. In order to give Picton people the opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with fresh caught cod we have placed it in stock instead of halibut. Many people have the idea that ocean fish are salty, this is not so, only such that are dried and salted to preserve them are salty. Fresh codfish do not need soaking before cooking. When cooked it is as delicate as Lake Ontario whitefish, and is more easily digested. Boiled cod with oyster or egg sauce is fit for a king. Fried cod is as nutritious as porterhouse steak and costs about a quarter as much. Each fish is about 2½ pounds and we sell it at 10c a pound. Take Smith & Ball's advice and try it.

"We have found this method of advertising," they say, "to pay equally as well as our larger ads. as it seems to be a more direct personal appeal to Mrs. So and So than the other."

Without doubt Smith & Ball have an interesting talk in the above ad. It should appeal to every housewife who is on the lookout for something new. It must convince readers that codfish is a healthy food and at the same time that it is palatable. Educational conversations of this variety cannot fail to bring results.

A Rolled Oats Window.

Smith's Falls, Ont., Feb. 2.—"Does this interest you?" "Hard to beat—Don't take our word for it"; "The price is not high—the quality is" "We say they are good—you would yourself."

These were phrases on cards in a rolled oats window shown by Wm. Hyndman, of Smith's Falls. The cards were neatly printed, about 8 by 6 inches in size.

In the front of the window the words "Rolled Oats" were spelled in letters made of oats. Two piles of the oats were prominent. They were both about the same size and this was secured by using a small hoop with a stick standing up in the centre, the idea being to make the piles identical. In the centre of the background was a box of oats in their husks. On either side of this was a pile of boxes of packaged rolled oats and outside these again was a pile of rolled oats, the whole being semi-circular in shape.

The feature of the window was the uniformity of the design. The piles of boxes were not too large and the whole was a good arrangement. The cards were not too conspicuous and were shown here and there.

How to Prevent The Window from Frosting Over

Merchants have often been annoyed, when after carefully dressing a window, they find it obscured by frost forming on it. If 4 parts of cheap glycerine and 6 parts of methylated or other spirit are mixed together and rubbed over the the inside of the glass about every two weeks during the winter, it will prevent frost forming. In very severe weather, the window may be sponged with a small quantity of alcohol.

Another plan that is sometimes used is to insert close to the window bottom, a gas pipe perforated with minute holes about an inch apart. When lighted they warm the air and keep the inside of the window dry and clear.

When steam forms on the inside of a store window, it may be remedied by having an opening or other ventilation at the top and bottom of the window, so as to allow the confined heat to escape. The steam is due to the fact that the atmosphere of the store is warmer and contains more moisture than is capable of being retained by the air at the outside temperature. The plate glass is about the same temperature as the outside air, so that it simply acts as a condenser.

A Lethbridge Provision Window Display

Neat Arrangement of Hams, Eggs, Bacon, Canned Vegetables, Cheese and Lard in the Window of Geo. Kerr & Co.—Price Tickets and Show Cards Made Use of But not Overdone—An Attractive Tea Window as Well.

Lethbridge, Alta., Feb. 2.—It is needless to say that window dressing is considered a big factor in the selling power of Lethbridge dealers. They realize that the window in a great measure reflects not only the store interior, but the quality of the goods in stock and the personality of the grocer himself.

The accompanying illustration exemplifies this. The windows are those of Geo. Kerr & Co., having been dressed by Jas. G. Brown whose ability as a window artist is generally recognized.

A description of the windows, and particularly the produce and provision display on the right hand side, should prove interesting as it is particularly well arranged and attractive.

How It Was Arranged.

At the foot of this display will be observed hams, bacon and eggs. On either side is a ham with the price "22 cents" marked on it. Each is surrounded by eggs carefully placed and between these two hams are four sides of bacon separated also by eggs.

On the landing above are placed four whole cheese separated by pails of lard of different sizes, one on top of another, and with 2 jars of cream cheese at the base.

Situated on top of the cheese are more jars of cream cheese and also glass plates of head-cheese with a background of white flour bags. On another landing are more cheese topped by extracts of beef and cooked ham. The side of the window near the door is filled in pyramid style with canned goods. This combination of provisions produced an attractive window and one which actually was a selling force for Geo. Kerr & Co.

The opposite show window contains tea and while simply constructed, produced a good effect. The display is composed of package teas apart from two open chests in the centre. The packets are arranged in symmetrical fashion pleasing to the eye.

It will also be observed from the illustration that price tickets are used in moderation. Two show-cards one reading: "To Reasonable Thinkers, Quality Talks," and the other " To Reasonable Thinkers, Quality Counts," will impress passersby with the character of the goods handled. The entire store-front too, is attractive and conducive to the drawing of trade.

Editorial Note.—The Grocer desires again to invite readers to send in good photographs of good grocery windows no matter when they were made. So long as the display is the product of the mind of a dealer or clerk, it will be acceptable providing, as stated above, the photo has been well taken so as to show up the details and that the display is worthy of reproduction. The above provision window contains some good suggestions for an Easter display.

ACCIDENTAL FIRES.

A bill has been introduced into the Ontario Legislature respecting the liability of persons from whose premises fire is communicated to another's. It reads :

"No action shall be brought against any person in whose house or building or on whose land any fire shall accidentally begin, nor shall any recompense be made by him for any damage suffered thereby ; provided that no contract or agreement made between landlord and tenant shall be hereby defeated or made void."

Fox & Nugent recently purchased the grocery business of T. Brady, Lindsay, Ont. Both of the new partners have been behind the counter in Lindsay for some time.

SUGAR DECLINES AGAIN.

Sugar has surely been on the tobaggan slide. On Wednesday of this week it took another descent of 10 cents per hundred pounds following a reduction on the New York market.

This decline places sugar at $4.20 wholesale per cwt., Montreal basis, which is the lowest price reached since 1906—five years ago.

It is a significant fact, however, that the undertone of Cuban raws in New York is firmer this week and if this condition of affairs is maintained, we cannot expect to see many further reductions for a time. The general opinion of wholesalers and brokers is that the bottom has about been reached, but this statement has been made before in the face of declines. But looking at the market from all sides the present seems a good time to buy sugar. Another week, of course, may put a different face to things.

EARLY DELIVERY AT FT. WILLIAM.

W. P. Hogarth, a Fort William, Ont., dealer, writes The Canadian Grocer in reference to the articles we have published on early delivery. He points out that in Fort William about 7 or 8 years ago, the grocers decided to accept no orders after 5 p.m. on regular weekdays and after 8 p.m. on Saturdays and days before holidays for delivery that night.

"There has never been any trouble in sticking to it," he adds.

Here again, therefore, is another instance to show the uselessness of having delivery wagons, horses and men all over a town or city at late hours in the night. If Fort William is able to so easily cope with the late delivery question, there is no reason why other cities and towns cannot. It means money to the dealer in wear and tear of vehicles and horses and also gives the delivery man and clerk an opportunity to have a just rest which every human being requires if he is to more than hold his own on duty.

Besides this the merchant is working on a system which gives less work and worry and tends to his general good.

In Fort William, as Mr. Hogarth further states, early closing is in effect. The regular closing hours of 6 p.m. exists except during April, October, November and December, when 8 p.m. rules and on Saturdays about 10.30 p.m.

POTATO BAGS SHORT IN WEIGHT.

When buying potatoes dealers should be certain that the bag contains what it is supposed to hold. If this is not done there is likely to be many losses experienced.

That this is true may be noticed from an incident told by an Ontario grocer. He bought several bags of potatoes without weighing them thinking they each contained the 90 lbs. generally conceded to be a bag. On making some sales later by the 90-lb. bag he found some were short 2½ lbs. and others 10 lbs.

Sugar bags had been used, and although they were well filled they did not hold the 90 lbs.

SELLING ABOVE ACTUAL DEMAND.

Merchants are beginning to realize the fact that while, without doubt, a trade depends to a large extent upon the demand in their section of the country, much may be done by the use of clever methods to build it up, enhance it, and, finally, expand it out of all recognition. The law of supply and demand works just the other way, too, in many cases. If the inventor had waited for the public to ask for the article, where would any of the great fortunes made from patents have been?

"Get a thing that can be used and advertise it till it is wanted," is the motto of the modern merchant. Old lines yield only a small margin of profit. Novelties, especially exclusive novelties, mean big gains.

Now, this may be all very well for the city merchant, who has widely varied classes of customers on whom to unload but what about the merchant in the town who knows already what his customers will and what they will not take? Is he to stock high novelties only to see them dwindle and die out? The answer is that he should stock a sprinkling, making such arrangements that he can at any time get more without delay, and if the thing takes, push it ahead. Someone objects that this makes staple lines slower and ends in loss. But it stands to reason that if a man sells a large quantity of novelty articles at a good profit he can afford to lose a little on regular lines being slow. Besides this, the unusual thing gives his store a name and standing which the staple never could. Persons who do not care for it and would not, themselves, use it will be struck with the fact that it is new, and come for some regular line to the same store.

TO PREVENT LOW STOCKS.

A want book is one of the necessary things in a grocery store in order to keep the stock complete. Without it a dealer will continually be running out of certain lines of goods and that is a bad thing for the business.

Those merchants who wait for customers to ask for a certain article before they discover that their stock is gone are inferior stock-keepers and need to prepare some method to keep their stock up.

A simple book in which the clerks may note the goods that are getting low will do for the small store. In the larger store, it is well to have one of the clerks check over the stock every couple of days and see what lines are getting short, so that they may be bought, before the stock completely runs out. This checking of goods may be easily done in a store where the stock is kept in proper manner and where all the stock of each article is kept in one place.

With goods arranged properly, a sweep of the eye along the shelf will show whether any article is running short. But without the order book, these things are liable to be forgotten. It should be always kept in a handy place, so that any of the clerks may have easy access to it.

QUALITY AND PROFIT.

To sell quality goods that produce the best profits ought to be the aim of every dealer because by doing so he is not only selling satisfaction but he is making the most out of his business.

A dealer tells of the following instance showing how he is able to do this:—

His opposition across the corner had cut the price of a brand of toilet soap well advertised to the consumer. It usually sold at 10 cents per cake. The dealer in question advertised a still greater reduction but placed this soap behind the counter and talked up another brand of equal, in his opinion, if not superior in quality to the one that was being cut.

The result was that in a week he had sold but a few bars of the cut brand losing only 60 cents on his outlay but on the other which sold at its proper price he made between $5 and $6 profit.

This was done by his knowledge of the selling points of the second soap, its quality and the extra interest he took in it from the fact that the profit was worth while.

EARLY CLOSING BECOMES COMMON.

Early closing is becoming so common now that it will soon be the rule and not the exception.

Among the recent additions to the ranks are the merchants of Kindersley; Sask., who have taken concerted action in the matter.

The Kindersley Clarion of that town remarks:

> "This is a step in the right direction and those interested should have the council pass a by-law to that effect, imposing a fine on anyone selling goods after the above-mentioned hour, or who are found doing the 'back-door stunt.' After the buying public gets the habit of doing their shopping early, they will find that it will be just as convenient, and will get better service than if the stores were open till ten or eleven o'clock every night. The merchants will do just as much business and the public will be better satisfied. All work and no play makes the clerks dull boys—also printers."

Early closing is a question on which good advice can be disseminated by the newspaper as will be observed from the above item. Merchants can usually obtain for the asking this assistance and if co-operation on the part of the merchants themselves, can be secured there will be little difficulty in educating the consumer to the change of policy.

FOLLOW MARKETS CLOSELY.

Retail dealers should not fail to keep a close eye on the markets just now. Many items are in an uncertain condition and no grocer should be stocked up on anything with a weak market staring him in the face.

The Canadian Grocer has always followed the policy of devoting much space to market reports and the staff of this paper gives time and care to gathering all available information. It generally happens that changes in price quotations are spoken of before they actually come to pass and a hint of the impending increase or decline can generally be found in The Canadian Grocer, thus affording the reader accurate information of the present condition of the matter and a shrewd forecast of future probabilities as well.

That most dealers appreciate this fact, is evidenced by the many letter received in which subscribers tell of the many advantages they reap in following the weekly market reports closely.

VALUE OF A CLEAN STORE.

A store must present a cleanly appearance in order that customers may be induced to purchase. The public like to buy goods at a clean store, even if they are buying hardware, and how much more so, do they inspect the cleanliness of a store when it comes to purchasing articles of food.

The women are the chief buyers of groceries and generally are very particular about the food which they must eat, and the store that gets their trade must not resemble a store house.

How many grocery stores are to be seen with goods piled about the floor, unclean windows and show cases and with dust lying in the corners which the sweeper missed in his hurried daily run with the broom. These conditions are repelling to a customer and the merchant who continues along these lines will surely never make a big success of business.

Each morning the store must be cleaned, not in any kind of a manner, but thoroughly. In the well regulated grocery store the first thing the clerks do in the morning is to open up any goods which may be needed during the day, so that no dirt will be created by this after the store has been cleaned. The next is a good sweeping, no corners or parts of the floor being neglected. After this every counter and show case ought to be well dusted and the shelves and counter displays arranged. Any spare time during the day should be spent in cleaning show cases or windows.

Many stores which are well cleaned in the morning present a bad appearance even before the day is half over. This is due to carelessness of the clerks, allowing waste paper to lie about and spilling quantities of goods in the process of weighing. To overcome this, waste baskets should be placed at each counter and the clerks instructed to take great care in the weighing of goods. They should also be reminded to use the counter brush frequently, so that the store may in every way present an appearance that will lead people to buy instead of repelling them, as is the case in some stores.

THE OBLIGING CLERK.

The trade which a store gets depends to a great extent upon the service provided by that store and nothing adds to the good services more than small acts of the salesmen, which services in themselves, may not seem very much but are nevertheless appreciated by the customer.

A clerk should constantly be on the lookout for any way in which he may be of help to customers. It may be such a small thing as the opening of the door to allow a customer to pass out, picking up a handkerchief which the customer may have dropped, or inviting her to take a chair near the fire when she calls on a cold day; but nevertheless the customer takes note of these things and they all count in winning that person as a regular and faithful customer.

The story comes from a Saskatchewan town of a woman who lived near a certain grocery; she entered the store at which she had never dealt and asked a clerk if he would telephone to the plumber and tell him to call at her house.

Now it happened that the telephone was not working that day. In most stores that would have ended the affair. But in this store there was an obliging salesman, who at once offered to go himself and get the plumber. He had no sooner made the suggestion, than he had his coat on and was up the street after the plumber for this woman whom he did not know and who had never bought a cent's worth at the store. But it certainly paid; this woman decided that she would like to deal at a place where the salesmen were so obliging and that store soon had all her trade.

The small acts may not have as direct result as in this case, but anyway it demonstrates the fact that it pays to be obliging.

A merchant may be likened to a man in a row-boat in mid stream. The stream is the stream of business; the boat is the particular business he is trying to carry upwards by means of its two oars—thought and work. If he rests on the oars, he is sure to be carried downward. The only way to make headway is to pull steady on both oars. If he uses only one, take, for instance, thought or careful planning, he will not advance, but if he combines it with the other oar—work—he is sure to advance. See that you are pulling steadily on both oars.

Unless you run your store that the public will have confidence in it, price reductions and special offers will have little effect upon the class of people whose trade you want.

If you are satisfied yourself that the goods you handle are the best quality, it helps you a great deal in sales and you can use stronger selling talk. It is a pretty stiff argument when you say: "If this article is not satisfactory in every respect, you bring it right back and get your money."

The R.M.A. System of Collecting Debts

Three Letters, Gradually Getting Stronger in Tone, are Sent Out—Then Comes the Black-List—Grocers of Toronto Section Meet—More Criticism Against Scale Inspector—Common Sign for Members Proposed—Delegates to Guelph Convention Selected—Election of Officers a t Next Meeting.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—A standard weight for a bag of potatoes, municipal elections, civic holidays, the co-operative bills, collecting accounts and inspection of scales were among the items on the bill of fare of the Grocers' Section of the Toronto branch of the R. M. A. at their meeting on Monday night. F. C. Higgins occupied the chair in the unavoidable absence of J. F. Holloway, the chairman.

E. M. Trowern, provincial secretary, discussed some of the legislative questions of interest to the section and the merchants in general. One subject was the bills before the Dominion house at the present in regard to the weight of potatoes. While the local association had previously recommended a standard bag of 75 lbs., in Quebec, the weight was 90 lbs. and the desirability of having the same standard throughout the Dominion was pointed out. A bill was now before the Commons to have a standard barrel at 180 lbs. He was taking up this matter with Ottawa at present.

The proposal of the Manufacturers' Association that all holidays such as civic holidays, etc., should be held on the same day throughout the province was also discussed, but no action taken.

It was the general opinion that if the municipal elections were held at some other time besides the first of the year, it would allow merchants to take a greater interest in civic affairs. At present, coming as they do immediately after the holiday season, merchants cannot devote their time without sacrificing their business.

The advisibility of placing a common sign over the doors of members of the association as a sign of fair and square dealing was also discussed. It was the opinion of E. C. Matthews that in so far that this would have a deterrent effect on dead-beats dealing in such stores, it would have splendid results. Once these people discovered that, in every store where this sign was to be seen there was also a book showing a black-list of dead-beats they would quickly learn to go elsewhere. One sign proposed was that of a beaver (denoting industry) on a plain square, the inside corners of which contain maple leaves, and on the face of which is written "R. M.A. of Canada, Incorporated, etc." The branch will further deal with the proposal.

The opinion was also expressed that the city should not charge the merchants on the business streets anything additional for the cluster lights now being placed there as the business tax now levied was considered to be large enough.

The members were warned about doing business with collection agencies without first looking into the agreements under which the money was collected.

The co-operative bill came in for considerable discussion, and the opinion was expressed that it was not to the best interests of the retail merchants or of the public in general and that every effort should be made to combat the measure which the co-operative people are attempting to put through.

Home Scales Never Inspected.

Inspector of Weights and Measures, J. J. McConvey, was censured for the statements he made in his address before the Household Economic Association, which was claimed to have created a wrong impression as it tends to lead the women of Toronto to believe that they are continuely being cheated by the merchants. In regard to customers keeping scales of their own, these scales are often subjected to bad usage, are never inspected from year to year, and when the goods bought from the merchant do not weigh the same on their scale at home, they believe they are being cheated.

The good points of the association's present method in the credit department were brought out by Geo. Gibbard and F. C. Higgins, and the members were urged to make more use of the present system of the association for curtailing bad debts. If this were done it would have a tendency to make it more valuable by placing any bad accounts each may have, in the hands of the association and even if nothing is collected, it will protect the other merchants.

How Collections are Made.

The system used by the association is to send out three letters to the debtor. The first mildly points out that the party owes a certain merchant so much and the association will be pleased to have it paid. The next gets a little more severe in tone and if no money is then forthcoming a third and a threatening letter is sent stating that if the account be not settled at a certain time the name would go down on the black-list, a copy of which practically every member of the association has in his possession. Ten per cent. is charged on collections made.

Price cutting was still another subject on the slate and experiences were given. One dealer whose place of business is in a down-town section stated that he was still forced to sell soap at six bars for a quarter, in order to compete with the big stores. This action was, however, disparaged by other members who claim that no article should be sold at a loss.

J. F. Holloway was appointed as representative to the Provincial convention in Guelph on Feb. 28 and March 1 and 2, while E. C. Matthews was selected in case Mr. Holloway could not attend. The importance of as many members as possible of the association attending this Provincial convention was mentioned by Mr. Higgins.

The election of officers for this year will take place at the next meeting.

Pound of Dough Found Sticking to a Woman's Scale

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Many stormy protests against Scale Inspector McConvey have been raised on account of his accusations regarding the honesty of Toronto grocers and butchers.

One dealer reports taking the matter up with Mr. McConvey personally and talking to him rather severely. He told him that in his address before a body of women he had inferred that the merchants were practically a body of thieves stealing the consumer's money.

"I asked him," said this dealer, "just how many scales he had lying around that were found to be wrong; and after much questioning on my part he told me he had as many as ten but that there were others which he had destroyed.

"It took him quite a while to say that at least the 'big' number of 25 scales had been condemned in Toronto.

"Considering that there are some 6,000 in use anyone can see just how dishonest we all are," he added.

Another dealer remarked that the Inspector "was not fit to be there," and accused him of warming over the reports of the inspector of weights and measures of New York city and applying discoveries there to here.

"We have to get our scales inspected every little while," he said, "and pay for it too; but if a housewife were to buy a scale for home use it would never be inspected.

"I saw a scale in a woman's cellar one time with almost a pound of dough sticking to it. What kind of weighing would such a scale as that perform? It seems to me, for it is my experience, that the thieves are all on the outside of the counter.

"Frequently I have tested this by giving back to a customer a little more change than was coming to him or her and in scarcely one case out of a hundred would the matter ever be mentioned to me again.

"I don't think such an inspector as Mr. McConvey knows anything about scales—it's cheap advertising that he's after," was the parting shot.

The first shipment of oranges and lemons from California to New York across the Isthmus of Panama arrived on the 9th inst. It is stated that freight rates by this route are much lower than those of the transcontinental railroads and it is probable that further shipments will be made by this line.

At an apple show at Sebastopol, Cal., an exhibit was made of fifty-four packed boxes gathered from one tree. The fruit was of fine quality being grown on a tree 48 years old and the value of the product of this one tree is estimated at over $65.

SHORT TALKS TO CLERKS

By An Ex-Clerk

HONESTY.

In every sale, in any store, there are three people vitally interested—the merchant, the clerk and the customer. All three need protection. It seems to us that few people realize what the word "protection" means.

In a retail store the proprietor wants protection against mistakes, carelessness, dishonesty. If a store loses a dollar through any one of the above causes, the result is the same.

Dishonesty is a factor in the retail business; it is a factor in all lines of commerce, in all lines of life, or why does everyone who holds a responsible position have to give security? Why do we have policemen? Why do you lock your door at night? Because it means PROTECTION.

You all know that there have been, and there are to-day, dishonest employes. You have heard of such cases in other stores; it may never have happened in your store, but you are familiar with the fact that it does happen. You read about it, you hear about it. If it has happened in any of your stores, you may know of it—I don't; but the world at large does recognize that dishonesty is a dangerous factor in the retail business.

Dishonesty does not always mean that money is stolen. If a clerk gives a customer a pound and a quarter of tea for a pound of tea, that is dishonesty. True, not intentional, but the result to the merchant is just the same. If the clerk steals a dollar, that is dishonesty. Not that I should think dishonesty is so awfully prevalent among retail clerks; I do not think so.

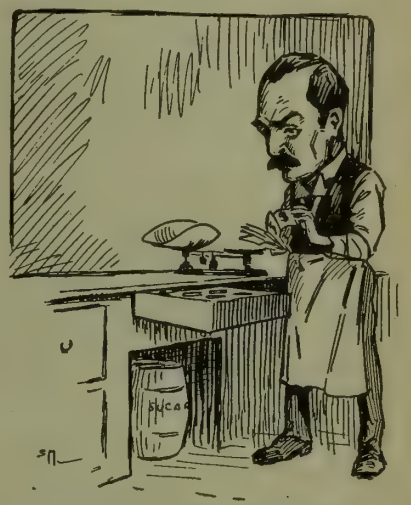
Clerks should, therefore, encourage every method and store appliance which will tend to protect them from suspicion and which will tend to keep them from temptation.

Let us suppose your employer has been absent from the store a day or two. He may have been sick or out of town, or it may be that he cannot balance his cash at night. On opening the cash drawer and counting the money, it has occurred to many a man, "My! The business receipts seem poor, yet I don't see why business should slump off just because I was away," and he may say to himself, "I wonder if everyone working for me is all right."

Watch Your Reputation.

The retail clerk, from my observation, gets less assistance than many other employes in the life of commerce. Retail clerks have no organization, and I am safe in saying that, as a general proposition, they have but one thing—their reputation. On an average it must be true that, if you had anything more than your reputation, you would not be retail clerks. And yet you will recognize, from the points I have made, that, where you have no opportunity of proving your honesty, you put in the palm of the hand of everyone who comes into your store, your Reputation.

If I were a retail clerk to-day behind the counter, I would not like to take anyone's money and handle it for a minute without being in a position to prove that I was honest.



Whatever system your employer has in use in any department, see that it is used right. I was talking to one of the partners of a large store in Hamilton not long ago, where they use the counter check books. Now, the firm bought these counter check books for a purpose, and instructed their employes to use them for that purpose. Some of these same clerks who allowed them to fall on the floor—in other words disregarded the value of the check—surely insulted the intelligence of the firm they worked for. This firm had to pay for these books—not the clerks.

I believe it is the duty of every clerk to see that whatever method is installed in the store by its employer, it is carried out to the best of his ability so that every ounce of utility will be derived.

Remember that you clerks are the business men of the future, and your future depends on your present training. You can allow yourselves to get in a groove that you will find it mighty hard to get out of. You can take on a careless, slip-shod, don't-care manner, and it will hang to you like barnacles all your life.

The One Who Knows All.

And on this question of Protection let me say that every man's money in the world must be protected. Yours must be protected. If your employer installs a system, no matter what it is, that system was not installed to protect his money against you, if—you are honest! Because when a man is honest there is no protection needed. But let me impress something on you, and never forget it: There is only one person in the world that knows whether you are honest or not. That is not your employer; that is not your friend; that is not any acquaintance; that is YOU. You are the only individual that actually knows whether you are honest or not. And that is the reason why all merchants—and you, when you become a merchant—should adopt the best methods of protection.

He returns to find less money in the cash drawer than he had anticipated.

FAR-REACHING CREDIT BUREAU.

The Michigan Retail Grocers and General Merchants' Association have appointed representatives in most of the cities of that state, who will answer inquiries regarding the credit of any residents. For example, if a customer moved from Cement City to Detroit, a merchant in the latter city could write to the representative in Cement City, and get information regarding the customer's credit.

A sugar school will be established in connection with the Glasgow and West of Scotland Technical College. A course of instruction in sugar manufacture will be given by a specialist with experience in manufacture of cane sugar.

At a recent meeting of the delegates of all the retail merchants' associations of San Francisco, steps were taken for the organization of all the retailers of the city into one body, with the object of better protection of the retail trade.

There is an increase in the prune canning industry in California. The largest demand for canned prunes comes from the cafes, clubs and dining car service. The prunes are much more expensive canned than dried, but they are superior in flavor.

This was a Grocer's Remark to a Traveler — Yet His Window Demonstrated That There Was Work to be Done—Some Window Display Ideas—What are the Essential Features?

By Frank G. Wallace.

In talking to a grocer not long ago, he complained very much about the dull times and the small amount of business being done. He finished his remarks with the words, "Why we are standing around here half the day without anything to do."

As I passed out of his store, I took particular notice of his windows. There was a jumbled up lot of goods thrown together in a confused manner while the glass itself looked as if it were a total stranger to the window cleaner.

As I took in the view of his windows, I repeated his words, "Why, we are standing around here half the day without anything to do." He solved the mystery of his inactivity in business in his last sentence for if he had occupied his spare moments in working at his windows, he would undoubtedly have been a busier man.

Few merchants realize the full importance of the show window as a medium for selling goods or if they do know its great value, there are a great many who have not ambition enough to use it, as is shown by the many poorly dressed windows in most towns.

The Window Wrongly Used.

To look at some windows, would lead a person to believe that merchants regard them as merely a place to be filled up, like the space under the counter or in the store house. But those merchants who have put forth the necessary efforts in this direction, have found that the show window sells more goods in ratio to the amount expended than any other medium. They have found that time and money expended on window dressing is a good investment for them.

Merchants in the large cities employ high salaried men who devote their whole time to the windows in order that they will present an attractive appearance and increase the sale of goods. These merchants find that paying big salaries to competent men and expending money in fixing up a good window is a profitable expenditure.

Now the ordinary merchant cannot afford to pay large salaries to an exclusive window dresser, but he can himself by a little study and patience improve on the appearance of his window displays. If he finds that he is not adapted to this work himself, perhaps he has a clerk who would make a success of it. The merchant who finds that any of his clerks has a natural aptitude for this line of work should give him every encouragement to develop his latent abilities.

Advises Careful Study.

Those who have charge of the window dressing in a store should be constantly on the look-out for new ideas that will help them in their work. They should study carefully all other window displays and any ideas offered in trade papers. When a dealer finds a window that appeals to him, he should stop and study the features that make it attractive. Even a poor window may be of assistance, for, from it, a grocer may pick out the inferior qualities and avoid them in his own display. He should study the trade paper and thereby secure from time to time ideas that other merchants have used to good advantage and which he also may use or which will help him in carrying out his own ideas.

Study their own window displays and try to ascertain in what points they fail and strive to overcome these poor features. How does your display appear in your own eyes? Would it have the power to attract you to buy? These are some questions which the window dressers should ask himself. Stand across the street and note how many passing people are attracted by the window. The amount of goods sold is in proportion to the number of people who stop to look at the display.

Architectural Ability Needed.

The main feature necessary in a grocery window is to have it symmetrical. How many window displays have had their attractiveness spoiled by having been top heavy or one-sided and out of proportion. A window artist should not start to prepare a window without any idea of how he is going to proceed. He should have some definite plan formed before he begins work.

It is a wise plan to figure out on paper the main idea as a rough drawing will show up any bad flaws in the plan. Stand outside the window and study out in your imagination just how you wish your window to appear when you have finished. If your window does not look when finished the same as you expected, take careful note of the platform to see if it is high or low enough, or if the slant in it is such as will show the window to the best advantage to the passing public.

Must Increase Sales.

The window dresser should keep in view the essential requirement of the window—that is its ability for increasing of sales in the line displayed. A window may be attractive but still sell little goods. This is observed in windows in which many articles of different kinds are shown, a variety of goods that make it appear flashy but it will be found that the window in which a little bit of everything is displayed does not have a powerful selling power. While attractiveness and originality should be aimed at, the main purpose should not be sacrificed.

A judicious use of price cards will increase the selling power of the window, as timid buyers pass many a store rather than step in to ask the price, simple as it seems. The use of too many tickets should also be avoided as it gives the appearance of a cheap bazaar style.

Make Frequent Changes.

The window exhibit should be changed often as people like to see something different on each visit. The same goods should not be shown constantly and judgment should be used to exhibit articles in season. Ideas that attract attention should be brought into use, but nothing that does not pertain to the goods shown. A dealer might place a raccoon or owl in a grocery window and while it might attract attention, it would sell no goods because it was not in keeping with the stock; but if a fur bearing animal were placed in a window where furs were displayed, it would be quite appropriate because it relates to the goods shown and is not a mere novelty.

The window dresser should not be discouraged if his first efforts do not turn out as well as expected but should rememeber that practice and careful study of methods will in time make a clerk or merchant competent in this work.

As a commercial man and an ex-grocery dealer I submit these points hoping that some good will be derived from them by someone.

GETTING GOODS PROMPTLY.

Retailer Tells of His Method to Keep Assortment Up-to-Date.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—In your issue of Dec. 30, 1910, there appeared an article from a Sarnia grocer on the express rate problem. He stated in his letter that the present high, and in some cases, excessive postal and express rates do not allow grocers the opportunity of getting in special orders for their customers. I have found a plan by which I overcome this.

Every grocer, if he is doing the business that he should, will be getting goods from the wholesale houses at least twice weekly. He may have all special orders delivered to this wholesale house and forwarded with his other goods. Most firms are willing to forward goods in this way. By this method the merchant may have his goods delivered cheaply and promptly. The merchants must have a plan of this kind or a better one in order to combat the mail order houses. They are continuing to advertise extensively and to give special inducements to customers.

The retail merchant must overcome these things and give the best possible service to his customers and by so doing he surrounds himself with customers who are his friends and who have perfect faith in everything he may do for them.

Therefore, it is necessary for the retail dealer to be up and doing. The trade in your immediate section belongs to you by right. Get after it and it will come your way.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Declined 10c.
Corn Starch—Decline.
Evaps.—Firm.
Coffee—Strong.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Sugar declined another 10 cents on Wednesday, bringing the price of granulated down to $4.30 per cwt. the lowest point it has reached in more than five years. This is 40 cents lower than a month ago and 65 cents lower than at this time last year. Some dealers are looking for a still further decline, although it is conceded that the bottom cannot be far off, if it has not already been reached. The visible supply of raws is now 3,814,575 tons, against 3,259,488 tons last year or an increase of 555,087 tons.

Corn starch has also declined slightly during the past week and prices are as low as have existed in the past six years. Trade in syrups still keeps good and wholesalers report that business on the whole is good, and compared with other years, no complaints could be made on the January trade.

In dried fruits, currants and prunes are strong and some dealers are looking for higher prices, prunes especially being scarce. It is said that wholesalers are selling some lines of dried fruits at as low prices as they could purchase them for at the present time. Demand remains normal although none of the retailers are buying in large quantities.

Canned goods continue strong and show a big advance on the prices existing at this time last year. Tomatoes a year ago quoted at 80 to 85, are now $1.35; peas were then $1.10 to $1.60 and are now $1.35 to 1.87; Corn a year ago was 80 to 85 and is now quoted at 95-97½, while pumpkin which was 80-85 a year ago is now 97½-$1. Canned salmon and fruit have shown equally large advances in price.

With the exception of sugar, the staples such as dried fruits, canned goods, coffee, tea, etc., are gradually crawling up to a higher level.

Sugar.—Following the decline in raws in New York last week, the price of sugar here dropped another 10 cents, as forecasted last week. A significant fact is that the decline came in the face of a firmer market in raws. There are some dealers who are looking for a further slight decline but it is generally agreed that sugar prices must be working close to the bottom now.

Reports indicate a firmer raw sugar market with sales reported at fractional higher prices for prompt shipments from Cuba. Refiners' necessities taken in conjunction with limited offerings tend to strengthen the raw market. London cables indicate a slightly higher market with 88 per cent. but quoted at 9s. 1½d. f.o.b. Hamburg which is equal to 3.91 duty paid New York, as against the duty paid value of 3.45 for 96 degree test Cuba centrifugals, or difference of nearly ½ cent per lb. in favor of the latter. Up to the present, the movement of Cuba raws has been much slower than last year and receipts have been less. With increased production, however, lower raws may be expected, but there are those who feel that sugar is now scraping on bottom. In refined sugar, New York has also shown a further decline of 10 points, making list price $4.60 less 1 per cent. A wire from New York following the decline says: "All our information leads us to expect a steady market for some time to come." Local demand is moderate as all dealers have been working on a hand-to-mouth basis.

Syrups and Molasses.—Syrups continue to go out freely under the scarcity and high price of dried fruits, while molasses have the usual amount of trade.

There has been a drop in the price of corn starch during the past week, amounting to ¼ cent on the best grade and ½ cent on the lower. This brings culinary starch down to the lowest it has been in nearly six years.

Dried Fruits.—Raisins, the trade in which kept up unusually well after the holiday, are at present moving slowly, retailers having evidently secured supplies enough for immediate use. Prices remain the same and on the Pacific coast look a little stronger and some dealers believe that higher prices will be seen on account of both the limited supply of raisins and also of other dried fruits. The Greek stocks of currants are running low and there is a decided firmness in price. Apricots show no decline from their former strong position especially in the fancy lines. Prunes also continue scarce and high in price.

Spices.—For the time of the year, there is a fair trade in spices. There is an upward tendency to pepper in the primary market as supplies are small. Futures are quoted at a higher price than present quotations. Indications point to a higher market in nutmegs but under the small amount of these used and the low price that has existed, buying has not increased even if prices do look as if they might go higher.

Tea.—Under the increasing prices of tea, there has been a rush for common teas throughout the world in order to maintain the regular retail quotations, and as a result in some cases the lower qualities of tea are being brought into use. In speaking of the situation a broker said: "If these facts were brought prominently before the public, a distinct demand for the finer teas would be created. The present rage for common teas is not due to them, but to the dealers. If retailers would explain the present situation to customers, that the low-priced teas are inferior in quality, it would change the demand to finer teas which besides relieving the present tense situation in the tea market, would also lead to a higher grade of tea being used, which would be beneficial to all concerned."

Coffee.—Coffee still maintains its strong position and it is now generally agreed that it has advanced on purely sound reasons and until these are reversed, coffee cannot be successfully depressed. The world's visible supply during January shows a shrinkage of about 750,000 bags, leaving consuming markets in poor supply. The total stocks of Brazils in New York are to-day 1,350,000 bags less than a year ago, and in fact, the available working stocks in New York are at the present only 750,000 bags. Although it would be expected that there would be a decrease in the consumption of coffee under the high price, still the local demand has kept up well. One firm states that trade in coffee is excellent and ahead of other years and this was shown by the shipments of goods which contained a large percentage of coffee. Prices, however, show no change.

Beans.—Although other markets report a firmness in beans, locally supplies seem to be fairly plentiful and dealers do not predict higher prices just now. One wholesaler thought that the scarcity in other markets was due to the fact that last year, prices advanced during the winter and that this year farmers are holding on to their stocks, in hope of higher prices.

TORONTO.—Some wholesalers are evidently selling their canned tomatoes without profit to themselves, as a local dealer states that he is selling tomatoes to a wholesale house at the same price as to his retail customers. The chief aim now seems to be to get stocks to supply the trade and not to make a profit. Where stocks are coming from to supply the demand until the new crop comes in, is a question. Tomatoes are considerably cheaper in the United States but a local dealer states that they could not be laid down hrer, duty and freight, less than $1.55 and at that price there would be few sold. There is a noted scarcity in gallon canned goods, such as tomatoes, pumpkin and rhubarb.

POINTERS—

Beans—Firm.

Raisins—Firm.

Canned Tomatoes—Scarce.

Tea—Strong.

Sugar—Decline of 10c.

Montreal, Feb. 2.—Trade during the past week has been satisfactory. The movement of groceries is normal for this time of the year and the markets are steady. There are but one or two grocery changes to note in the list of "advances" and "declines."

There continues to be a good demand for all lines of canned goods. New York dealers are buying canned tomatoes from local firms at high prices and this it is expected will keep the prices at least firm.

There is a scarcity in walnuts and it is reported that the crop in France is entirely exhausted, peanuts also show a slight advance in the primary markets.

The price of tea is still as strong as ever, there being a shortage of some lines.

Hand-to-mouth basis continues to be the condition of the sugar market, but however, this is sufficient to keep the market fairly active.

Sugar declined again on Wednesday 10 cents per cwt.

Sugar.—There is a fair amount of sugar moving on the hand-to-mouth basis. A further decline of 10 cents took place in sugar on Wednesday, bringing granulated in bags down to $4.20 per cwt.

Tea.—There is a shortage in Ceylon greens, consequently there is a heavy demand for Japans. The demand for all grades is much better, and high prices do not seem to lessen the demand. High grades are in a better demand than for some time past, this is attributed to the present high prices of the lower grades.

Coffee.—The coffee market continues to hold the firm tone, and demand is fairly good, specially in the lower grade. This is accounted for by the present high prices of coffee.

One of the local coffee dealers states that the high prices are not decreasing the amount of coffee used in Canada.

Spices.—No change has taken place in the price of spices, and the market is following its usual course for this time of the year. The demand corresponds favorably with the corresponding period last year.

It is expected that the demand will be much better with the turn of the next month. The demand for syrups is fair, with prices unchanged.

Prunes—Impossible to procure.
Filiatras Currants—Advanced.
Beans—Strong.
Coffee—Soaring.
Evaporated Apples.—High and scarce.
Evaporated Peaches—Advancing.
Sugar.—Decline of 10c.

Winnipeg, Feb. 2.—A decided healthier tone has been prevailing during the last week, and the general tendency is for higher prices throughout. The advances of last week have been maintained and in a few instances further ones have taken place this week. The milder weather which has been prevailing has enabled the wholesalers to rush out orders which were delayed on account of the storms, and freight deliveries have been a great deal more prompt. Travelers have again taken up their routes and orders of substantial sizes are arriving from all corners of the west. An optimistic view of the prospects for spring operations is taken by wholesalers and retailers, and the increase in business during the last week has aided this materially.

The strength of the entire grocery trade can be seen by the fact that sugar is the only commodity that shows any reduction, while in dried fruits, prunes are almost prohibitive, and stocks of evaporated apples are almost exhausted and cannot be replenished. Evaporated peaches is practically the only fruit that is being offered by wholesalers, and stocks of these are by no means heavy.

Sugar.—An active market was in existence last week on account of the decline of 10c per barrel, which took place recently. Stocks of raw material continue to increase, but the future is difficult to predict at this distance from the refineries. Another decline of 10c was registered here on Wednesday of this week.

Foreign Fried Fruits.—A further advance of ¾c has taken place in prunes due to advance in coast prices. The present supply is totally inadequate to the demand, and higher prices may yet occur. Currants remain firm, Filiatras taking a slight advance.

Coffee.—There appears to be no limit to the advances that this market is making. The recent advance of ½c per lb. has established a record price in this city. Many Declines In the Export of Our Products

Montreal, Feb. 2.—The export of dairy products during recent seasons has not been as large as was anticipated, due no doubt to the large increase in home consumption. The aggregate value of dairy exports from Montreal for the past season has been $17,018,421 as compared with $17,861,755 last season and $25,721,157 during the banner year of 1906.

The export of cheese from Montreal for the past season amounted to 1,892,235 boxes, as compared with 1,872,315 boxes for the previous season. Placing the average price at 11c lb. the season's export would be worth about $10,651,668 as compared with $17,225,298 for previous season.

The shipments of butter amounted to 27,884 packages as against 39,253 packages in 1909, and 573,449 packages in 1905. This marked shrinkage is due to increased home consumption and also to the large amount of cream shipped to the United States during the past two years.

Flour Exports Declining.

Flour export has been reduced also, the season's shipments being 1,591,746 sacks and 140,107 barrels showing a decrease of 121,579 sacks and 70,471 barrels as compared with a year ago. Exports of oatmeal show a reduction of over 58,000 sacks, compared with 1909, and the quantity of rolled oats shipped in cases is about 16,000 cases less, but the quantity in sacks has increased 43,000 over 1909.

Less Meat Moving Out.

The exports of cured meats for 1910 only amounted to 96,785 cases, as compared with 142,852 for 1909, while the export of tinned meats showed a decrease of 500 cases. Lard exports for the season were 422,000 packages, against 409,000 for 1909, an increase of 13,000 packages.

Owing to the shortage in Canada's apple crop, the exports from the port of Montreal were only 159,043 barrels, as compared with 543,847 in 1909, and the number of cases shipped were 36,608, as against 32,912 for the previous year. Compared with 1908, the decrease is over 166,000 barrels and an increase of over 4,000 cases.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

"Genuine maple syrup seems to be a thing of the past. The fact is that the total amount of maple syrup made from sap would not fill one-tenth the demand," said a gentleman, who used to have one of the finest "sugar bushes" in Ontario. It is therefore, very important that grocers should know about Mapleine—the new flavor, manufactured on scientific principles, and guaranteed under the Pure Food laws. One ounce of Mapleine, with the addition of sugar and water, makes a gallon of delicious syrup. The agents are F. E. Robson & Co., 26 Front East, Toronto. "Mapleine Dainties" sent free on request.

McWilliam & Everist, wholesale fruit dealers, Toronto, received a quantity of choice strawberries from Florida at the beginning of the week. They claim this shipment to have been the first received by any wholesale house this year. The wholesale price was 65 to 70 cents per box.

The IXL Spice & Coffee Co., London, Ont., which started in business about one year ago, have been most successful in placing their lines of spices, coffees, extracts, mustards, etc., under Sweetheart brand, on the market. Their success, is due to the fact that their manager has had long practical experience in grinding spices, roasting and blending coffees, making extracts, jelly powder, etc., etc. Also that they installed the most up-to-date machinery, that could be purchased in the United Kingdom, which enables them to turn out most satisfactory goods to their customers. Their main object is to satisfy the people of Canada, with high-grade goods, pure, and wholesome. Everything under the Sweetheart Brand label, is guaranteed pure and wholesome, or money refunded. Their coffee machinery has just recently been patented, the last patent that was granted for this kind of machinery in the United States. This machinery enables them to turn out the most delicious appetizing and refreshing coffee, known as the Sweetheart Coffee. The coffee bean is thoroughly separated, cleaned and sized. Also their coffee grinders are of the latest type, so as to give the finest results in ground coffee.

ST. JOHN EXPORT TRADE.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 2.—The steamer Grampian, which sailed from St. John last week took away the largest cargo that ever left the port. It was valued at $741,839, and included in the cargo of Canadian goods was 2,350 sacks of flour, 5,250 bags of meal, 307 boxes of bacon, and 2,866 boxes of cheese. The total exports up to last week exceeded the same period in 1909-10 by $228,044.

ANOTHER EARLY CLOSING TOWN.

Castor, Alberta, has recently joined the ranks of the early closing towns in the west. The merchants of the town referred to have signed the "Honor Roll" and in future all stores will close at six o'clock every evening except Saturday. The early closing commenced with the New Year and will continue until the spring at least.

TRADE NOTES.

A Quebec Grocer's Methods of Trading

Customers are Privileged to Move About the Store and Examine Goods on Demonstration Tables—Has Only One Counter—Goods All Packed in the Rear—Some Unique Advertising Devices—Caters Carefully to Picnickers in Summer and Treats a Child Like a Grown-Up—Gets Extra Business by Carrying Goods, Such as Tomatoes, Out of Season.

Quebec, Feb. 2.—Perhaps the most striking feature of the store of A. Grenier, 94 St. John St., Quebec, to the incoming customer, is the atmosphere of perfect cleanliness and sanitation pervading the whole place, and the careful manner in which goods are arranged in the open space before the counter, which is situated in the rear, and the only one in use.

Mr. Grenier says he always pays the utmost attention to detail; he tries to give his customers no cause for complaint, and to stock only goods which in all sincerity can be labelled "quality," thereby securing the best class of customer.

Taking over the business from J. Toussaint, in 1882, with whom he was employed during the eight years previous, A. Grenier began to study more closely grocery conditions. He had shown himself adapted to the grocery business during his apprenticeship, and it is with a feeling of pride that he refers to the fact that his master had sufficient confidence in him to hand him over the business, although there was no capital immediately forthcoming.

Customers Buy Quality Goods.

"Take a seat, madam," is not a statement heard very often in his store, for although polite, and all anxious to cater to the comfort of his patrons, he has various ideas as to how the public should be looked after once they are inside the store.

"My goods, especially canned delicacies, are of such a high quality that I deem it advisable and profitable to let every one have an opportunity of judging for themselves which is the store carrying the best line of goods. They cannot examine them if they are encouraged to remain entirely at the counter.

"Consequently the arrangement of my store which is the outcome of careful study, has been the means of educating many of my patrons to indulge in the highest class of foodstuffs instead of a cheaper and inferior class."

Interior Display a Novelty.

In order to carry out the ideas just mentioned, one counter only is utilized, and a number of small oaken tables arranged artistically in the body of the store are substituted for display cases, which in the proprietor's opinion, do not offer any encouragement to the customer to examine the goods enclosed.

These tables, which are attractive and novel in their arrangement, carry mostly imported goods. Every grocer has some customers who invariably show signs of restlessness in the store, and seem to be constantly saying to themselves "Will he never come?" Here this class and others can walk around between the tables, spend a few minutes examining the goods, and usually their interest is aroused by the labels which bear the statement, "Imported by A. Grenier."

"All who see them," says Mr. Grenier, "become aware that the best European delicacies can be had at 94 St. John Street, and moreover women's criticisms are often a better medium of advertising than circulars. Get them talking about you and you will find your goods once appreciated, are as much talked of as any of the prominent figures either in the social or political world."

Does Not Like Sawdust.

Quite a number of people though realizing the cleansing effect of sawdust when sprinkled on the floor, are not altogether in sympathy with the idea, and the grocer whose feminine patrons are in any sense fastidious are often seen holding up their skirts when entering and going out, endeavoring to remove the dust from their feet. Observation led Mr. Grenier to cover the front floor with a handsome oilcloth pattern, which never shows signs of dust, but rather has a most sanitary apearance, and on wet days is covered with strips of cocoanut matting in order to prevent any traces of muddy feet being left behind.

Where are the rest of the goods placed, you many ask, if there is only one counter in the store? The lines generally carried on the shelves are in that position, but others, such as wines, biscuits and confectionery, are arranged on a frame of staircase nature, and are in prominent positions. Cleanly, and frequently overhauled, lest traces of dust be noticeable, they catch the eye right away, and often effect sales themselves.

Using Window Space.

Mr. Grenier is rather unfortunately handicapped for window space, and has had quite a lot of trouble in discovering the best methods of utilizing the small space available. Ingenuity, however, helped him out, as by careful study he has discovered what appeals to his customers. During the winter months when other more extensive windows are covered with frost, or so shaded with vapor that the eye cannot pierce his window very clearly, he shows baskets of rosy tomatoes and other unseasonable goods, which instead of showing signs of decay, appear as rosy and inviting as if they were just plucked, and enjoying the benefits of the summer sunshine. He has a large double plate glass put in instead of the thin single material, and this idea has been the means of selling many of the goods he displayed.

Novel Advertising Devices.

This is an age of originality, and a merchant must have something new and striking in the advertising line if he wants to draw the passer-by into his store.

Mr. Grenier owns a valuable coffee mill, and as he desired to let the public know that the "Grenier" coffee is first class, he determined to utilize the mill on display. Purchasing in New York at considerable expense, a dummy Chinaman—the pigtail as realastic as one would desire—he managed to fasten friend Chink's hands securely to the wheel. A motor dynamo propelled the machine and Chink's arms as flexible as if real, worked in harmony, and to all intent were the force behind the wheel. It was quite a drawing card, the public being attracted to the window every day.

"Indeed," remarked one of the proprietor's sons, "one man actually asked me how much I paid the Chinaman per day, and on being informed that $2 was the amount, he agreed with me that he did quite enough work for it."

An Inanimate Collie Dog.

Another device which proved quite an attraction was a large collie dog which was placed outside a blind door, in front of the store, with a placard on its neck reading: "Next door, please!" The animal, handsome and so gentle-looking, made many ladies stop to admire it, and no doubt in the evening many wondered at its indifference to the caress of the children and the stick thrusts of the boys. But it was stuffed, yet live enough to suit his master's purpose.

Of course, Mr. Grenier uses the daily papers all year round, and gives a contract for a certain space which he never leaves during that period. He talks to the housewife, and as the telephonic system necessitates his giving prices, yet he never varies the price when orders are sent in. "One price for everybody," is his rule.

Mind the Children.

"We have many customers whom we have never seen in our store, and we are careful never to give them any cause for complaint. Consequently when children come down with orders we see that they are attended to with all haste, and sent right home with the goods. Mothers do not like to have their children delayed, and the more you appeal to the mother, the more she appreciates you," he maintains.

Reputation Means Dollars.

How many grocers on receiving an order for a case of provisions for a picnic or party consider that careful packing and systematic arrangement of the goods ordered will give them a good name, and put them in strong for further orders? Only the most progressive, surely.

Quite a number of people join together regularly during the summer months and camp out on the banks of the rivers in order to take full advantage of the

After Forty Years

One of the most successful retail grocers in Canada, whose business capacity has enabled him through all the varying conditions of over forty years to keep steadily on the highway of success, building one of the largest retail trades in the Dominion and accumulating a large fortune, said to the writer the other day, "Cheap trade is no good to any man. It doesn't stick. Quality of goods and quality of service are the two things to consider in the grocery business."

Practical advice, this, and it applies especially to tea.

In Red Rose Tea you have quality that has made it a standard among tea experts, and this, combined with such efficient service, has won and holds the confidence and co-operation of the trade.

City Retailer Bought From Country Merchant

He Was Offered Strictly Fresh Eggs at Reduced Price and Took Them—Customers Found Stale Eggs and He Lost Money —Why He Purchases From the Wholesaler.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I notice in recent issues of your paper, discussions on good and bad eggs, and see that some of the country general merchants are losing money in shipping to wholesale men in the large cities.

As a retailer, I have had some experience along this line. Some time ago a country general merchant wrote me to say he could let me have a couple cases of strictly fresh eggs at so much. The price was a good deal below what I could get them for from the wholesaler's, so I bought and the eggs arrived. I have no arrangement whereby I can candle eggs, so took the country merchant's word that they were strictly fresh and sold some as such at a fair profit above cost.

The very next day I had complaints from customers who claimed to have found many stale eggs among those they bought. Of course I pointed out where I had bought them, but had to allow for the bad eggs. Other complaints kept arriving every little while and I had to sell off my "strictly fresh" eggs for cooking purposes, at a reduction and lost on the deal. When, however, we buy from the wholesaler we know what we are getting because the eggs are candled and if we don't get what we pay for we enter a complaint and are credited with our loses.

I do not think for a moment that the general merchant who sold me the eggs knew they were not all fresh. He evidently had taken the word of the farmer for that; but I want to show that in order to get what we pay for we have to deal with men that will be responsible for selling us inferior goods.

CANNED EGGS ULTIMATUM.

Montreal, Feb. 2.—The decision of the civic officials who met to consider the advisability of destroying the canned eggs recently imported was anxiously awaited by those interested. The $100,000 worth had previously been condemned by the Provincial Board of Health and the Civic Health Authorities.

A document was read from the former body stating that the eggs had been brought into the city against Provincial statutes 3875 and 3915, which treated upon the question of pure foods. As a result orders were given to have these eggs taken outside the city limits, or destroyed by the authorities within 36 hours.

Dr. McCarrey, commenting on these instructions said: "These canned eggs are now in a cold storage warehouse. I shall send a communication there today stating that the eggs must be carted away from this city, and outside of the Province at once. I will give them 36 hours to comply with this order. After this, if the eggs are still in storage I will have the whole consignment seized and destroyed."

Butter and Eggs are Still Plentiful

Egg Prices Continue to Lower, but Butter Keeps Fairly Firm Under the Conditions—Eggs are Cheap in the United States and are Being Shipped to Canadian Markets—Cheese Market is Somewhat Firmer—Easier Feeling in the Hog Market.

The feature of the market this week is the plentiful supply of both butter and eggs throughout the Dominion. Butter prices are ruling fairly firm under the conditions, as it is intimated from some centres that all the present supplies will be needed in the near future to supply the demand, since it is usual during February and March for the supplies of butter, both dairy and creamery, to fall off. Quantities of Ontario butter are being shipped to Nova Scotia, where it is used in preference to the local butter, on account of its quality being more uniform. The Montreal market has been somewhat relieved recently by shipments to the West.

Eggs are plentiful for this time of year, and prices continue on the downward course, the fact of eggs being so low on the other side and the duty only three cents a dozen, has had an effect on causing prices to lower. Quantities have been imported to many Canadian centres, and dealers continue to get offers from United States firms at exceedingly low prices. Under present conditions some dealers are looking for further reductions in this line.

Supplies of hogs are fairly plentiful and a slightly easier feeling is noticed. The English market is weak and Canadian bacon is quoted at 60s to 65s. The movement of hogs in the Western States has enlarged and shows a higher record than for this time last year.

The English market reports cheese strong at an advance of 1s, with stocks of Canadian light. The market in Canada is also firm and higher prices may be seen. A Montreal authority says that the market is strong, few goods being now available for sale, and that the bulk of stocks belong to English houses.

Dealers claim it is hard to tell how the proposed new tariff change would affect them, but most of them think that it might at least improve conditions for the Canadian dealer in some lines and be injurious in others. If there were no duty on butter and eggs at the present time, for instance, some say that prices in Canada would be considerably lower, as they could be brought in from the States at a lower price than exists here.

Agents of United States packing concerns seem to be jubilant over the new proposal, and believe that they will be able to compete more favorably with Canadian packers.

The free entry of cheese will give Canada a larger market, and will no doubt help to raise prices.

In regard to hogs, no higher prices can exist than will allow bacon to be exported at a profit. The reduction in duty on lard and hams might make prices a little lower, as some say the United States product could be laid down in Canada at a lower price.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Trade during the past week in the produce line has been a little on the dull side. The dullness is attributed to the cold snap; however, this is expected during January. Prices of both pure and compound lards are lower; the drop is attributed to the large stock held by local dealers.

Dressed Meats remain as quoted last week. It is expected that with the turn of the next month trade will be much brisker, as trade for the new year really does not begin to open up until February.

Butter.—There continues to be an easy feeling in the butter market. There is a large supply of fresh butter on the market, and the demand is not heavy. One of the local dealers thinks that the present prices will maintain for some time to come; others think that the large arivals of fresh butter will weaken the market considerably.

Provisions.—There are no special features to the provision trade this week, business running along evenly with prices much the same as ruled last week. Hogs have taken a slight drop, following the trend of prices in United States and in England. The offering of hogs at country points has been fairly free during the past week, with prices ranging around $7.10, while dressed hogs are quoted at $10 to $10.25. Butter—Supplies of butter continue liberal, and some dealers are getting good sized stocks on hand. If they get overloaded, it will mean another reduction in this line. Fresh creamery prints are quoted at 28 to 29 cents, and choice dairy prints at 20 to 21 cents. It is rumored that there is a quantity of butter in storage and if supplies of the fresh article continue, it will be hard to market the storage article at a profit. doing during the past month. Of course, the weather man gets all the blame, for knocking the price of this generally costly table decoration, for undoubtedly the mild weather has made the supplies of eggs more plentiful. There is another reason advanced for this, too. During other years at this time the price of eggs has been extremely high, and everyone thought there was a fortune awaiting the person in this business, so that many more people have entered the poultry business. New laids are quoted at 29 to 30c, and select storage at 27 to 28c. "Pickled eggs," remarked a local dealerer, "could hardly be given away."

Whether there are many eggs in cold storage is a question. One retailer relates that a week ago he offered 22c for these when the price was running higher, and his offer was accepted. He was able to retail them at 27 cents.

WINNIPEG.

Eggs. — United States fresh eggs brought in from St. Paul are now being offered on the market in large quantities. Owing to a decline in prices down there, wholesalers were able to secure large stocks in job lots, and in spite of the duty of 3c per doz., a fair profit is being made. The stocks are in good shape, but the eggs are small in size. Stored stocks are now selling from 26 to 27c, and new laids at 35 to 37c.

Butter.—Trade in butter continues steady, and prices for creamery remain unchanged. Manitoba creamery bricks are now worth 37 cents, while eastern townships are quoted at 30 cents per lb. Stocks at present in the city are large enough to supply demand until the spring. Dairy butter, on the other hand, has taken a sharp decline. Fancy dairy is now quoted at 26c to 27 cents, and dairy No. 1 at 24 to 25 cents. The lower grade, known as dairy No. 2, is practically uncalled for, and is worth about 20 to 21 cents. This grade was formerly sent to New York to be renovated, but owing to the weakened condition of market down there all shipments have ceased.

Cheese.—Only Ontario cheese is being handled here by some of the wholesalers who report a steady, active market, with Ontario large at 13½ cents, and Ontario twins at 14c.

Claims to Have Lost $10 on Egg Shipments

Coaticook, Que., General Merchant, Ships 71 Dozen of What He Considered to be Strictly Fresh Eggs, but Wholesale Provision Firm Said They Were Mixed—Lays Blame on the Dealers in Large Centres—Would Like to Hear of Other Experiences.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Enclosed please find $2 for the renewal of The Grocer.

We were much interested in the letter from J. M. Steel published in your issue of Jan. 20th re the troubles we encounter in buying and selling eggs. While we agree with him that it is very difficult to always be sure of getting fresh eggs from the farmers, even when we buy them for such, yet the trouble is not entirely on their side. When we ship eggs that are strictly fresh we do not always get pay for such.

As an instance we cite a case which occurred with us this season. We shipped three cases containing 71 dozen of eggs which we knew were strictly fresh to a firm in Montreal, whom we supposed were honest and square, but although we paid 40 and 45 cents per dozen for the eggs, they were reported back to us as being mixed, with very few fresh ones, and the result was that we lost about $10 on this shipment.

It seems the dealers in the cities have the matter all in their own hands, and can allow just what they like; especially if goods are shipped on consignment and if they are unscrupulously inclined, the net proceeds are pretty small. Possibly others have has the same experience. If so we would like to hear from them.

Every-Day Cares of the Grocery Store

The Woman Whose Order is Delayed and Who Says the Clerk Has Lied to Her—Winning Over The Occasional Customer—Giving Discounts to a Few—The Depreciation of Fixtures — Loyalty on the Part of the Clerk— A Customer's Prejudice Against Lettuce Lice—A Big Order Given to the Wrong Dealer.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

A woman calls up by 'phone and states that she ordered goods two hours ago, that she has since asked about them and Mr. Henderson had told her some time ago that "they were on the way," "Now, you must know it's no use lying to me that way. If you can't send them or have not sent them, I wish you'd simply say so."

Somehow, knowing all the usual circumstances that surround the immediate delivery of orders and the hitches that inevitably occur, etc., I balked at the "lying" part of it. Question was: Could she not have done better and assured to herself better feeling and consequently better serive in future if she had simply made the proper and usual dignified protest?

And yet, so greatly do facts often contravene theory, it is the actual present situation that she gets to-day better service than ever before and better service than nine-tenths of our other regular customers get. Moreover, I know it is the further fact that the incident related above improved our service all along the line.

* * * *

Sell your customers all their groceries. You have many who buy some things of you, but buy most of their supplies elsewhere. Those are the customers you should look after with especial effort. Find out what they like; follow them up with little attentions; put your tentacles around them so they will gradually come into your net and buy all their goods from you.

Take well to heart the adage: "A satisfied customer is the best advertisement," and get all the walking ads. you can induce to come your way.

* * * *

Do you give any discounts?

It's astonishing what magic there is in the agreement to give a discount to certain customers. They are thereafter of the favored few; and, by the same token, you may thereafter charge them nearly any price you like.

"They say" the cost of living is one-third higher than it was some few years ago. What does that do to you and me? Do we get anything out of it?

It may aid reflection to remember or recall that the income of a British earl in the sixth century was $2.50 per day, and compare that with his present daily returns.

* * * *

Do not forget that your furniture, fixtures and general equipment are always shrinking in value.

If you buy a wagon to-day for $140, in just one day it is worth not to exceed $100, although it is fairly worth $100 at the end of six months—for your own use. But it is well to cut those things in two at once. Then, the wagon bought to replace another wagon is chargeable simply to expense; that's all it is. Never enter it to Furt. and Fixt. account.

When I buy a new appliance, something I have not had before, I charge half of it to F. & F. or to Advertising, according to its nature; the remainder goes into Expense. At the end of the year, at inventory time, the entire F. and F. account is reduced by 10 per cent., which is charged up to Loss and Gain before the final balance is struck.

Loyalty—true, unalloyed loyalty—is the most valuable quality to find in an employe. I don't care, now, if the young fellows do think I'm writing this at trem as a preachment, for the best of them will see the truth in it some day. But there are mitigating circumstances about some alleged loyalties that render the character more hopeless than open contempt of, or indifference to, the interests of the man who is paying the wages. One is true, clear through—as impossible for him to be two-sided as to breathe through the back of his head—he's made that way. Another is measureably true—in most things—and when it's convenient or when it's just as easy as not; also always when you yourself are "around"; his disloyalties are reserved for the times when he's away, out of sight.

Now, sonny, to which class do YOU belong? Don't hurry to reply. Take time to think it over so you can make an absolutely HONEST answer. And, remember, that an honest answer will go far toward fairly establishing the certainty of the correction of such faults of disloyalty as you may find concealed about your character.

Retailers are not the only business men who make mistakes.

There's a successful packer of fruits whom I know who sent out last season a lot of goods so far below standard that they would not sell; who made no effort to correct the error; who, when attention was called to the poor stuff, needed urging of no uncertain character to induce him to take the unsatisfactory stuff off the retailers' hands in exchange for something said to be more nearly what it should have been to start with.

How long will it take him to rebuild that lost prestige? Knowing the circumstances, I hate to contemplate it.

Is it wise to waste ammunition scattering shot that way?

* * * *

Outside conditions limit our selling prices on many commodities. We must therefore so regulate our expenses and so keenly buy our supplies as to assure to ourselves a fair general margin.

And that's no easy task, nor one which any but a real merchant can accomplish.

One customer of mine has such a fear of lettuce lice that it is almost a mania with her. She looks over nearly every leaf. She never buys without asking and examining. Last time she looked over the leaves she remarked that it seemed so peculiar to her that many people ate such things, never thinking of them. I looked into her eyes with a smile: "And did it ever occur to you," I asked, "to think how much better that was for the people and how much worse for the lice?" She said she supposed so, but she keeps on looking for lice.

A few days ago she returned to me a package of a perfectly fresh breakfast food on which she said she had discovered mould. Examining, I found two or three little dark spots, seemingly small particles slightly overbaked, that was all.

Again, a little time ago she sent very early on a Monday morning for some bread for toast. I told her maid we had one loaf of Saturday's baking, which, by reason of the hot weather and confined air of the case, was touched with mould on the crust here and there, but which would make fine toast if the crust were cut off. Well, it "came back"—like the cat.

Needless to say, she's rich, poor soul! richer than you or I will ever be. "Pity the suffering rich" who have the time to so worry about their little likes and dislikes and failings and foibles, and whose shekels so blind their eyes to their own failings!

It was another of those rich ones who surprised us with a long order a few days ago. It was filled with unusual care, and it was a "fussy" order. It was returned with the explanation that "through a mistake of the central, our telephone had been called in place of her regular grocer." Oh, the blindness with which a little money afflicts so many of us—blindness to the rights of others. What a chance for her to be gently courteous, keep the goods, thank us for our pains and then go on trading with her "regular grocer" thereafter.

Gentlemen, if you only look at these things properly, you will become comfortable philosophers.

Demand Only Fair for Flour and Cereals

Flour Prices Have Not Been Affected—Millers Believe Present Prices Will Rule for a Time—English Market is Quiet and Steady—Fair Trade in Cereals of all Kinds, With Unchanged Prices.

Although wheat has been slightly reduced in price this week, still millers are not looking for lower prices in flour, at least for the present. Trade in general remains about the same, and while there has been a slight improvement in enquiry from European markets, still it is agreed that a little more trade in flour just now would be acceptable.

The English market in flour is quiet but steady, Canadian patents quoted at 27s, 9d to 28s, 3d ex-ship. The quantity of wheat and flour as wheat now in transit to Europe, with the visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, is estimated to be equivalent to 86,293,000 bushels, against 66,014,000 bushels a year ago. Two years ago the world's supplies were 181,000,000 bushels, whilst to-day they are 234,057,000 bushels, the largest known at this season.

Millers throughout the country are busy discussing the proposed placing of wheat on the free list. It seems to be the general opinion that if this takes place, it will be a severe blow to the flour and milling industry in Canada, as United States millers will have a great advantage over Canadian in regard to the exporting of flour. Our millers claim that they have been steadily gaining the export trade away from the United States, and have worked up a name for themselves as producers of Manitoba flour. They state that by the free entry of wheat into the United States, the millers on the other side will reap the benefit. It has been said that it would mean lower prices for wheat to the farmers and higher prices for flour. There are, of course, millers who do not entertain this idea.

A fair trade is passing in cereals of all kinds, with prices continuing at about the same level.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—There is not much doing in the flour market. Millers state that they are doing a fair amount of business for this season. Some believe that prices will advance before long, while others think that there will be little change in prices for some time to come.

One mill shows a slight increase in its price, and believes that others will soon follow.

Rolled Oats.—The demand for cereals is about the same, it being rather slow. Some mills believe that the price of rolled oats will advance in the near future, while others do not anticipate any change in price for some time yet. Oatmeal remains firm, and prices are the same.

TORONTO.

Flour.—Reciprocity talk is creating a great deal of interest among the flour men since the proposed reduction of tariff was made known. There was a sharp decline in local quotations on Manitoba wheat on Monday, and No. 1 northern is now offered at $1.01½. Millers generally do not believe that this reduction will cause any change in the price of flour, at least not for the present. Trade in flour at the present, although not booming, might be called fair, the domestic demand keeping up to the average for this month. One miller said that although the wheat market is bearish now, he would not be surprised to see the price of Canadian wheat advance five or ten cents per bushel if the present world conditions continue, and the proposed reciprocity agreement is accepted by the parties concerned, and that this would mean a substantial advance in flour. No changes have taken place in prices.

Cereals.—Although some companies report a slight slackness in rolled oats trade, still others say that they have done more business during the past month than during January of last year. Rolled oats continue at the same price, and although the oat market is a little easier just now, no reduction in rolled oats is looked for. A fair trade is being done in rolled wheat, and there is a good demand for corn meal at the present time.

WINNIPEG.

Flour.—The flour situation in Manitoba at the present time is satisfactory to millers. One company's mills have been running all winter, and while some others were shut down for a short time for repairs, they have again resumed, and all are busy filling orders. An effort on the part of eastern millers to raise the price of flour, following the recent bulge in wheat, is favorably considered by Manitoba millers. There is a good domestic demand and fair export while the number of enquiries received from the Orient shows that stocks in Japan are running low.

Salesmanship, the Bread of a Business Life

The Ability to Sell the Basis of Commercial Advance — Only About 25 Per Cent. of Capable Men Attain Any Moderate Success—Retail Salesmanship the Most Exacting — The Old Country System of Apprenticeship.

By Isaac F. Marcosson.

As a matter of fact, everybody lives by salesmanship. The article sold may be brains or kerosene, but some definite skill, art or service is required to dispose of it. In a larger sense all business is simply glorified salesmanship.

Thus the ability to sell something in the right way is the very basis of all commercial advance, and the institutions that foster and teach it are not only bulwarks of civilization, but real abettors of human progress. How much technical training is needed is attested by the fact that no more than twenty-five per cent. of the capable men in business life ever achieve a moderate success, and scarcely five per cent. attain positions of wide influence or big responsibility.

Though all salesmanship is interesting, the retail end is the most significant and comprehensive: first because it touches the most people; second, because it is the line of our largest business development; third, because the retail shopper, and especially the woman buyer, is our most skilful, exacting and intelligent purchaser and therefore a high efficiency is required in meeting her needs.

Clerks Get Military Training.

I know a man of big vision, who saw the dawning age of business science, which, summed up, is simply organization. To attain this he said: "I will give my future clerks a military training, because it makes for discipline." He argued that, in a great store, discipline is indispensable to organization; for to use his words "where discipline does not exist there can be no control, and this means that there is no system."

Why advocate salesmanship on the part of clerks who have experience in selling? Simply because, as the merchant at the head of a store believes, "the more you educate your employes the better merchants they will become." He has found that it makes for loyalty too.

Takes Somebody to Sell.

The maxim that a big New York store hangs over its clerks is this: "Anybody can buy, but it takes somebody to sell." A school for clerks is held every morning in a large recreation room. At one end of this room hangs the following motto: "Minimize friction and create harmony. You can get frictions for nothing but harmony costs courtesy and self-control."

Ask any woman shopper what impresses her most in the salesperson behind the counter, and the chances are that she will say "knowledge." The wise merchant, through his representatives, invests his stock with human and story interest, and the imparting of this interest to the customer is one of the biggest factors in successful retail salesmanship. The clerks who study their stocks forge ahead.

The Apprenticeship Way.

In Ireland and Scotland the boys are apprenticed for four years, and often their parents pay for the privilege of having their sons trained. The boy lives in the store, which becomes a sort of boarding school. His first task may be to sweep out the store, but he is required to know how to hold a broom before he starts. Then he becomes a cash boy, and is taught accuracy in making change.

The next step is to the stock. He may not reach this for two years, and then in the third year he may become valet to the clerk. After four years he goes behind the counter and makes his first sale. The result of this training is that the boy knows his business thoroughly.

Business is founded on service, good business on good service and the best business on the best service.

Purity Without Disguise

Consider the selling advantage of unbleached flour.

In view of the widespread preference for the natural article.

A direct consequence of the Pure Food Movement.

Finding its origin in a native disapproval of sham and simulation —selling any article for what it is not.

Consider that FIVE ROSES is one of the few—the very few—flours upholding the unbleached standard.

Native purity and careful milling stand out like the sun at midday. And the oven tells the tale of deceptive color.

The color of FIVE ROSES is the natural complexion of the floury portion of the spring wheat just as it issues from the heart of the very sound, healthy berries that are the cream of the Manitoba harvest.

It is not bleached because—be it known and understood—it requires no artificial whitening.

Having no deficiency to conceal, the result of careless milling, of off-grade or immature grain.

The pure product of sanitary methods, it sells without disguise. And if it has that dazzling clearness, that delicately creamy tint, that wholesomeness which are the greatest attraction of FIVE ROSES—it is because this flour is a natural product, unbleached, unartificial, undisguised, uncolored.

And being all of these, its very honesty breeds loyal custom. Therein lies the gain of the conscientious seller over the retail counter.

And FIVE ROSES gives YOU an overwhelming selling point such as is lacking in your competitor's vocabulary.

It lies within your reach.

Grape Fruit is of Better Quality Now

Quality was Poor at First of Season—Oranges are in Plentiful Supply With Good Demand—Marmalade Oranges Going Out Well—Crop Shorter Than Usual — Strawberries Arrive From the Sunny South—Synopsis of Opinions on the Tariff.

The markets are well supplied with California oranges at the present time but demand is keeping at a high standard. The orange crop in California is six weeks earlier than usual owing to the pro'onged drought on the Pacific coast. Mild weather extended well into January when a cold wave and severe winter spell unequalled in twenty-five years brought an immediate harvesting of the fruit. Shipments of Florida oranges have been light of late, the demand being slight on account of the reasonable prices of the California fruit.

Dealers report that the trade in grape fruit has not been good so far this season. This is explained by the fact that the first shipments of grape fruit were of a rather poor quality, so that the consumer got turned against them. Oranges have been of good quality and this has also tended to detract the attention from grape fruit. But the quality of the fruit now arriving is excellent and a big trade is looked for from now on. Grocers on account of the good quality of the present grape-fruit and the fact that this fruit is a good tonic and valuable for its medicinal qualities, should be able to increase their sales in this line.

The crop of marmalade oranges is a little less than in other years. Arrivals up to the present have been good, and large quantities have already gone into consumption. A firmer tone is noted in the lemon market and higher prices may be seen. Southern strawberries are now being offered on the Canadian markets but prices are high. There is a scarcity of home grown onions and prices are gradually crawling up to a higher level.

The shortage reported in the apple crop last fall seems to have been much exaggerated and to-day there are ample requirements. The high prices ruling for some time curtailed the consumptive demand while the liberal supply of oranges resulted in less demand for apples.

It seems to be the general opinion that the proposed reduction in tariff will give cheaper fruits and vegetables at the time that they have to be imported from the United States. Some believe that the Canadian and United States markets will not conflict and that ordinarily prices would be the same.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—The fruit market in general is brightening up considerably, and business done is better than for the corresponding time of other years. The demand for California oranges is good and prices remain steady. Strawberries are arriving in larger quantities; prices are lower, quart boxes selling at 65 cents. There is a scarcity of cranberries, and prices have advanced. Both pears and plums have vanished from the market.

Spanish onions are vanishing from the market, present stocks being light and consequently prices are high, red onions have also advanced. Tomatoes are arriving in larger quantities, prices averaging from $3.50 to $5 a crate. Potatoes remain firm at their present high prices, and the demand is fair. TORONTO.

Green Fruits.—The first shipments of marmalade oranges have disappeared with great rapidity, at a price ranging from $2.50 to $2.75 per case in sizes of 240's, 200's and 160's. The next shipment for this market will arrive about Feb. 12th, the crop of marmalade oranges is smaller than on other years but local dealers are looking forward to a good trade in this line. Strawberries made their first appearance on the local market this week but the price is not such as would induce large sales, although they are fine quality of Floridas. The opening price per box was 65 to 70 cents. California oranges continue in good supply with excellent quality. Lemons are firm and higher prices are looked for by dealers in the near future. One firm was offering several hundred boxes of Greening apples this week at $1.65 per box. Trade in fruits is reported favorable for this time of the year, but of course dealers do not look for anything exciting at this season.

Vegetables.—There is a noted scarcity of home grown onions and some dealers are asking as high as $1.65 per bag while most agree that higher prices may be seen before long on account of the general shortness of supply. Arrivals of Spanish onions are fairly liberal and prices continue at $3 per case. Considerable California celery is offered on the local market with a good demand. Potatoes are going out quite freely with the price ranging around $1 per bag.

There are several United States capitalists now turning their attention to the growing of pineapples in Mexico. On one plantation, states C. A. Miller, who has been over the ground, experiments showed the land well suited for growing this fruit, and the owner at present has 75,000 plants set out. The young plants bear in 20 months, and it requires at least 5,328 to the acre. In addition to the revenue from the sale of pineapples, there is considerable income from young slips which the plants throw out after the first year. The estimated profits from this industry are $150 gold per acre, not including the revenue from the sale of slips.

Mr. Reekie will continue the business of Reekie & Olson, general merchants, Butler, Sask.

Mild Weather Slackened Fish Trade

Retailers Buy Only Small Quantities in Mild Weather—Dealers Do Not Exactly Know How Proposed Change in Tariff Would Affect Trade—The 1909-1910 Was Best Season Yet For Canadian Fisheries—$29,629,169 was Total Value of Canadian Fish and Fish Products.

There is a fair amount of trade in fish throughout the Dominion, although business has during the past week been affected at some points by the mild weather. A report from the east coast says that arrangements have been made with the Newfoundland government to erect five cold storage plants in that country, each with a capacity of 1,000,000 pounds of fish.

Little improvement is reported in the fish market in New Brunswick. The price of pickled fish is about 25% higher than at this period last year.

Fish dealers believe that only a trial could tell how the fish market would be affected by the proposed reduction in tariff. It would undoubtedly open up a wider market for fish, but whether prices would be materially affected, could only be found out by the actual working of the new tariff.

The total value of all kinds of fish and fish products taken by Canadian fishermen during 1909-1910 was $29,629,169. This is the highest value yet reached during any one year in Canadian fisheries, being $4,178,084 ahead of 1908-09. Of the total, $8,081,111 was Nova Scotia's share, while British Columbia was second with $10,314,755 and New Brunswick third with $4,676,315. Of the total value salmon contributed $8,204,524; cod, $3,912,806; lobster, $3,657,146; herring, $2,754,751; halibut, $1,240,486 and white fish, $1,000,126.

The lobster catch shows a falling off, as does also the mackerel, the oyster industry is about the same, while the value of sword fish caught on the Nova Scotia coast is recorded in the returns for the first time, showing a total of $13,695 in value.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John.—There has been little improvement in the local fish market during the last week. Herring are scarce and the only supply now coming are brought from Newfoundland. These are being used for kippers. Finnan haddie is high, the retail price now being 9 cents per pound and some of ehe dealers predict that the price may go to 10 cents.

It is reported that a company has been organized to build a sardine factory on the Canadian side of the St. Croix river, either at Chamcook or St. Andrews.

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—Under the unfavorable weather conditions of last week, there was a noted slackness in the demand for fish as retailers like to keep on the safe side and order only small quantities during the mild weather. However, this week with the approach of the cold weather, trade has brightened up consireably and fresh and frozen lines are going out quite freely. Frozen ocean herring are now offered in boxes of from 125 to 250 count at $1.90 per hundred, Lake Superior herring have been reduced ½ cent per lb. and are now quoted at 3½ cents. Finnan haddie has been reduced in price also and good quality stock is now being offered at 8c. There is a fair demand for oysters, but like the fresh fish, the trade is affected a great deal by weather conditions and during mild weather, orders are usually few.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—The fish market this past week has been rather quiet. It seems that the market is taking a rest before entering the most busy period of the year for the fish market—the coming ten weeks. The stock held by wholesale distributors is quite ample to satisfy the demands for some time, although some lines are going out after a few light attacks from the consumer. Especially is this the case in the frozen lines as herring, halibut, lake trout and mackerel.

There is a scarcity in all lines of pickled fish, sufficiently scarce that the present prices are 25 to 30% higher than for the corresponding period last year.

On account of stormy weather on the coast lobster production is about nil. Smoked fish such as haddies and fillets are in good demand in a small way. The oyster trade is keeping quite active, with supplies easy.

THE SELLING OF SALMON.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—"RESULT OF KNOWING THE GOODS"—This was the heading of a little article in your issue of the 27th of January, in which you pointed out the cleverness of a Smith's Falls grocer who, when a lady came in and asked for the best salmon in the store, managed to sell her a tin of the best and a tin of the cheaper, and consequently, inferior brand. You spoke of this as good business. We think it exceedingly bad business, and the chances are the grocer will find it out. That lady wanted the very best goods to be gotten and was willing to pay for same. This grocer succeeded in selling her a tin of salmon that could not be prime and which, when used, would give her offence. Anyone taking note of who are the most successful grocers will always find that they are the ones who are selling first-class goods and first-class goods only, never the man who is pushing inferior goods.

WHOLESALER.

Editorial Note.—The point in salesmanship intended to have been brought out was that the dealer sold two cans of salmon where only one was asked for. "Wholesaler" is undoubtedly correct in stating that the best groecrs are those who sell only first-class goods. If the one inferior grade of salmon was not good enough for salad as the grocer explained it was, then certainly he would be courting the disfavor of the customer to whom he sold. If he entertained any doubt whatever it would be bad business on his part to make the sale.

CANADIAN OYSTER PRODUCTIONS

The oyster fisheries on the Canadian Atlantic coast have shown little improvement, the yield for the 1909-1910 season being 34,575 barrels, an increase of only 2,500 barrels over the previous season. In 1882, the yield was as high as 64,646 barrels, but has steadily been declining since.

AIMS TO PREVENT TIPPING.

In last week's Grocer mention was made of a bill introduced into the House of Commons by Mr. Lewis, M.P., re secret commissions, tips, etc. This bill is known as Bill 87 and has been sent out in printed form in which it is stated that it shall apply only to the form of gift commonly known as a gratuity or tip.

Small Stocks and Quick Turnovers

This What a Grocery Broker Would Advise — Never Purchase Five Cases of Anything When One Can be Secured Relatively as Cheaply, He Suggests—Salesmanship a Valuable Asset, But Grocer Must Know Much About the Operating End of a Business as well.

"Look to the business management," is the advice given to clerks by a Canadian grocery broker who has been, during his business career, a close observer of methods of retail dealers who have evolved from the store assistant stage.

"A clerk may be the very best salesman possible," he said, "and not know anything about running a grocery store. I have known cases where grocery clerks who were salesmen of the first rank but who went into business for themselves and failed.

Lacked Business Judgment.

'It was simply because they didn't understand the operation end of the business—buying, account collecting, figuring profit percentages, etc. Salesmanship is probably the best asset any dealer can have but it will not stand alone.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that too little attention is paid in this country to the obtaining of a sound, all-around business training on the part of clerks. I have known some hard-headed business men who have gone into the grocery business and become successful, but who when they began were far from being salesmen. They made it a point to progress slowly until they knew their own measures as grocers. They took especial care that they bought sparingly and sold at a profit above operating expenses.

"In the Old Country things are different. A clerk must serve his apprenticeship and learn something about every department of the store's operation if he is to become a recognized dealer. He must learn one thing at a time and know it before another is trusted to him."

Must Turn Stock Frequently.

"What do you consider should be the chief aim of a grocery dealer?" he was asked.

"From what I have learned through my experiences, the successful merchant is the man who turns his stock over as frequently as possible. The small money-ed-man with the big stock is on the road to failure.

"I know grocery dealers who never purchase 2 or 5 cases of anything if they can get 1 at as cheap a rate and even where a quantity price is quoted for 5 cases or more they stick to the single case. This ensures them a low stock always and a rapid turnover of this stock and the money invested in it. They have no large invoices to meet and so reduce worry to a minimum. They are also able to get the assortment so as to supply the demand of every customer and gain and hold trade.

"The blame attached to large stocks on the part of some dealers must rest with travelers. They are anxious to show a good week to their houses and if they see some weak-backed retailer they often "load" him up with too much of one variety of goods by means of alluring talk on the lower price.

"This, I maintain, is a short-sighted policy on the part of travelers and one that ought to be discouraged by their principals unless a dealer is well able, financially, to stand the strain.

Assurance Against Dead Stock.

"Small stocks of many lines tending to quick turnovers, is the ideal method in my estimation and I have my doubts whether even a large retailer ought to go far afield beyond this rule. It means good credit standing, smaller outstanding accounts, less money tied up in the business and gives little opportunity for dead stocks. But when a dealer has a stock on his hands which is moving slowly or not at all, he should make extra efforts to help it along even at the expense of cutting the price. In such a case I would not consider it illegitimate price-cutting since a dealer is not attempting to attract trade, but is simply getting rid of something for which it is difficult to work up a demand and which could be replaced by a better seller.

"Small purchases, small stock, quick-turnovers by thoughtful and dignified salesmanship methods and good store management all the way through, is what would be my advice to the grocer anxious to succeed." These were his concluding remarks.

ADVICE TO BOARDS OF TRADE.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—The report of the members of the Toronto Board of Trade who towards the end of 1910 visited Chicago and Cleveland, has been issued in pamphlet form. G. T. Somers, W. P. Grundy, and F. G. Morley were the men who went out for this information.

In summing up they say :

"In our judgment we should start at once to cultivate in our members a pride in our city and a desire to serve it. We could then, without any wrench to our present constitution, without any change in our name or our policies, gradually build up an organization which in time may be just as effective in good service for Toronto as the Cleveland Chamber is for that city. Their problems are our problems, differing only in degree. Boston, Buffalo and other cities have sent themir deputations in turn to Cleveland, and are now engaged in working out Chambers of Commerce along similar lines."

The Difficulty of Collecting a Grocery Bill

One of the common occurrences in the grocery business is delayed payment of debts and the loss of these customers when their attention is called to their delinquency. Many are the stories that might be told and to the long list already recorded, this extra one should be of some interest.

A grocer in an eastern Ontario town had allowed one of his customers to build up a debt of $25. He knew the credit was good and did not pay attention to it for months. Finally, not long ago, he found himself in need of ready cash and he sent a letter in regard to this account. Then he sent one of his office hands and it was only a garnishee threat that brought the woman to the store. As is usual in these cases she spoke of some indignity in questioning her honesty, but the grocer replied that he was trying to clean up his books.

Well the money was all paid in a few weeks, but the woman wished the grocer anything but success in his business. She reminded him that he had been eager to get her trade in the first place. He admitted this, but replied that he did not want to wait a year for a small sum of $25. He was aware of the fact that there were many other grocers in the town and if she could get credit from them they were welcome to her custom. He did not mention this latter part to her, but he felt it strongly enough to have said it aloud.

Such is often the gratutude of the customer who has received favors.

Crisp News Notes From Everywhere

Oranges Growing in Manitoba—Foreign Demand for Dried Fruits—A New Co-operative Method for Distributing Goods—Rains Affect Olive Crop—Grocers' Association to Buy Goods At Net Weights Only.

Oranges have been grown in Manitoba by W. T. Johnstone of Wawanesa. The fruit resembles the Japanese oranges in shape, but were smaller and of good flavor.

The foreign demand for canned goods during the past season has not been so good as the previous one, and in consequence, the exports show a falling off. While there has been a decrease in quantity, still the prices obtained have ranged higher than last year.

A plan has been perfected by members of the Denver Retail Grocers' Association whereby clerks holding responsible positions in their employ may be bonded.

A new form of co-operative retailing will be used by O. W. Lamb of Clinton, Ia., who proposes to open a store and sell groceries at wholesale cost with 10 per cent. added. But in order for the consumers to get this rate they must pay $10 for a membership certificate for three years, and $2 each year for a partnership card. The membership fee and $2 yearly card tax is said to be for the purpose of assuring Lamb's salary as manager while the 10 per cent. above cost is for the purpose of maintaining the store. All invoices of goods purchased from wholesale houses will be, it is said, on the counter of the store for examination.

Heavy rains following the long drouth have further affected the European olive crop, but it will be several weeks before any definite estimate of the output can be made. It is reported that France will produce only 50 per cent. of a normal crop.

The Los Angeles Retail Grocers' Association at a big meeting recently adopted resolutions to buy goods only at net weights in the future.

The Grocers' Association of Cleveland, O., are doing their utmost to eliminate the dry measure and sell goods by weight only.

The retail grocers of Dundas, Ont., have decided to discontinue giving premiums of any kind.

In his annual report, the president of the Alaska Packers' Association says that the 1910 profits were $517,009, as compared with $779,729 during 1909. The canneries were all kept busy and salmon markets were brisk.

CALENDARS FOR 1911.

The Ontario Lantern & Lamp Co., Hamilton, Ont., have issued an elaborate 1911 calendar advertising the Tungsten lamp. It is 28 by 14 inches in dimensions with a dark brown colored paper for background. The illustration is that of an Egyptian figure, richly colored, turning on a Tungsten lamp with one hand and holding an ancient form of lamp with the other. She is standing at the bottom of a beautiful staircase in a handsomely furnished dwelling.

you will handle it. The other enterprising dealers are doing so, and say they would not be without it on their shelves.

And the public, so cute and discerning, says there is no preparation like SNAP for the effective chasing from the hands of dirt, grease, paint and tar. You want an article that sells.

Order "SNAP," the hand-cleanser, from your jobber to-day.

Crescent BM&Co. Brand

TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

The Grocer gets from its Readers a Degree of Attention—a Quality of Interest—that is Most Unusual

Not long ago a certain article was advertised in this paper, and several others simultaneously.

We questioned the advisability of using The Grocer, because we believed that the trade in which we circulate did not offer a very good field for the article in question. The manufacturer, however, was satisfied to make the trial, so the advertisement was inserted.

The Grocer brought better returns than any of the other mediums used.

Why ?

It was not because the other papers have not good circulation. They have. And it was not because they are not read. They are read.

The difference in pulling power between The Grocer and these papers is due to the difference in the quality of interest that each gets from its readers.

Thousands of good dealers save many times the subscription price by studying this paper closely every week. They give it a degree of attention—a quality of interest—that is most unusual.

That is why The Grocer, with a comparatively small number of readers who could be considered probable buyers, brought better returns than the other papers that should logically be much better mediums for this particular proposition.

Maconochie's Pickles

Pickles in Perfection

Pickles hold an important place in the store room of every household; for, wholesome in themselves, they add enormously to the enjoyment of so many other foods, and, in many instances, prevent waste.

But, if Pickles are to serve their proper purpose, they must be excellent in every particular, and it is the superiority of the FAMOUS MACONOCHIE BRANDS which secures for them their immense public favor.

Many acres of the finest land for the purpose are specially planted with vegetables for the Maconochie supplies, and at the right moment of maturity they are gathered, cured, and bottled.

The experience of a generation has been devoted to the work, and at the Maconochie Factory, the preparation of Pickles has been raised to the level of a fine art.

It does not matter in whatever climate the Maconochie Pickles are used, and they will be found in every corner of the globe, they are always bright in colour, beautifully crisp, and deliciously fresh in flavour!

The means by which this great result is achieved is no secret: They are simply:

Butter

From the view-point of economy alone, a woman will be interested to investigate the merits of Coco Fruitine in her cooking and pastry.

Its matchless purity, rich yet delicate flavor and evident superiority to butter, oil or lard, commend it at once to the housewife who is anxious to save. Made in Marseilles, and made with scrupulous care!

Economical

LET the "fussy" customer know your store as the one place where she will always receive rapt attention. Let her feel, if necessary, that she is right and you are wrong when an inclination to differ arises. Cane's Washboards
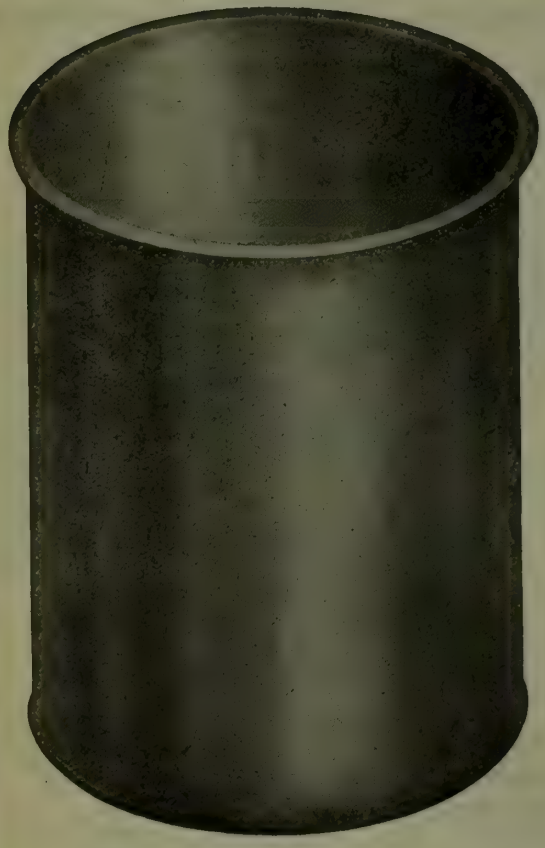
LOOK BETTER, LAST LONGER

At anywhere near the same price, there are no washboards so attractive in appearance and that give such good service as Cane's. Early in our business career we formed the habit of putting the soundest materials and the most superior workmanship into our goods



And the habit remains!

The boards shown on this page are three of our leading lines. Our catalog shows the full range—a board to meet every demand, and the best value at all prices.

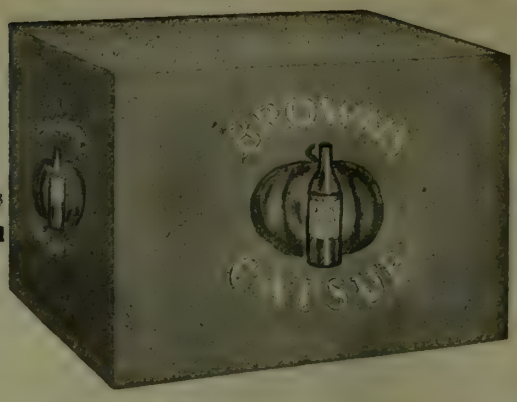
Contains More—Costs Less

IN these four words you have a very strong selling point for RED CROSS BAKED BEANS.

The tins contain more beans than the 3's flats, which are sold at a higher price.

There is a green sticker on the top of each can of RED CROSS BAKED BEANS that calls your customers' attention to this fact and tells them how to verify it.

RED CROSS BEANS are hand picked, prepared by a special process and packed solid, either plain or with Chili Sauce.



All the spices and sauces used in processing RED CROSS BEANS are very carefully selected with an ideal of absolute purity in view.

Swiss Cheese

Your customers are becoming more and more particular about the quality and purity of their foodstuffs. You will do well, therefore, to give a prominent place in your display to which is absolutely pure. Manufactured in the valley of Emmenthal, Switzerland, from milk of the highest quality and guaranteed unskimmed. It is so rich and creamy that it will please even your most particular customers.

IT IS SUPERIOR

to the Gruyere cheese, which is made of partly skimmed milk, and which, therefore, cannot have that delicious flavor which has done much to make the Emmenthal cheese famous. Further, the Gruyere loaves are 1-3 or 1-2 smaller than the Emmenthaler.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

Such has been the success and reputation gained by Emmenthal cheese that many manufacturers, both in Canada and the United States, have tried to imitate it.

Note:—We import ours direct from Switzerland.

IMPORTANT DECISION

New York State Pure Food Law and Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce

Department of Agriculture declares Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce to be a Genuine Worcestershire Sauce.

(Copy)

STATE OF NEW YORK

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Raymond A. Pearson, Commissioner.

George L. Flanders, First Assistant Commissioner.

Hon. William F. Sheehan,
37 Wall Street,
New York City.

Albany, January 11, 1911.

Dear Sir:—

The ex-Attorney General before retiring from office, failed to render an opinion upon the question which was argued by you before him relative to Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce."

He stated, however, in a conference with the Commissioner of Agriculture, that the question involved was, in his judgment, similar to the question involved in the case of Lea & Perrins' "Worcestershire Sauce"; that he found it difficult to distinguish between them; and that the line of demarkation was so indefinite as to make it doubtful, in his mind, whether the Commissioner of Agriculture would be able to maintain the position that the Holbrooks Company should brand or label the said goods to show the constituents thereof. He further stated that his judgment was that this sauce should be treated in the same way as the Lea & Perrins' sauce and for similar reasons.

In view of this attitude, I am therefore constrained to say to you that no further attempts under the provisions of the present law will be made to require the manufacturers of Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce" to label the goods so as to show their constituents, nor to prevent them from using the word "Worcestershire."

Respectfully,

R. A. PEARSON,
Commissioner.

REAL TRUE CREAM AT LAST

Mr. A. McGill, the Chief Analyst to the Inland Revenue Department of Canada, wrote in Bulletin 144, as far back as under date 3rd June, 1908:—"The word 'CREAM' is largely used to designate condensed milk This is incorrect and SHOULD BE MADE ILLEGAL. As a matter of fact, these so-called 'creams' are not any richer in milk fat than sugared condensed milks, and many of them are distinctly poorer. Among the samples examined ONLY ONE (No. 25628 which contains 25.20 per cent. of fat) IS ENTITLED TO BE CALLED CREAM."
This one sample was prepared by FUSSELL & CO., Ltd, LONDON AND NORWAY.

"Too Mussy For Me"

As between an open bale of dates, half sold, and a pile of cartons of Dromedary Dates, which, if you were a consumer, would you be most attracted by?

If you saw only the bulk dates, wouldn't you be even apt to be revolted by their mussiness and buy none?

That's exactly why so many people haven't eaten dates, though they like them. It also explains the enormous sale DROMEDARY DATES have attained. They are the finest fruit we can buy, to begin with, and they're packed in the most scrupulously neat fashion, wrapped in oiled paper and then packed in cartons. The natural demand for them has been increased by the enormous advertising we have done in magazines read by your customers.

How to Obtain the Exact Cost of Goods

The Question is Answered, Should Discounts be Deducted in Order to Determine Cost?—A Negative Reply—The Value of a Cost Book Explained — The Items to be Always Included Under Expense.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I have the following very pertinent and interesting inquiry from a general merchant:

Dear Sir,—I have been a subscriber to and reader of your valuable paper for the past two years, and admit it is an indispensable paper, one from which I have obtained a great deal of valuable and practical information. I have been and still am very much interested in your department, and, as one of your "scholars," I would ask you to kindly inform me what you consider should properly be added to an invoice to arrive at the true cost. Also, what do you consider as expense. In arriving at true cost do you deduct the discounts and then add to the remainder such amounts as you consider part of the cost, or do you add to the gross amount of the invoice? Hoping I have made plain what information I desire.

R——— S———

Winnipeg, Man.

That's a good letter, right to the point. Maybe I can answer the questions satisfactorily, but more likely I shall leave many points uncovered. I hope, however, that where I fail to cover important phases of this question, others will kindly step up and say where I am at fault. Such a question as this must be met by all of us in all sections, under all conditions. There should, therefore, be various methods, some better, some worse, of figuring costs; and a full discussion would aid all of us, might, indeed, lead to the fusing together of the best ideas into the one best method.

Get at Exact Cost.

I have detailed in former articles what jobbers add to cost. I have shown that therein we have a hint of what is good for us; but I have also shown that it would be impracticable for retailers to follow all that out to the fine point reached by jobbers. The safe way for us will be to take into consideration just what it has cost us to get the goods into our places of business ready to sell.

In the case of a bill of goods bought under the regular prices it's not hard to arrive at invoice cost of any given item per dozen or piece. But in cases where goods are bought otherwise it is not so simple. Supposing a traveler offers you five cases of an article free with 25 boxes of something else; he will likely point out that this shows you a cost of say $2.29 on the latter. To make positive of his meaning ask him whether he is figuring the free article at $4.25 per case, or $4 or $3.90. You can see at a glance that it will make a difference in your cost of the 25 boxes if it is figured at regular cost of $4.50 or at $3.90. You should consider carefully whether or not you are paying more for the free article than you could purchase it ordinarily by itself. But having bought the goods and having found say that the cost is $4 per case, you can readily compute the actual invoice cost. If this article is bought freight paid, it will be right for you to add 5c per box to your invoice cost to get actual cost to you in your store.

Another class of goods is olives in bottles. Here you must figure invoice cost; then add the actual freight cost, going right out to weigh up the goods in order to learn the actual cost of transporting a given size to your store. Then make some allowance for handling, whether you do it yourself or pay for having it done; lastly, add fully 5c per dozen all round, and in high-priced goods, costing $3.75 and upward, add 10c. per dozen to cover breakage, spoilage and leakage. Bulk olives will cost you 10c per gallon for waste, sampling and spoilage.

Using a Cost Book.

The systematic keeping of a cost book, wherein is entered the cost of every item that you receive, will require some work—hard work, at first—but nothing will pay so well; nothing is such an educator. We cannot know too much about our business. The more we know the better able will we be to do business correctly. And the more we ponder over and study actual conditions around us the more will be revealed to us. Careful computation and record will consume many evenings; but, as we go on with the work, as we dig deeper into classifications and learn that certain goods cost more to get in than others, the better off will we be.

Do I deduct discount? Certainly not. Why? I can best reply in the old school formula.

There's a man whose name is Capital. He has certain duties in a business. In proportion as he is able to perform those duties well or ill, he is paid much or little. His pay is called NET PROFIT AND DISCOUNT. If he is weak and cannot meet his bills promptly, cannot carry his full burden, he suffers loss—labors under the disadvantage of PAYING INTEREST instead of receiving Discount and, as a consequence, he realizes less Net Profit than if he were stronger. BUT, with continued application, frugal living and careful management he may grow stronger and does, in fact, gain great strength. Then he is a better worker, then he draws More Pay. He rises in his strength and casts off the incubus, "Interest," thereafter gathering to himself large portions of Discount.

Capital Should Keep the Discount.

Now, having worked in the vineyard, shall Capital not have the pay he has earned? Shall that pay be divided with anybody else? No. It belongs only to him, since by his exertions alone has that pay become an actuality.

Put it another way. Suppose you are not in position to discount your bills. You must still so figure as to make a profit over and above all deductions and expenses; over and above and beyond the drawback of losing discount. If you figure properly, then, you will overcome the disadvantage of paying more than your neighbor who has capital wherewith to discount, and in time you will have accumulated enough reserve to discount all your bills. Now, seeing you made money before you could discount without giving any part of the discount benefit to merchandise cost, you must continue to let merchandise cost carry its full burden in order that you may realize the ADDED PROFIT which YOUR OWN LABOR and care have thrown in your way.

Cost, full cost, belongs to merchandise. Full gross profit belongs to merchandise. Discount is the reward of having capital wherewith to take discounts—to pay more promptly than the law requires—and the benefit must go to Capital.

What Constitutes Expense.

What do I consider expense? I can only reply very briefly in the remaining space. Expense is the ENTIRE COST of handling goods from the time you have landed them in your store ready to sell until the money is in your bank account. You can readily figure what that means. It includes rent, clerk hire, insurance, light, heat, horse feed, wear and tear on equipment, replacement of lost or worn out tools, water rates, advertising collections, postage — every blessed thing that you can think of that does not enter properly into the cost of goods as above set forth.

And, whether you figure as I say or not, one thing is absolutely incontrovertible—you PAY ALL THE BILLS for all these. Think of that occasionally. It will help you to "bear down" a little harder on the Cost of Goods.

Thinks Traveler Should Leave a Copy of the Order

Editor Canadian Grocer.—A great deal of inconvenience is often caused the merchant through the neglect of the "Knights of the Grip" to leave a plain copy of order received, on which is also marked the terms, date of shipment, etc. Invariably the merchant wishes to look up his order to see when the goods will arrive, or prices quoted, and it certainly is annoying to find that the traveler has failed to leave a copy.

It is also annoying to find a copy which has been left but which does not bear the firm's name or address. Should the merchant wish for some reason to write the firm about an order given and does not know the name and address and cannot find it on the copy of the order, it is enough to make him "say things."

Of course the merchant can procure a copy by asking for it but he should not be called upon to do so, and if travelers would all use a duplicating order book, it would be no trouble to give a copy.

Calgary Dealer Reasons Why Displays Sell

Advocates the Use of Every Available Space in the Window and Inside the Store—The Store with Clean Goods Attractively Shown will Attract New Trade—A Selling Force in Moving Out New Lines.

Calgary, Alta., Feb. 7.—"The proper displaying of goods is an essential of modern merchandizing," remarked a Calgary grocer recently.

"A merchant may manage to run along with a bare living without displaying goods," he continued, "but he will run a store on this method a long time before he will be able to buy a building of his own or put himself on Easy street. No matter how commonplace are the goods, they look more attractive when well displayed.

"A statement came to my notice the other day," he continued, "wherein it was said that a show case is not needed for potatoes because when people want potaoes they will ask for them anyway. It may be correct that we do not need a show case for potatoes, but nevertheless it is true that potatoes will sell better when well displayed to the prospective customer than when hid away in the back store house.

Will Sell New Lines.

"There are two objects of display. The first is to sell more goods to regular customers and the second to interest visitors. It may be argued that regular customers will buy all their requirements from you anyway without display but is a well known fact that many families' demands may be greatly increased by proper methods being used by the grocer in both introducing new lines and also increasing the sale of staples by display.

"The merchant is the loser if a family goes without goods for a day longer than it intended to, just because there was nothing in the store to remind the shopper of the need for them. While display of straight staples may not increase the total consumption, still it causes people to buy where they are shown and that is to the benefit of the merchant who makes displays.

"In regard to how it affects visitors," continued the merchant, "a person visiting your store may see some article which her regular grocer has not shown. She buys because the article was displayed. When she requires another supply, she probably comes back again. Perhaps this time you have something else which she sees on display and purchases it. Perhaps just at that time, she is out of potatoes and seeing some nicely displayed in your store, she gets a bag sent up with the other goods. Thus, gradually the merchant with the good display wins over the customer from the merchant who was waiting for her to ask for goods.

Sales Depend on Displays.

"More display means more sales," he said, "whether it be staples or fancy goods and every merchant should give particular attention to exhibiting goods. Displays should be changed often so that goods are presented to customers in a different way on each visit.

"Displays may be made around pillars, on the end of counters and in places about the store which are of little use for anything else. Unused spots at the back of a store need not present the unattractive appearance that many do but may be used to good advantage for the display of goods. This would not only improve the looks of the store but also would help in the sales.

"The judicious addition of price cards," in his opinion, "will add greatly to the selling power of the displays."

QUEBEC R.M.A. MEETING.

On Wednesday and Thursday of next week, Feb. 15 and 16, the annual meeting of the Quebec Provincial Retail Merchants' Association will be held in Montreal. The meeting will take place at 80 St. Denis St. beginning at 10 o'clock a.m. Wednesday.

James A. Gibson, grocer, Belleville, Ont., won a municipal bye-election there recently and is now an alderman. Three of the Belleville city council this year are grocers.

SHOW CARDS ACROSS THE STORE

The above is an interior view of the grocery store of F. A. Wilson, 33 Queen St., St. Catharines, Ont. One of the features are rows of show cards from one counter across the store to the other. These are fastened to semi-circular bars and are used to advertise baked beans, tomato sauce, relishes, salad oil, etc.

SHORT TALKS TO CLERKS

By An Ex-Clerk

PUNCTUALITY.

Punctuality is a subject on which mostly all retail clerks can be plainly talked to, as it means the starting out right for a good day's work. When you start out right for a good day's work, you are starting out in the world right.

If the time to be at the store is seven o'clock, you hire with your employer knowing that that is the time. Why should you come to the store at 7.15? Many clerks will come to work ten minutes late, twenty minutes late, thirty minutes late. If you are engaged to come to work at seven, then carry out your contract. If your employer engaged you on the understanding that he would pay you $12 a week, what would you think if he gave you on Saturday night only $11.80? You would immediately say, "You have not carried out your contract."

My point is, MAKE GOOD RIGHT FROM THE START. Is it fair, do you think, to steal fifteen minutes—for that is what you do when you are late. Stealing may sound harsh, but when you come right down to facts that is what it is. You could be of value in that fifteen minutes straightening things up, putting things in their places, and in many other ways.

And let me impress another thing on you: When YOU are late, why shouldn't the other clerks come late? In fact, the result is that they do, and they get it into their heads that it is all right. As a matter of fact, it is all wrong.

A bank opens at ten o'clock. It does not open at 10.10. It opens on the dot. That is punctuality. If you are going to the depot to catch a train at nine o'clock, you would never figure on getting there ten minutes after nine; you would be there ahead of time—caused by punctuality in the railroad system.

Probably you think that when you come in ten minutes late it is never noticed. Don't fool yourself! Don't ever get the impression that, because there is no mention made of an irregularity, it is not noticed, because it is. It is noticed not only by your employer but by your brother workers. It is noticed by the opposition store across the road. Now there is no chain stronger than its weakest link—a very weak link—which you want to immediately remove from your chain.

The clerk can be of much value straightening things up the 15 minutes he is Late.

I recall a serious railroad wreck that was occasioned by an employe not being punctual. He was an operator, and he was due at his post at 8.00 p.m., at a little wayside station. The Chief Dispatcher, of course, knew when this operator was due, as they know of all the duties of the junior operators. At eight o'clock the Chief Dispatcher called this operator's station to stop train No. 5. At two minutes past eight he called him again to stop train No. 5, but could get no answer to the call. Again and again did he try to get a reply from this operator, knowing that the man should be on his job at eight o'clock or be dead. It was of the utmost importance that No. 5 passenger train be stopped, as a freight train coming in the opposite direction had mistaken orders; and if No. 5 were not stopped they were going to meet, which would mean the loss of many lives. And it had to be stopped before five minutes past eight, or the passenger train would go rushing past this wayside station.

Serious Railway Wreck Was Caused by the Operator Not Being Punctual.

Well, it was not stopped. The operator was late. The operator was not punctual. The result was DISASTER, and the loss of many lives. Think of the lives on the passenger train that depended on that operator being punctual!

You never know what may depend on YOU being punctual. The very time you are late may be the very time you are being watched. You might wonder, "Why would I be watched?" Well, your employer is probably thinking of promoting you; he may be thinking of taking in a silent partner, and is watching you to find out just how much interest you have in the business.

A retail clerk is the same as any other man; he has something to sell, and that is his time. When a man buys that time the clerk should deliver the goods. Now, you might say, "Well, many a night I have worked after hours." True! show me a successful man in this world who has not worked many a night after hours! I have done so thousands of times. You must have the temperament and the disposition to be willing to give what you can—but don't take back something to offset it. That is not the way to succeed.

STORY OF AN ORDER SENT TO CATALOGUE HOUSE

By Theo. Legault.

I read with interest in a recent issue of The Canadian Grocer the article "Why Farmers should Trade at Home," by M. Moyer. Of all the relative questions which concern us, this one, I believe is of the most immediate and vital importance. If there are any leaks, defects or discrepancies through which the local retail merchant suffers, Mr. Moyer certainly has hit them on the head. The citizens and farmers of this district have acquired the habit and now they spend the best part of their cash on mail orders.

This habit is so strangely contagious that it even prevailed for supremacy of patronage in a lodge where it was arranged that a gift should be presented to a retiring officer. One member scrupulous about the expenditure of the court funds, suggested that they purchase a certain toilet and manicure set of pure French ebony binding, in a beautiful calf case, lined and trimmed with mauve German silk, etc., etc., all for $23.90 at a Toronto mail order house. It also occurred that a well stocked fancy goods merchant had something of that description. He invited them to have a look at it, as he claimed it to be the same article.

Not much! These men could not believe nor did they want to be convinced that this $12 case could compare with the catalogue article.

They sent the cash to Toronto to get it. When it arrived, they examined it closely and found it to be in every respect identically the same as the set the local merchant had offered—and a man who helps every society, keeps the town together and spends all his money to give it appearance and comfort.

This lodge had actually paid 100 per cent. more by sending their cash away from home.

Mr. Moyer suggests an educational campaign to assist the merchants to contest this business. His plan apparently would be of mutual benefit to both dealer and consumer. I am satisfied that he is in earnest, as the cause has the sympathy of all dealers. Could we not hear more from him in this direction, and would it not be a good idea to have him explain his plans exactly.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Secured the Contractor's Trade.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Feb. 9.—"I believe that the way in which to get the best results from employes is by taking them into your confidence," said a local retailer recently. "I always talk over new ideas which I may have in use to improve business with my clerks and get their opinions. They have often valuable suggestions which they give me and which I would never hear of if I were not on intimate terms with them. I even discuss business propositions with the delivery boys and find it brings good results.

"Last summer following a talk which I had with one of the delivery boys in whom I had worked up considerable enthusiasm for the business, he came to me and told me about a contractor who was starting on some work and who was going to board the men himself; and that if I would see him that probaly he would allow us to supply the groceries.

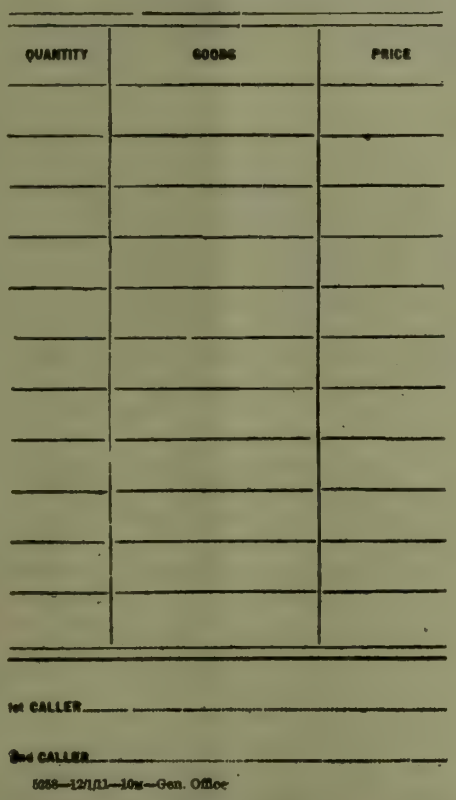
"I at once called on the contractor and secured his grocery order. If that boy had not become interested in the business by my talk with him, I would probably never have secured that extra business."

Clerks Develop Their Salesmanship.

Victoria, B.Cf, Feb. 9.—In referring to a method he uses for increasing sales a Victoria dealer says: "I find that by stirring up some friendly rivalry among the clerks in regard to sales is a good way to help business. When I get in a new line of goods, I place a display at each counter and then offer a small prize for the clerk who sells the largest quantity during the first week. Sometimes on a new line, I allow each clerk one day at a time to push that particular line and they generally work hard to see who can sell the most during his day.

"Then again I adopt a different plan and offer a prize to the clerk who sells the most goods during the week and at other times the prize will be offered to the clerk who shows the largest increase over the previous week. I find that in these competitions, the clerks work hard to make a good showing and besides the benefit I receive, it helps them also, as they are continually developing their salesmanship abilities."

Features Coffee Quality.



Edmonton, Alta., Feb. 9.—An Edmonton dealer says that by giving special attention to coffee that he has done much to keep his trade together. He believes that he has many customers who deal with him for no other reason than because he features an excellent brand of coffee. Therefore he makes it a rule to sell coffee to every customer whenever possible as he considers this a good way to secure all her grocery trade.

He claims he does not attract customers because of the price but on account of the high quality and uniformity of this line. He does not spend his time in looking for bargains but is willing to pay a little more and get the high quality goods, and he finds that his best customers are willing to pay a little more for a superior brand of coffee.

System of Stock Taking.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—The accompanying cut serves to illustrate how the T. Eaton Co. take stock. An ordinary piece of cardboard 6x3 inches in dimensions is used, ruled and worded like the illustration. These cards are tacked to the counters or shelves in the various departments and filled in by the clerks who conduct the stock-taking operations, the goods, quantity and selling price being given.

When one card has been filled a new one is used until this work has been completed. When finished the goods are called off by one clerk into a large specially-ruled stock book, the name of that clerk being written on the ruled line on the card designated by the words "first caller." In order to make the posting absolutely correct another clerk known as "second caller" reads off the same cards to a bookkeeper, who looks after a similar stock book. When everything has been concluded the totals of the two stock books are compared so as to prevent errors.

This company takes stock twice every year.

A Corn Product Window.

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 9.—Coincident with the holding of the Ontario Corn Exhibition in Chatham, corn played a prominent part in the window displays of the various merchants, practically every display during the week of the Exhibition including ear corn in honor of the visitors.

H. Malcolmson's grocery went into the matter more thoroughly by making up a corn products window, the aim being to include in the articles displayed everything produced from corn, and no other product.

The background of the window was made up of an arch of empty boxes, so piled as to make a series of steps on each side. The boxes were draped with white cheese cloth, with the legend embroidered in blue "Corn is King." Below this, on both sides of the archway as well as over the entrance, ears of field corn were arranged in a semicircle, the ears being fastened to the front of the arch, forming a sort of facade. On the summit of the arch, and on each of the steps—there were three steps on each side—were neatly arranged various corn products in packages.

Behind the entrance to the arch were piled packages of breakfast food made from corn. Immediately in front were two boxes of young corn plants, just sprouted, the one containing 25 sprouts from 25 seeds, and the other 48 sprouts from 50 seeds—an indication of the excellence of the seed corn. In the foreground of the window were two tall glass jars, one containing starch in bulk and the other corn syrup.

The floor of the window was covered with white cheese cloth, ears of sweet corn being neatly arranged over it, with the explanatory legend, "Grown by J. G. Lang of Chatham township, for the ——— Canning Company, four tons of sweet corn to the acre," appearing on a large display card. Other corn products neatly arranged at various vantage points were ears of field corn, pop corn, canned corn, corn starch of various brands, and corn syrup in cans. A feature was the display of pop corn, the centre being a colored pop-corn ball, outside this an area of white pop corn, loose, and outside this again a circle of ears of popcorn.

The display, besides being appropriate and attractive, was quite an education in the value of corn products. It was designed and put together by Messrs. Collins and Kime, of the Malcolmson staff.

Talks With Monthly Accounts.

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—Ellis Bros., corner Somerset Street and Bronson Avenue, continue to issue cards and small circulars to be sent out with monthly accounts.

At the beginning of the year an attractive card was sent to all his customers thanking them for their patronage in 1910, etc. This was 6x3¼ inches in dimensions with a gold border around the wording of the card which was in purple ink. It read :

CARD OF APPRECIATION.

We desire to express to our many patrons our thanks for their esteemed patronage in the past, and also to assure them how much we appreciate the confidence they have in our store and system.

As we enter upon another year's business, we look forward to the pleasure of an increased trade and will promise all our present customers a greater interest in their business than heretofore. Our aim is to please. If anything has not been satisfactory, kindly give us an opportunity to make it right.

With best wishes for a Prosperous and Happy New Year.

We are,
Your obedient servants,
ELLIS BROS.

At the beginning of February a small circular was sent with the monthly accounts advertising marmalade and California oranges and coffee. In reference to the former, customers are urged to buy in February. Californias are offered both by the dozen and case and it is further explained that they are are now at their best. The talk on coffee is as follows:— "We certainly have the finest blend of Coffee one could wish for; it has a rich flavor and is good and strong. Delivered to you freshly ground in air-tight lead bags at 39 cents a pound. We want you to try it."

Such cards and talks as the above are sure to have good results as it is practically assured that they will be read. Money in stationery and stamps is also saved when this literature is sent with monthly accounts.

Merchant Seeks Aid of Ry. Commission

Central Ontario Dealer Complains That New Canadian General Electric Siding Will Injure His Business—He Wants Litigation to Prevent Siding Crossing the Street or Else That He be Compensated for the Injury Done to Him — Smoke will Spoil Goods Displayed He Says and Engines will Frighten Horses.

Peterborough, Ont., Feb. 9.—R. C. Braund, a local grocer, is not going to allow the Canadian General Electric Company to place a siding across Park St. without his opposition to the idea having been fully considered by the Railway Commission and the municipal council of Peterborough.

Mr. Braund has built up a large suburban general store establishment. His place of business, which is located at the corner of Park and Albert Streets has been enlarged from time to time, until to-day it constitutes a good sized modern departmental store. The Canadian General Electric Company's factories are located on Park Street, some little distance above Mr. Braund's store. This company recently purchased a quantity of land in the vicinity and are erecting large extensions to their plant. They have applied to the city council for permission to run two sidings from the C.P.R. tracks across Park St. These two sidings will then run parallel to Albert St. on the company's property, of course, straight across the street from Mr. Braund's place of business.

Asks for Damages.

Mr. Braund naturally objects to these sidings, unless he receives due compensation for the damage he alleges will occur to his business. When the matter came up before the city council, he and his solicitor stated their objections and the matter has not as yet been finally disposed of.

Mr. Braund claims that the proposition is the height of injustice. He points out that these two sidings immediately across the street from his store, on which shunting engines will work for the greater part of the day, will result in loss of trade to him. The engines, he claims, will belch forth smoke that will destroy his goods displayed outside: that no horses can stand in front of his store without becoming frightened, and that general depreciation of his property will follow. He demands compensation from the Canadian General Electric Company and states that he is perfectly willing to leave the matter to the decision of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada.

The point he takes is, that the siding in question cannot be put across Park Street without the permission of the city council, or the Board of Railway Commisioners, and that neither of these bodies should grant this permission, when it is apparent that it is bound to damage his property and business, unless he is duly compensated.

The Question at Issue.

The case is a peculiar one and the outcome will be awaited with interest. There is no doubt that the Canadian General has a perfect right to have as many tracks as it sees fit on its own property, even if these tracks are immediately opposite Mr. Braund's store, and even if they do prove injurious to Mr. Braund's business. But the fact remains that these tracks cannot be laid on the Canadian General Electric Company's own property without crossing Park street. Therefore, should the city council, or the Railway Commission grant permission for the laying of the tracks in question across Park Street, when it appears perfectly certain that Mr. Braund's business will suffer thereby?

London Grocers Have Merry War In Price Cutting

London, Ont., Feb. 9—What was probably the only price-cutting war among London retailers over sugar took place here prior to the last decline. One of the grocers advertised a ten-days sale of sugar. Increasing his newspaper advertising somewhat, he quoted standard granulated sugar at $4.64 per sack, or 20 pounds for $1, pointing out to the public that "the wholesale price of granulated sugar is lower now than it has been in the past three years, and we want you to get the benefit."

However, the lead was followed by a number of other grocers about the city, who promptly advertised by newspaper and window cards that they were selling 22 pounds. Then the former quoted best granulated by the sack, $4.50 and 22 pounds for $1, adding "To those who bought at our stores at the prices quoted in Wednesday's paper we will allow the difference." The advertisement was headed "Who put the Price of Sugar Down?" Followed by the argument that "the grocer who did ought to be patronized."

A number of other London grocers then held a telephone consultation and decided to go one better, so on Saturday sugar was selling all over the city, including the first price reducer at 23 pounds for the $1 and $4.45 per cwt. A half dollar bought 11 pounds. Laid down in London, it cost $4.44, so the profit was not large, and it will be noticed that by-the-dollar rate was lower still, which meant selling at a loss.

The result was that all grocers, sold a lot of sugar but last week things got back more to normal when the first man to reduce prices let up. Other dealers say they were prepared to get even, even if the process was an expensive one.

An Ontario City Council Getting After Peddlers

St. Thomas, Ont., Feb. 9.—A committee of the city council has been named to formulate a measure that will provide for an adequate charge to be made for licenses for transient traders, and outside and local peddlers. The committee is to suggest a by-law that will meet the needs of the case, as well as the views of the police magistrate.

Ald. Chant, on behalf of protesting merchants, pointed out at the meeting that the legitimate trade is being handicapped by permitting pedlers to get rid of a cheap class of goods without any icapped by permitting peddlers to get rid time ago, but was finally declared "no good" because of the prohibitive fees imposed. With the present nominal fee of $25 to transient merchants, he pointed out, they could do business without doing much to reinburse the city.

DEVELOPING INTO SALESMEN.

A story comes from British Columbia telling of the commendable method used by a dealer to develop salesmanship among his clerks.

He establishes friendly selling competitions, offering some small prize to the clerk who wins. These contests are usually put on to introduce new lines of goods in which the dealer has become interested and at the same time they are advantageous to the clerk who is desirous of developing into a real salesman.

Clerks should realize that their entire future in the retail business practically depends on their abilities to sell goods and they should snatch at every opportunity given them to increase sales. They ought to study the theory of salesmanship, as well as to become students of character, for on this depends much of their success.

The writer was, not long ago, in conversation with a traveling salesman, who had evolved from a grocery clerk, who made it a point to study phrenology. He had a whole library of books on the subject and he was still a student; as might be presumed he was a man who was much in demand as a salesman and therefore commanded a good salary.

To become a salesman, should be every clerk's ambition and to do this he must take advantage of every possible chance of developing his ability to sell.

WHY FISH SHOULD BE SOLD.

Because fish is a food the average Canadian grocer should be interested in it. He may not understand that up to the present, the fish business has been carried on largely in a haphazard manner.

Advanced systematic methods have been witnessed only within the last year or two. But the feeling is one of optimism. One of the signs of the times is the fact that the importation of United States fish is rapidly declining. Canada has practically inexhaustible supplies and the cost of the long haul from the coast is lightened by the government's action in paying one-third of the express charges.

Because of the fact that various interests are at work to expand the fish industry, the retail grocer should acquaint himself with the situation. Home consumption is increasing but there is room for still greater growth. If this is accomplished the retail grocer should be one of the sharers in the new business. He is in closest touch with the consuming public and should satisfy himself as to whether he feels that in his community there is an opportunity to build up a good trade in fish especially at particular seasons of the year.

EARLY CLOSING RESCINDED.

The early closing by-law has been rescinded in Belleville, Ont. This is to be regretted because it is a step in the wrong direction.

Last year a by-law was passed there compelling grocers to close at 7.30, Saturdays excepted. One or two grocers and fruit dealers refused to do so and a police court case followed with the result that the minority won out on the plea that they were fruiterers and not grocers. This caused the grocers as a whole to ask for the old method and the city council has answered the request by erasing the law from the municipal statutes. Now there is no limit to open hours.

This is to be regretted because in other towns and cities the early closing system has been working satisfactorily. Retail dealers have been frank in their assertions that where such a method has been adhered to there has been no loss in business. On the other hand they maintain in the majority of cases that what they save in light, fuel, recreation, worry, etc., more than balances any profit they were ever accustomed to make when they kept open until a late hour.

Retailers want some time to themselves; they must not be cooped up in their stores from seven in the morning until eleven at night if they care anything about their health. None but a strong man can do that and if he continues for any length of time he will eventually experience the reaction.

Looking at it in a purely business light, in nine cases out of ten the grocer, according to stated experiences, loses money through late closing. Light and fuel costs him something; his clerks and delivery men lose enthusiasm in a business at which they are compelled to spend all of their waking hours; the grocer does not do justice to them nor to himself in late closing, and the lack of independence on the part of the dealer is not appreciated by the better class of trade.

MUST OPERATE CLEAN STORES.

The Washington, D.C., health authorities are looking sharp after grocers and butchers who keep their stores in untidy and unsanitary conditions. They recently fined a grocer for allowing dust to accumulate on his windows, for having a dirty floor and a cellar full of debris.

It will thus be seen that the day of the dirty store is gradually waning and it is a pretty safe prediction that at the end of another half century, it will be as difficult to find an unsanitary store as a needle in a haystack.

Live Canadian merchants already see the trend of public opinion in this regard and they are now more than fulfilling the requirements of the most fastidious persons.

Let all realize what is or what soon will be required of them and meet these requirements more than half way.

LEAVE A COPY OF THE ORDER.

As pointed out in a letter from a Pickering grocery firm, travelers should never neglect to leave copies of orders taken while out on the road. The traveler owes it to his customers to do so just as a retail dealer does to those who purchase on credit from him.

There are no doubt many dealers who never ask for copies of the orders they give and possibly the traveler may claim that it is not his place to give duplicates. But in this he is in error. The traveler who desires to have permanent customers must treat them all fairly, openly and above-board. He must not let the idea get abroad that he is in any way trying to get the better of any customer, for as certain as he does, he eventually will lose that customer whether he was right or wrong.

By giving a duplicate of an order therefore, the traveler is not only assisting the merchant to take a greater interest in his business but is gaining the confidence of the merchant.

HINTS FOR GROCERS.

Look out for the man in the overalls; he may have a five dollar bill in his pocket which he will spend in less time than it takes her ladyship to purchase a pound of prunes.

Merchants should pay particular attention to the heating of the store during the winter months. Customers, especially those who drive in from the country, like to have a place where they may warm themselves on their arrival and before leaving on the return journey.

Country Retail Merchants Issue Catalogue

They Began to Do This in 1910 and Business Last Year Increased $8,000—Advertise That They Can Meet or Beat Any Mail-Order Price—An Editorial Conversation About Advance in Prices, Etc.

Richmond, Ont., Feb. 2.—The 1910 business of Lewis Bros., Richmond, exceeded that of 1909 by $8,000.

Their turnover last year was $37,000 and they operate a general store business.

They attribute a big share of the increase in trade to a four-sheet catalogue called the "Up-to-Date Store News" the front page of which is reproduced here. The original size of the catalogue is about 14 x 11 inches in dimensions and it is issued, as will be observed from the introduction, occasionally.

About 1,000 of these catalogues are issued every month at a cost of about $18 per month, which with the addition of stamps for mailing bring the entire cost to about $28. The prices quoted, unless otherwise stated hold good during the month.

One criticism that might be made of the catalogue is that the various departments are possibly broken up a little too much. Had, for instance, all grocery news been on one page, hardware on another, etc., the reader would not have had to look in various parts of the paper for all the news about groceries, hardware, etc.

Meet Mail Order Prices.

The editorial introducing the goods and their prices is run in a conversational style which should secure the attention of the prospective buyer. It reads in part as follows:

"We desire to apologize to the many customers who were obliged to go away without being waited on, on some of our busy days this month. We expected to have had some extra help for Thursdays and Saturdays but were disappointed. Under the circumstances, we did the best we could and trust our customers will pardon any inconvenience they were put to.

"Since the last issue of our little paper prices on many lines of goods have advanced very materially. There have been stiff advances on flour, feed, rolled oats, rolled wheat, tapioca, sago, rice, raisins, currants and canned goods. With the exception of flour and feed, we are trying to keep to our old prices as much as possible, as in some of the lines mentioned, we had anticipated advances and had stocked up accordingly. On some of the other lines, we are obliged to make small advances. But our prices will still be lower than present value. You will find our prices, even on the lines we have had to advance, as low as the lowest. This little paper is published to give you a chance to compare our prices with others.

"We stand ready at any time to meet or beat the prices of any city or mail-order house on the same quality of goods, on anything we have to sell. All we ask is that you compare our prices with others before purchasing. They speak for themselves, etc."

Editorial

We desire to apologize to the many customers who were obliged to go away without being waited on on some of our busy days this month. We expected to have had some extra help for Thursdays and Saturdays, but were disappointed. Under the circumstances, we did the best we could and trust our customers will pardon any inconvenience they were put to. Since the last issue of our little paper prices our many lines of goods have advanced very materially. There have been stiff advances on flour, feed, rolled oats, rolled wheat, tapioca, sago, rice, raisins, currants and canned goods. With the exception of flour and feed, we are trying to keep to our old prices as much as possible, as in some of the lines mentioned, we had anticipated advances and had stocked up accordingly. On some of the other lines, we are obliged to make small advances. But our prices will still be lower than present value. You will find our prices, even on the lines, we have had to advance, as low as the lowest. This little paper is published to give you a chance to compare our prices with others. We stand ready at any time to meet or beat the prices of any city or mail-order house on the same quality of goods, on anything we have to sell. All we ask is that you compare our prices with others before purchasing. They speak for themselves. As, heretofore, our Thursday Bargain Sales will continue to be a strong feature. In another part of the paper you will find the special Thursday prices quoted for five weeks. Nearly every Thursday, we have extra bargains to offer that are not published. These consist of different lines of goods that we pick up at special prices. In every case, we give our customers the beneht of these low prices. If you do not receive this paper regularly kindly advise us and we will make inquiries, and see that you get it. If you have a friend that you would like us to send it to we will do so if you furnish us name and address.

Flour and Feed

As we forewarned our customers in our last price list there has been a stiff advance on all lines of flour and feed. We expect still further advances. We expect a car of flour and feed on us a few days, probably before this paper reaches you. We quote to-day's prices below on flour and feed, but cannot guarantee them. We are obliged to follow the market promptly, up or down

When the bread or cake or pastry comes from the oven light, crisp and appetising, you are wont to say you have had good luck with your baking.

The "good luck" idea is a relic of the time when housekeepers pitted their competency against poor flour.

To day good baking isn't a matter of good luck in any home where [illegible] is inteligently used.

In the hands of competent housewives it never fails because it is the whitest, lightest, purest and best baking flour to be had.

If the goodness of your baking is due to chance, your grocer is giving you the wrong kind of flour. Ask for [illegible] Flour Mills Co., Ltd. Montreal.

TIME LIMIT ON STORAGE GOODS.

Bill Introduced for this Purpose—Opposed on Grounds that it is not Practical.

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—E. N. Lewis, M.P., for West Huron, Ont., has introduced a bill into the House of Commons amending the Cold Storage Act. The principal clauses he inserts are:

That from and after the passing of this Act it shall be unlawful in Canada to keep in storage in any warehouse or other place of deposit for a longer period than one year any meat, fish, poultry, game, butter eggs, oysters or other food products intended for sale or distribution.

That whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Dominion Medical Health Officer or food inspector that any meat, fish, poultry, game, butter, eggs, oysters or other food products kept in storage for a period under one year, may not be sold or distributed without prejudice to the public health, the said Medical Health Officer or Food Inspector shall cause such products to be seized and destroyed.

Mr. Lewis considered that the need of a law of this character was realized by the recent receipt in Montreal of $100,000 canned eggs from China.

The above proposed changes were criticized by Mr. Chisholm, M.P. on the grounds that the question at issue was not so much the length of time goods were left in cold storage, as the regularity or otherwise of the temperature of the cold storage in which they were kept. The bill went to committee.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—Although trade last week was fairly good, so far this week business has been slack, due no doubt to the heavy snow storm which swept Ontario on Monday and which affected trade throughout the country. Many of the travelers did not start out on Monday owing to the bad weather, so that they were one day late in getting their orders in.

No change has taken place in sugar during the past week and as one dealer said, a man would be foolish to predict any further decline in sugar and he would be equally as foolish to say that sugar had reached the bottom. There is no doubt that trade in sugar would be greatly stimulated if it were certain that sugar had reached its lowest level. The visible supply at the present is 3,846,070 tons against 3,321,813 tons last year or an increase of 524,257 tons.

Dealers believe that higher prices will be seen in beans as good quality beans are scarce. Evaporated apples are also firm at present prices as stocks are not plentiful.

The trade in dried fruits has been brisk lately, due, no doubt, to the fact that the housewife's supply of canned fruit is growing small, and also because retailers, realizing that supplies are short are getting in a stock. Chief among the good sellers in dried fruits is prunes, while peaches also have a good sale.

An advance of three shillings has taken place in tapioca in the primary market with the result that prices here are firmer.

The firmness still continues in the several lines of canned goods but no advances have been made except in gallon rhubarb which is now quoted at $3.50 to $3.60 per dozen.

Sugar.—There has been no changes in sugar prices during the past week and dealers do not feel like expressing any definite opinion as to what the next change will be or when it will take place, realizing that the market just now is in a critical condition. There are some dealers who are looking for a further slight decline but in the face of this, the raw market has taken on a firmer appearance. Sales of raws in New York are reported at a higher price while European beet sugar markets continue to strengthen with quotations for beets 9s 3d per cwt. f.o.b. Hamburg, which is equivalent to 3.93 duty paid New York as against the duty paid value of 3.45 for 96 degree test Cuba centrifugals, or a difference of 48 cents per 100 lbs. Cuban raws are arriving slowly and to the first of February were nearly 200,000 tons short and the crop will likely be shorter than anticipated. Local demand is only moderate, dealers being uncertain as to whether bottom prices have yet been reached.

Syrups and Molasses.—Trade in molasses as can be expected at this time is not very brisk. Barbadoes is reported firmer at primary points, overcoming the easiness which has existed in the market. The trade in syrups still keeps up to a satisfactory point.

Dried Fruits.—The same scarcity and high prices which have existed in all lines of dried fruits for some time still prevails. The demand for these lines is keeping up exceedingly well under the high prices, although it is generally believed that this will be a "lean" year in dried fruits as besides the high prices, stocks are short. "This year," said a local wholesaler, "demonstrates that prunes have a trade of their own and that people will buy a certain amount without regard to price. The demand for prunes has been very brisk, although prices are high, and stocks are getting pretty low." Retailers have little choice in regard to sizes of prunes because stocks are so small that they have to take what is offered. Cooking figs are having a good trade at the present because they are about the cheapest dried fruit available. A better trade is also noticeable in both dried apricots and peaches. Advices from Greece state that the stock of currants undisposed of is considered to be hardly sufficient to last to the end of the season. The French markets are continually buying at going prices and holders do not seem anxious to sell, expecting that a further advance may take place.

Tea.—Because of the expansion of the world's consumption of British grown teas which has been continuous and with no further material increase in production, the past twelve-month has produced higher averages than we have had for some years. The demand for these teas from Russia and United States has increased tremendously and there will need to be a big increase in production in order to supply the demand. The increased demand has already had effect of raising prices, and if it had not been for the increased output from India of about 18,000,000 pounds, the position now would be even more serious, as the Ceylon crop for the twelve months showed a deficiency of 9,000,000 pounds. This falling off in the crop from Ceylon has been due, in a large degree, to climatic influences, but the inter-planting of rubber trees on many of the tea gardens has undoubtedly been responsible to some extent, and as the trees grow, it is practically certain to be detrimental to the tea shrub.

Coffee.—A strong feature of the coffee situation is that according to reliable estimates the balance of this crop is only 300,000 bags Santos and about 400,000 bags Rio. The quantities of coffee now afloat are small. If consuming markets do not buy in Santos more liberally during this and next month, the greater will be the needs of trade for the government coffee to be sold in April. With supplies at both producing and consuming points so scarce, gives strong reasons for not only the maintenance of present values but perhaps even higher prices before the new crop arrives. The estimates of the experts for the growing crop are gradually growing smaller. First estimates of the next Santos crop was 11,500,000 bags, but at the present 10 millions have been named and there are others who state that 9,000,000 bags would be a nearer estimate. Prices locally remain the same, with a fair amount of trade being done.

Rice and Tapioca.—The trade in rice and tapioca continues in the usual manner. Although prices of sago and tapioca have advanced slightly in some other markets, there has been no change here, although a firmness is noted. The trade in these lines is so small that dealers do not seem to be devoting much attention to them. Primary markets report tapiocas as slowly advancing and the prediction made that prices are likely to go higher.

Beans.—There is a noted firmness in beans on the local market and dealers are looking for higher prices. Especially is this true in the high quality grades. There are some who believe that there are plenty of beans in the hands of the farmer but at any rate there were a good many poor quality beans from last crop due to being picked too soon and poor beans are bad sellers. Prices remain the same as yet.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—The demand for canned vegetables is good. The trade in canned fruits is also satisfactory. Prices are steady and firm. In canned fish the chief activity centres in canned salmon which is quoted at steady prices. Other lines are quiet. Canned meats are in good demand. There have been no particular price changes of late. The market is rather featureless outside of a steady demand and strong prices.

TORONTO.—Canned goods has lost some of their prominence of a few weeks ago, as both wholesalers and retailers seem to be dropping the matter, at least for a time. However, prices show no recession from their high level, and the firmness will likely still continue. If prices in some lines go any higher, retailers will have a difficult time in selling at a profit. For instance, early June peas, size 2, are quoted at $1.50 per dozen. Salmon is in fair demand just now at ruling prices. Gallon rhubarb is scarce and prices have been advanced to $3.50 and $3.60 per dozen.

WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg.—An excellent demand has been in existence for all lines of canned goods during the last two weeks. Country merchants with few exceptions did not load up with heavy stocks, and owing to severe weather have almost been cleaned out and are busy purchasing now. Another cause for this delayed buying is the fact that high prices were ruling at the opening of the season. Although all stocks held here are pretty heavy it is the opinion of the wholesalers that they will not hold out, and that next spring will find practically a bare market for some lines, viz., peas, cherries and some lines of berries. Stocks of blueberries are exhausted and cannot be replenished before new goods are packed, which will be next fall. Tomatoes have advanced to $3.15 per case and are likely to go higher. With the lowering of the stocks general higher prices can be expected.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Tapioca—Primary market firm.
Sugar—Doubtful.
Molasses—Firmer.

Montreal, Feb. 9.—Trade is moving along satisfactorily. Demand is well extended over general lines and business is apparently on a solid basis. Dried fruits are moving fairly well but there is room for improvement. Currants are rather quiet and the demand for table raisins is lighter than was expected. Last year at this time table raisins continued after the holiday trade to amount to something beyond the average. This condition is not noticeable just now.

Orders are coming now that suggest a preparation for the new year after stock-taking and an examination of goods on hand. Tapioca is firm in the primary market as is also molasses. Sugar is in doubt. Canned goods are still bringing high prices and in the lines in greatest demand there are no signs of lighter business.

Sugar.—The sugar market is reported fairly firm at the last reduction. It is admitted that there is the possibility of lower prices if sellers force them. However, it is thought that the market has traveled about far enough. In addition the winter will soon be terminated and heavy demands should again begin to be felt. Just what will happen in the meantime is difficult to tell but the tendency is to look forward to signs of higher prices.

Spices.—Firmness in several lines of spices continues. The demand is normal and nothing of a feature can be said to prevail at this time.

Nuts.—Nuts are in good demand with prices holding at a high level. There has been no depreciation in quotations since prior to the Christmas season. That is there has been no decline of appreciable extent. Owing to the short crop year and the meagre holdings reported the market continues to maintain its position.

Rice and Tapioca.—The primary markets in tapioca have been firm and top prices have been paid. It is thought by some that the prices recently paid are as high as any reported during the last twelve months. America has been buying and prices are expected to be maintained. The wholesale trade is fairly good. Rice is steady.

Peas and Beans.—There is not much change in the pea market. Offerings are fairly liberal. The situation in beans is not quite so clear. Brokers quoting to western dealers have advanced their prices slightly but have had no replies to their offerings. One stated that he was not sure just what the situation was but he was inclined to believe that the present silence may be traceable to the reciprocity proposals.

Winnipeg, Feb. 10.—Trade during the last week has been hampered considerably, owing to the severe snowstorm prevailing over the entire west. Passenger trains have been running irregularly, while on many of the branch lines in the northwestern sections of the country, no freight trains have been running at all. Notwithstanding these drawbacks trade has been good, and wholesalers predict a rush of business as soon as the elements become settled again.

In reviewing the trade for the month of January, wholesalers are of the unanimous opinion that more business was conducted than for many a long year in this month. One large house stated it was a record January for them. In spite of the intense cold and severe storms, which not only delayed freight shipments, but tied up travelers for days at a time in various towns, orders have been satisfactory and the demand has been good for all lines. Farmers have experienced a great deal of hardship by not being able to get to town regularly, which has resulted in their buying larger quantities at one time than they were in the habit of doing; and in view of the fact that the second severe storm for the month has not completely abated yet, it would seem that they acted on the right principle.

The largest demand has been for syrup which was brought about by the high prices prevailing for all classes of dried and foreign fruits. Collections have been fair and fewer failures have been recorded than usual, as payments have been met pretty regularly all winter.

Sugar.—This market is still so weak that even lower prices are looked for. Last week's decline has had a tendency to increase sales as merchants have been keeping in close touch with conditions and were holding off, but are now starting to purchase in fair quantities as this makes a total decline of 20 cents per barrel since Jan. 20. Stocks in the city are of considerable size so that all orders can be easily handled.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—The recent advances in raisins and prunes are still maintained, and no new prices are reported. The demand for prunes during the last month has not been as heavy as in former years, owing to the high prices which have been prevailing. Stocks are only of medium size at present, and the outlook, if anything, would indicate higher prices. Mediterranean dried fruits are holding firm at their high figures also. Currants are high, without any likelihood at present of a decline, while figs are firm and an advance would not be unlikely.

Syrup and Molasses.—A strong demand has been in existence for both commodities, but more especially for syrup. No changes have taken place in prices, but a good steady trade is expected to continue throughout the winter. These articles are being consumed in place of evaporated apples and other dried fruits on account of the scarcity and high prices existing in these lines.

Beans and Peas.—The demand for beans still continues to increase, which has resulted in an advance of 5 cents per bushel during the week. Large quantities are being shipped now to logging and railroad construction camps. Stocks however, are of good size, and there is little danger of them being exhausted. Split peas and pearl barley are also in good demand, and prices are becoming firmer. Split peas are now quoted at $2.85 per 100 lbs., barley at $2.50, and pearl barley at $3.50.

Green Coffee.—No change has taken place in prices since last week, although market still continues to soar. The rapid advance during the last month is attributed to the fact that the demand was greater than the supply, and to manipulation of market by Brazilian dealers. The prevailing opinion is that there is little likelihood of lower prices until new crop is reaped.

Vancouver.—Never has halibut been so scarce as it is this season. One vessel got in last week with 40,000 pounds after being out 26 days, the longest trip on record. It is reckoned by the fish companies that it costs them all the way from 15 cents to 30 cents a pound to get halibut and that the boats just now are operated at a loss. The local price is seven cents. The demand for other kinds of fish is greater than the supply. No salmon is coming in at all now. The weather has been very bad, which accounts for the small catch of fish. Fish men here will not discuss the tariff agreement, saying that if it is ratified it will revolutionize the business. After decision is passed, they will be ready to talk.

Vancouver, Feb. 9.—The supply of goods has been augmented for the first time by importations from Japan. The imported article is of good quality, better than the local, and can be brought in at a slightly lower price. Local potatoes now are being bought by the wholesalers at $28 a ton and being sold for $32. No Ashcrofts are on the market, The outlook is that there will be enough to see the season through, without any big increase in the price.

There is a reduction in Eastern butter, the quotation this week being 29 cents to 30 cents. There is no Australian butter on the market this week, but New Zealand brings from 30 to 32 cents. Local butter varies, as the supply is not as large as the demand, and some weeks more is coming in. This week the quotation is 35 cents.

Getting Ready for Convention in Classic City

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 9.—Preparations are well under way for the 13th annual meeting of The Ontario Provincial Retail Merchants' Association, to be held here on Tuesday, Feb. 28, and Wednesday and Thursday, March 1 and 2. A representative of the city went to Toronto this week to make arrangements for the programme with the head office of the association.

As many important trade questions are to be thoroughly discussed the association is anxious to have as many merchants present as possible. The dates above were chosen for the reason that June, the time of last year's convention, is considered to be an unusually busy time on account of so much fruit arriving on the market.

In addition to the convention sessions there will be a conference between the Guelph merchants and their customers on Wednesday morning, March 1, to talk over the mail order question, and its evil effects on home development. This will be an innovation so far as R. M. A. conventions are concerned and it will undoubtedly prove interesting.

Royal Commission for Investigation

Montreal Produce Merchants' Association View the Tariff Negotiations With the U.S. With Some Alarm—Hold Special Meeting to Go Into the Question and Pass Resolution Embodying Their Opinions.

Montreal, Feb. 7.—The Montreal Produce Merchants' Association at a special meeting held last week passed a resolution favoring a royal commission making investigation into the proposed new tariff arrangements with the United States. Their resolution was:

"Whereas, the prosperity of Canada largely depends on the prosperity of the agricultural population.

"Whereas, the prosposed reciprocal agreement with the United States removes all protection from the farmer by opening the Canadian markets, not only to the United States, but to most of the countries of the world producing farm produce in surplus quantities, while the protection is maintained on all articles that the farmer requires to buy.

"Whereas, while it is true that for several years past the value of farm products generally in the United States has ruled higher than similar goods in Canada, yet under the stimulus of these high prices an over production has now taken place there, and to-day a surplus actually exists in many lines, and prices have declined to a lower basis than that which now prevails in Canada; this statement applying especially to the large items of hog products, butter, cheese and eggs, with the result that to-day enormous losses are being sustained by American dealers and they are offering to import them into this country.

"Whereas, it is claimed by advocates of reciprocity in the United States that it will reduce prices of all farm produce and thereby cheapen the cost of living, it necessarily follows that they anticipate lower prices to rule in the future, and it is altogether improbable that the opening of the United States markets to Canadian produce will result in Canadian farmers realizing higher prices than under present conditions.

"Whereas, the proposed arrangement will also admit the produce of many other countries free, values in Canada will necessarily be brought down to the level of the country offering farm produce the cheapest.

"Whereas, statistics published in the United States prove that the per acre production there is only about one-half that of the most advanced European countries, and as in the United States more attention than ever before in the history of that country is being given to intensive and scientific methods of agriculture, it is most probable that the United States will go on increasing its production of farm produce and continue to have a surplus; therefore, to allow their produce free entry into Canada, together with farmers to accept lower prices for their hogs, butter, cheese, eggs, poultry and other produce that they now obtain in the Canadian market under existing conditions.

"Whereas, Canadian farmers have never been as prosperous in the history of the country as they have been, and are to-day under existing conditions, realizing higher prices than most producing countries of the world.

"Whereas, in order to weld the provinces together and also to strengthen the bond of union between the Mother Country and Canada, it is necessary to foster the policy which would most conduce to that end for which our railways and carriers were built, namely to carry trade east and west, while the proposed agreement will result in trade being diverted north and south, thereby endangering our political autonomy and possibly our union with Great Britain.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the members of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association, view with grave apprehension the proposed reciprocal agreement, and we would respectfully urge that the Government appoint a royal commission to take the evidence of farmers, producers and dealers and those interested generally, in order to ascertain their views and to learn to what extent they will be affected before consummating the proposed agreement."

SYNOPSIS OF CO-OPERATIVE BILL

Retail Merchants Sending It Out in Pamphlet Form.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada is sending out through its secretary, E. M. Trowern, a synopsis of the association's objections to the passing of the Co-operative Bills now before the House of Commons.

The principal clauses of this synopsis, which will reach every member of parliament, read as follows:

"There is to be no proper Government inspection.

"No guarantee or money deposits are to be placed with the Government.

"Any inexperienced man can manage them. Seven men with one dollar each, or with seven ($7.00) dollars capital, can start agents out on commission to knock at the door of the householders anywhere in Canada, and canvass the working men in the workshops, and secure their hard-earned earnings, by inducing and offering them large rates of interest, and stating that these societies are to be theirs. They are to own them, they will be able to control them, and so forth, and in this way endeavor to show the superiority of these 'speculative visions" over the old established, well managed Loan and Savings Companies and Banks, that have solid Government deposits and experienced men at their head.

"Ten per cent. of their profits are to be laid aside to meet losses, so that they evidently anticipate losses before they start.

"Children of any age can take shares.

"What the societies can do depends upon the "rules" that they make themselves.

"The rules of the society are to be given to the members only on demand, and on payment of a fee fixed by the 'rules.'

"Officers who receive or have charge of money shall become bound with or without surety.

"Any similar corporation can hold the shares of any other corporation, thus making it a huge 'Wheel within a wheel,' and making it also an endless chain scheme.

"Each society is limited to an electoral district, but hundreds of societies may be operated in any electoral district.

"They say 'No officer shall be paid,' but no reference is made as to how much commission is to be paid for securing the stock.

"One corporation or society may lend on the shares of any other corporation.

"No member or person has any right to inspect the books of the society, but he may inspect his own account, and yet they claim that the society belongs to the subscribers.

"Disputes, not exceeding $100, are to be decided by the rules, and cannot be collected by any court of law. What sort of protection is this for innocent investors?

"In case a member is dissatisfied or disputes a claim, ten members who have been members twelve months, can appoint an accountant, and all expenses are to be paid by the applicant or society, as may be directed.

"In case a society fails, if the contributions of the existing members are not sufficient to pay the liabilities, all those who have ceased to be members for less than one year, can be called upon to pay toward the liability fund, a sum equal to the amount they subscribed.

The Catsup with the different flavour!

There is a delicacy of flavor and appetising richness to every bottle of that has won for it a lot of friends among particular Canadians.

The difference lies in the fact that only the choicest ripe tomatoes are used in its preparation, and the goodness of the fruit is pressed out by a special process of our own. The fruit is not overcooked, no apples are added (as is so often the case) and all peelings are carefully excluded.

Compares favorably with the very best Catsups made in the States or any other country.

It will pay you to feature this splendid line!

"E.D.S." Brand jams and jellies (a very wide range) are real profit-producers and trade-winners.

Good Demand for Both Butter and Eggs

Supplies are Plentiful But Good Demand Keeps Prices Steady—Firmness in the Cheese Market—Poultry Supplies are not Large—Arrival of Hogs Has Been Light but Prices are Easier Following United States Market.

The arrival of hogs at the important centres has been light during the past week, but prices of live hogs are a little easier, following the trend of the United States market. The supply of hogs in the Western States was quite heavy during last week. The English market reports a firm bacon market with Canadian quoted at 60s. to 65s.

The firmness in cheese still continues with a fair home trade and a little better export demand. Montreal reports that supplies are smaller than at this time last year and that the great bulk of what remains in store belongs to English houses, to be shipped out as ordered. An English report states that the cheese market is strong at a further advance of 1s. Finest Canadian cheese is at 61s. to 63s. and stocks of Canadian are light and in good demand.

Although butter is quite plentiful, the market is kept steady by a good demand. Besides local trade, Montreal firms are shipping considerable butter to the North West while some is going from Ontario to the Maritime Provinces. This has relieved the market from an overload to a certain extent.

Both the arrival and demand for new laid eggs is good, so that prices are steady Prices of the United States storage article still continue low and some low offers have been made to Canadian firms, with the result that eggs are being brought across the line to most of the centres.

Supplies of poultry are not abundant and in those centres where the demand is large, prices are a little higher.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Demand is generally good and markets are steady and well sustained. Lard is down a little but not to any appreciable extent. Smoked meats are bringing good business. Receipts of live hogs are light. On the whole the market is uneventful at present.

Butter—Demand for butter is improving. Several good enquiries have been received from the Maritime Provinces and local demand is good. It is rather an irony, the fact that even the factories are looking for butter in Montreal. This is explained by the shipping of cream to Boston and as a result customers who depend on the factories are supplied from the city provision men who apparently receive better money for the cream than by churning it into butter. There is a poor demand for dairy butter. This has been noticed for a long time and the condition continues. Dairy rolls that used to be in heavy demand during the winter are hardly bought at all now. The confectioners seem to be the only ones who are now asking for this variety.

One dealer claims that there is not half the supply of a year ago. The export enquiry is good. Under these conditions the market is firm, prices are steady and there is no sign of easiness yet in sight.

Provisions.—There is considerable trade being done at the present time in the various lines of pork products and dealers seem to be well pleased with business just now. The arrival of hogs which was fairly free last week, was cut down to small proportions this week on account of the heavy snow storm, as farmers were unable to deliver the porkers, but this lull will likely be made up for during the latter part of the week. The price of live hogs is a little easier, the average quotation at country points being $7 per cwt., while locally the price is $7.25 to $7.30. There seems to be quite a difference in prices existing this week in the different wholesale houses, as for instance one firm is quoting pea meal backs at 18 cents, while 20 cents is the price of another house. There seems to be a little easier feeling than last week in several lines, such as lard, hams, and short cut pork. Lard in tierces is quoted at 12¼ to 12¾ cents, and in pails at 12½ to 13 cts., while the compound article is ranging at 10¼ to 11 cents. In short cut pork in barrels there is a range extending from $24 to $26 per barrel.

Butter.—The arrival of butter continues free and as a result prices in some lines have again been reduced. There has been a further drop ranging around one cent. per lb. in creamery solids, farmer's separator butter, dairy prints and the tub article. The recent lowering of the price of butter has stimulated demand so that the market is not loaded to such an extent as it otherwise would have been.

A difference of opinion exists as to the amount of butter in storage. Some say that there is little, while others think that there is a good supply, but the general opinion is that there is a fairly large quantity of this article yet in the storage houses.

Eggs.—Storage eggs are following the example of new laids and are into the sliding game also, and seem to be determined to make an equal exhibition of sagging prices as new laids have done during the past few weeks. One month ago storage eggs were worth 32 cents per dozen, while at the present they are quoted at 21 to 22 cents. The reason given for this is the low price of storage eggs in the United States, from which large quantities have been imported by local firms. During the past week, still lower prices were offered by some United States firms, and that has caused the further reduction in price. It is also hinted that there are good sized quantities of eggs in some local storage houses and that they have also been making an effort to get rid of their stock. There has been an excellent demand for new laids lately and this has had the result of steadying prices. Pickled eggs are Provisions.—Trade has been steady during the winter throughout the west, and compares favorably with former years. The [illegible] prevailing for live cattle and hogs has succeeded in keeping the market up in all lines. During the last month slight fluctuations in prices have been taking place, the range being ½c per lb. for cured meats, ¼ to ½c per lb. for dry salt meats, a general advance in lard, and an advance of ½c per lb. for dressed hogs. Prices for live cattle and hogs have been advancing during the last two weeks, and higher prices for dressed carcasses and cured meats can be expected before long Prices quoted at present are :

Butter.—There is little change in the butter market. A steady trade continues and prices remain unchanged. Manitoba fancy fresh made bricks are steady at 37c per lb.; Eastern Townships creamery bricks at 30c per lb., and boxes at 29c per lb., and dairy No. 1 fancy at 26 to 27c per lb.

Eggs.—Southern fresh laid eggs are still being offered on the market at 35 to 37 cents per dozen in fairly liberal quantities. Stocks of stored eggs are still heavy, and these are now quoted at 26c to 27c per doz. Representatives of British Columbia firms have been offering during the last week fresh eggs to the local wholesalers at prices below what they are being brought in direct from the States for. These eggs which they are offering are supposed to come from United States towns on the Pacific Coast.

The Demand for Flour is Not Very Brisk

Millers Could Easily Handle More Business — Wheat Goes Up and Down within Small Margin—Rumor That the Armour Interests Will Try to Boost Prices—Trade in Rolled Oats is Fair —Slight Reduction in Montreal.

Wheat regained the ground which it lost during the first part of last week, and just now continues to fluctuate within a small margin. Ontario wheat is dull also, in the absence of an export demand. Prices of flour continue the same as for the past month and millers do not expect any change in prices under present conditions. The price of 1st patent Manitoba flour at Toronto at the present time is $5.40, compared with a price of $5.70 one year ago.

In connection with this the visible supply of wheat in Canada is 10,105,000 bushels, as compared with 8,071,000 bushels for the corresponding week last year. The quantity of wheat and flour as wheat now in transit to Europe with the visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, is equivalent to 89,139,000 bushels, against 69,864,000 bushels a year ago.

It has been rumored that the Armour interests in Chicago are getting ready to do what Patten did to the wheat market, but with wheat shipments as liberal as they have been for some time past, it does not seem as if the operators would be able to boost prices to any great extent.

The quietness in flour trade is not confined alone to the Toronto market. From all the important milling centres in the United States come complaints of the dull condition of trade in flour. A report from St. Louis says: "Mills probably did less business than any week in the crop year. Few mills are able to run half time. Export is almost impossible, a small lot of clears or low grades only being worked to Europe."

The cereal market on the whole seems to be fairly active. Owing to the easiness in oats last week, the price of rolled oats in Montreal has declined 5 cents per bag, but other markets keep steady under the firmer feeling in Canadian western oats.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—The market is fairly steady and prices are generally well sustained. Winnipeg wheat prices declined slightly and one result has been a somewhat quieter demand. Business on the while is satisfactory however. The stock of flour in store on Monday showed a decrease of 5,000 bbls. compared with a week ago and an increase of over 1,000 bbls. with a year ago.

TORONTO.

Flour.—No changes have taken place in the price of flour during the past week, 1st Patent Manitoba being quoted at $5.40 to $5.50 per barrel. The easiness in wheat prices of last week has been somewhat steadied again and No. 1 Northern Manitoba is quoted at $1.02. Trade in flour at the present time is none too brisk, in either Manitoba or Ontario. The local demand is keeping fair, but there has been little enquiry from British importers, and it is said that some mills have been confronted with the necessity of making sacrifice offers in order to make sales. Millers are not looking for any change in prices under the conditions existing at the present time.

Cereals.—The prices of western oats which were a little easier last week have become steadier again, although local prices have not hardened to any great extent. Rolled oats remain at the same price as last week and no changes are looked for just now. Some mills report that trade in rolled oats has been a little slack, so far this month, although a fair January trade was reported by most millers. Rolled wheat is continuing along with the usual trade, while corn meal has created considerable business during the past two weeks.

Flour.—A steady trade continues in domestic and export flour. The recent break on the wheat market has had no effect as yet on flour prices, although millers have been buying all the No. 1 and 2 Northern wheat offered at these lower prices. Prices quoted at present are:

Grocer Gives Prize to Best Ad. Setter

Anxious That the Compositor Should Take Deeper Interest in his Copy—Reasons Why the Advertiser Should Look to the Setting of His Ads.—If They are to be Read They Must be Attractive—Ads. in Guelph Papers Brought $100 worth of Business in One Day.

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 9.—That a grocer should look carefully to the make-up of his newspaper advertisements, is the opinion of R. J. E. McCrea, of J. A. McCrea & Son, local grocery dealers. Recently he offered $1 to the compositor who set up his copy the best. The advertisement was used in two local papers and the same copy was given to each with the instructions that the same space should be used in both.

That readers may see the result of this commendable contest, both advertisements are herewith shown in reduced form, the originals being two column wide and 12 inches in length. The prize was won by the compositor of No. 1 advertisement and in selecting this as the winner, Mr. McCrea was undoubtedly correct in his judgment.

Too Many Poorly Set Ads.

Retailers who advertise cannot be too careful in this regard. Type-setters occasionally get the idea that so long as everything in the copy is set the advertiser will not register any objections, since the latter knows little or nothing about type composition. In this the ad. setter is quite frequently correct—the advertiser is not particular enough. Many ads. are often rendered unattractive through poor setting; the type is jumbled up so that the reader cannot get the thread of the conversation and in disgust passes on to something else. Again the type selected is often "boorish" in its nature and not by any means appropriate to the tone of the contents of the advertisement. Heavy black type should be used within reason; for a fire sale it might be all right but not for the ordinary everyday sale. The first introduction and the firm name at the bottom are of course usually written in medium heavy type.

Should Change the Proofs.

It is therefore expedient that every advertiser should be particular about the appearance of his copy when in type. He should take such a deep interest in its setting that he should not hesitate to return proofs to have them reset to his liking. In this way the printer soon discovers his methods and type wanted, and afterwards little trouble arises. In order to be able to do this intelligently, the advertiser must have some knowledge of type and general ad. appearance. Any newspaper firm would only be too glad to grant him a proof, upon request, of the various types in stock. These could be studied carefully and the best ads. of other merchants can be watched for general appearance. If this work is gone thoroughly into with zeal on the part of the advertiser, he will soon be a superior critic on the setting of advertisements.

J. A. McCrea & Son have proven that their advertising is profitable since the accompanying advertisements brought $100 increase of business last Saturday.

BIG STORES IN AUSTRALIA.

A correspondent recently writing from Sydney, Australia, in regard to the grocery business there, says that the big store monopoly is gradually growing in that city. Large central depots are being established with their smaller grocery stores throughout the city and suburbs. These large and well organized stores are a direct and effective menace to the small man. They buy at lowest prices and receive the largest discounts. They are direct importers and in some cases they manufacture and pack many of their own lines. They are able to make a better display and give systematic and prompt delivery of goods.

They make the best possible displays and sell at lowest prices for spot cash. The same thing is finding its way into the Australian country towns, in a less marked degree and it seems as if the days of the small grocer were numbered in Australia.

THE REAL MEANING.

"Plaze, mum, the grocer did be tellin' me somethin' this mor-rin' th't I'm not afther understandin' at all, at all," said a new cook to her mistress. "And what was that?" asked the lady of the house. "He towld me he'd give me a commission on all the groceries I bought uv him. Phwat does that mean?" "It mean," said her mistress, "that we're going to have a new grocer!"

Tea is Partly Supplanted by Rubber in India

Toronto, Feb. 9.—In a letter received by a local man from a friend in Ceylon, India, some interesting points are related regarding that far eastern country and its principal product—tea.

"I was shown over the tea factory on one estate," says the writer, "which is a picture of cleanliness, and the smell of the fresh tea leaf, just as it is brought in is delicious—like primroses. I saw the withering, rolling, oxydizing and firing all going on.

"The coolie's average wage on the estate is about eleven of our cents a day and a garden requires one and a half coolies to the acre.

"As to rubber, as far as I can see it really is replacing tea in the low country districts. I saw tea garden after tea garden on the way here from Colombo interplanted with rubber and when it develops it will undoubtedly crowd out the tea. Up here in Nuwara Eliya it is too cold for rubber but tea prices will be affected everywhere."

Another letter reads in part: "We put up for the night at Kandy and drove about 20 miles out to a green tea factory and saw quantities of green tea being made. It is all uncolored when it leaves the factory here; there are firms in Colombo who do the coloring and facing. It seems the Russians desire a different shade of color from the United States and Canadian tea dealers, the former wanting olive green and the latter a lighter shade, but I suppose the new United States Pure Food Law will stop all artificial coloring of teas."

ANXIOUS FOR CONFERENCE.

British Columbia Retailers Want to Talk Over Matters With Wholesalers.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 9.—James Roy, who was formerly secretary of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, has been appointed secretary of the B. C. Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, succeeding J. N. Ellis, a lawyer who held the position nominally.

The retail grocers look upon this action with favor. They have endeavored for some time to hold regular conferences with the wholesalers to discuss matters of mutual interest, and Mr. Roy is familiar with both sides of the question. One of the points now under consideration is the curtailment of credit to retailers, necessitating the settlement of accounts by the tenth of the month following that in which the order was given. This will catch the smaller dealer. An effort is being made to have the wholesalers take this matter up with a committee of the retailers' association.

Quality All Through

Tinkering With the Tariff

Has the chief objection of unsettling trade and commerce, of arresting development.

Only a fool aviator would set out in a storm.

Business grows timid and uncertain as to future conditions.

And progressive development demands a pledge of settled, uniform conditions for at least the immediate future.

Tinkering With Flour Quality

Has likewise the effect of disturbing the amicable trade relations that should exist between buyer and seller—

—Antagonizing the housewife
—Raising the temperature of the apologetic grocer
—Encouraging competitors
—a bad thing all round, if you consider it awhile.

But not every mill can assure you a steady uniformity in flour—

A Staple That Is Staple

Without this great pledge of unvarying quality, your profitable flour connection—the fruit of years of desperate efforts—at any moment may prove a veritable house of cards a-tumbling about your ears. The miller must command the crop with a large organization, having wheat buyers in every section of the wheat belt.

For almost a quarter-century the makers of FIVE FOSES have held aloft the slogan of Uniformity and Purity, realizing its dominant necessity for successful retailing.

And FIVE ROSES is staple, never has its quality been tampered with for the sake of a few extra simoleons.

And this means UNIFORM PROFITS.

The Demand for Apples Not Extra Heavy

Prices Are Too High For Sales to be Large —Marmalade Oranges Going out Freely—California Oranges Continue Plentiful—Heated Cars Being Run Weekly from Winnipeg West for Carrying of Fruits and Vegetables—Onions are Higher.

Earlier in the season it was reported that there would be a great shortage in apples, as supplies were not plentiful. Prices were high and as a result the demand was not heavy and more apples are now left than it was expected would be the case, although the present supplies are not such as would last long if prices were moderate. At $6 to $6.50 per barrel for fancy spies, the demand is not liable to be large. A report from Liverpool, England, says that the apple market is weak and that the demand is not equal to the supply. Owing to the high prices prevailing, immediately after the New Year, shipments then were heavy.

Marmalade oranges seem to be going out quite freely just now, while the demand for oranges is keeping up well, no doubt due to the excellent quality, The shipments of oranges from Southern California from Nov. 1 to Jan. 23 amounted to 6,090 cars compared with 3,303 cars to Jan. 24th last year. The shipments of California oranges which run about 140 to 180 cars per day in the middle of January are not so large just now. It is reported that the cold weather in January did no harm to the Florida orange crop as was at first stated.

A general scarcity of home grown onions is noted and higher prices are looked for, while supplies of Spanish onions remain plentiful with prices about the same.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruit.—There is a good trade passing in fruit. Oranges seem to have the heaviest call and are quoted at a comparatively low price. Strawberries are being brought in from Florida but the demand is not as heavy as it might be. Of course, at present prices these tropical luxuries are only for those who have long purses. Apples are rather scarce and high quality brings a corresponding price.

Green Fruits.—Along with the recent improvement in the quality of grapefruit on the local market comes a slight reduction in price, so that retailers are in a splendid condition to extend their sales in this line. Florida grapefruit is now quoted at $3.50 to $3.75 per case while Jamaica is worth $2.75 to $3 per case. The imported strawberries are this week quoted at 60 to 65 cents per box. Navel oranges are still in plentiful supply and the best are now quoted at $2.85 per box on the local market. There is a moderate demand keeping up for marmalade oranges which are worth $2.50 to $2.75 per case. Trade at the present time is none too brisk.

Vegetables.—Higher prices in home grown onions which were predicted last week has taken place and local dealers are asking as high as $1.75 per bag for them. The high price is due to the scarcity of this article, the crop of which was small last year. Spanish onions, however, are in good supply and remain at the same price, $3 for large cases and $1.50 for ½ cases. Cucumbers are quoted at $2.25 to $2.50 per dozen. Potatoes are moving fairly well with $1 per bag about the ruling price. Sweet potatoes are a little firmer and some dealers are asking as high as $1.50 per hamper.

Scarcity is Noted in Fish Supplies

Reports From Both Coasts Indicate a Greater Scarcity of Fish Than for Some Years—Receipts of Fresh Fish are Small —Supply of Pickled Fish Also Short—Another Shipment of Halibut Being Sent From Alaska to Nova Scotia.

Probably the scarcity of salted fish is the feature of the fish market just now. This is particularly noticeable in Labrador herrings and green cod. One result of this is that the demand will naturally be turned to fresh frozen fish and in that event business is expected to hold in that channel. It has happened before that on account of a limited supply of salted fish, trade has been diverted to fresh frozen fish and that it held there. The present is said to be such another situation, and once the demand is turned to fresh fish it is firmly believed that it will continue in that line.

One prominent Montreal dealer stated this week that this has been the trend of the fish business for years. Whereas in years gone by the trade was largely in salted fish that has changed and attention seems to have been steadily growing towards the fresh.

The dealers are entering upon their busy season. They are securing orders now from retailers who handle fish only at this time of the year. The fact that there is no risk to speak of seems to appeal to them. Consumption is heavy, the fish is easily handled and a good profit is practically assured.

Despatches from the eastern coast seem to indicate a greater scarcity of fish than has existed for many years. The receipts of fresh fish at Halifax during the past week have been small. The market there is without halibut, but another shipment is being brought from Alaska. Dry and pickled fish are being rapidly cleaned up also.

Gloucester has seen a great decrease in the amount of fish usually brought in by its fishing vessels, and fish packers have been obliged to send to Canada and Newfoundland for salt fish in order to fill orders.

The Labrador fisheries for 1910 amounted in value to only about $1,-351,354. In 1909 the total value amounted to $2,408,232, showing that the 1910 voyage decreased in value $1,-056,948.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John.—Fish are scarcer here than for many years and the outlook is not at all bright, meaning probably a shortage in the Lenten supply. Stocks are pretty well down save for the local trade. Fish curers are working on Newfoundland stock for bloaters and kippers, as the Bay fishermen are turning in little or nothing. Salt fish continue scarce with prices tending upward thus affecting the production of boneless. The wholesale quotations for salt fish now are:

Cod, large	5 75	6 00	Pollock	3 75	4 00
" medium	5 50	5 60	Pickled Herring	5 25	5 75
" small	4 00	4 10

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—The trade in fish is keeping up well, and dealers are well satisfied with the amount of business which has been done in this line so far this season. The weather on the whole has been quite favorable for the development of the fish trade and particularly during the last solid weather retailers have been ordering more freely, demand running along in the usual lines. Trade in oysters is also keeping fairly brisk.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—As will be seen from the price list, frozen fresh fish are easier this week in contrast with higher quotations for some lines of cured fish. It looks now as if the difference in price will have the tendency to turn trade more into the fresh fish line. That is at any rate one expressed opinion. In the meantime it will be well to watch the market. The advantage now held by frozen fish over salted will surely work to the advantage of the former. Demand is increasing, as is to be expected with Lent only a few weeks away.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—The receipts of fresh fish during the week were small. The market is again bare of halibut, all the stock imported having been cleaned up. The local dealer who made the importation from Alaska has ordered another lot, and the shipment is now on the way. The supply of fillets and finnan haddies is only sufficient to supply the local demand, the dealers being unable to get any quantity ahead to permit of shipment. Lobsters are scarce and the price high.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

St. John's.—It is estimated that the Gloucester herring fisheries will be about 15,000 barrels short of last year's. All the fleet have left except a few schooners at Port-au-Basque which are waiting for cargoes to come overland from Bay of Islands.

A United States firm proposes to erect a fish packing establishment in Newfoundland.

MANITOBA.

Winnipeg.—Trade in frozen fish is as good as could be expected at this time of the year, and the market does not show the least sign of anxiety. Supplies of fish from the east, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, continue to come in in large quantities. Stocks are not heavy, as only enough to supply the demand comfortably are brought in, the shipment from Saskatchewan being the heaviest at present.

Result of Raising Quality of Herring

Scotland's Example Shows Thof Consumption Increases—Advance of This Trade in That Country—From $25 to $30 per Barrel Have Been Paid for High Quality of Fish in Times of Scarcity—Up-to-date Methods for Handling Needed in Canada —Fourth Article of a Series.

By A. M. Payne.

The rise and progress of the herring fishery in Europe during the last hundred years, as described in one of the Halifax Board of Trade pamphlets, entitles the results achieved to rank among the foremost industrial advancements of modern times.

Scotland heads the list, from data in the Dominion Blue Boak for 1909. In 1811, 89,934 barrels of salt herring were cured there; in 1831, 414,574 barrels; in 1867, 804,090 barrels; in 1902, 1,803,159 barrels, and in 1906, 2,111,006 barrels. This quantity is altogether outside of the immense amount used fresh and for smoking.

Quality Sold the Quantity.

Continuous betterment in quality coincided with the marvellous strides in quantity. The haphazard conditions, still prevailing in Canada, existed a century back in Britain. Complaints arose, leading to agitation, reform, and eventually the admitted world-wide superiority of Scottish cured herring. In 1808 a bounty of two shillings per barrel was allowed by the British authorities for properly cured herring in sound barrels. In 1815 an amended Act of Parliament confiscated imperfect barrels forfeiting the contents. In 1821 the herring industry was able to dispense with the bounty. The basis of the regulations of the Scottish Fishery Board established in 1882, was a thoroughly made pickle holding barrel, together with optional government inspection for barrel and contents. The regulations in force are given in extenso in a pamphlet by a qualified expert of the highest repute, who visited England, Scotland and Holland a few years ago on behalf of the U. S. Government.

Norway, Germany and latterly Iceland have adopted Scottish fishery methods. Iceland has even gone one better by granting government certificates. It can not surprise dealers to know that oversea markets give preference to fish food offered under such a guarantee. Japan is also on the alert, a representative from that wide-awake nation having traversed the globe within a few years on an errand of observation, including New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland in his tour.

Correctness of Statistics.

The reliability of fishery statistics is a debatable question with many critics, although it must be assumed in all fairness, that in most instances official statistics should be given credit for approximate accuracy. Ordinary ruling prices, however, can be verified with more satisfactory precision. Normal values, year in and year out, for salt herring in barrels on this side of the Atlantic from Canadian and United States published prices current are about as follows:

$1.50 to $3.50 per barrel for bait herring;

$3 to $6 per barrel for shore pickled herring, although higher figures might be correctly quoted occasionally for strictly prime grades in limited quantities, from Newfoundland, for instance: for foreign herring (including Scotch and Dutch) $8 to $14 per barrel. In the Russian and German markets double the highest figures of every day transactions have been obtained for the choicest cure modern methods can produce.

High Prices Will be Paid.

The exceptional price of $25 to $30 per barrel under special conditions of scarcity, etc., are only worthy of record as proof positive of the possible value for such a familiar food for the masses as the herring.

The question may well be suggested whether either the fisherman, the wholesale dealer or the retailing purveyor of salt herring realizes what up-to-date methods of cure and packages can bring about in squarely facing the crying need for improvement.

The almost incalculable estimate of the vast resources of the herring fishery on the shores of both sides of the North Atlantic will be considered in a succeeding article.

FRUIT MEN ALARMED.

In British Columbia They Think That New Tariff if Ratified Will be Harmful.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 9.—If the present reciprocal agreement goes through between Canada and the United States, fruit men in B.C. look to disastrous results for the British Columbia product. The fruit industry in this province is in its infancy, and consequently the expense of getting the orchards into shape is greater than what it is across the line where the land is cleared and trees are bearing. Moreover, the laws for keeping pests out of orchards in British Columbia are strict, which means additional expense. If U.S. fruit is allowed to come in free of duty it will mean that the fruit industry here will be killed. Besides, as the U.S. fruit is often badly infected with codlin moth and other pests, the government will be put to expense to provide more inspectors to look after the greater amount of fruit that will be shipped across the border into Canada.

POOR FRUIT GOES TO CUBA.

So Writes Canadian Government Commissioner—The Best Only is Wanted

"In reading the reports on shipments of Canadian fruit, and particularly apples, to the English market," writes Canadian Commissioner E. S. Kirkpatrick, Havana, "there is given an impression of the great care which is taken in handling this fruit, and also of thorough inspection. These facts have caused wonder that in the export of fruit to Cuba such an utter lack of care and judgment should be shown on the part of shippers. There is probably no place in the world where good fruit is more in demand, or where better prices rule, than in Cuba. Poor and inferior fruit can hardly be given away."

At the request of an importer, Commissioner Kirkpatrick recently inspected a shipment received from Nova Scotia. It was scarcely believable, he wrote, that these were exported with any hope of returns. He entered into correspondence with the shippers and they replied that while Nova Scotia apples were of the best, the farmers were very behind in packing, and that fruit of inferior quality should not be permitted to be exported.

Mr. A. McNeill, chief of the Fruit Division, of the Department of Agriculture, to whom the matter was referred, stated that the trouble was due to the trade being carried on largely by a few indifferent and comparatively irresponsible schooner owners. While no really reputable apple dealer had seriously undertaken the trade, it was commencing to receive the attention it deserved. Steps were being taken by the Central Co-operative Association of Nova Scotia to place the trade on a proper footing.

"I wish that our Canadian exporters of fruit might realize," comments Commissioner Kirkpatrick, "that while nothing but the best will be accepted here, yet the best will at all times be in good demand."

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Securities Company is the name of an organization being formed in Los Angeles, U. S.A., for the purpose of assiting retail grocers and other business men who may be financially embarassed, if the assets and stock justify a helping hand. The company claim that 60 per cent. of the merchants on the Pacific Coast are unable to take their monthly discounts for cash. This company plans to pay off the merchant's creditors with cash and take ¾ of the discount saved, while the other ¼ is paid to the merchant. The retailer also pays 6 per cent. interest for the use of the money and secures a ten year loan up to the value of his assets.

By means of demonstration in a few of the leading centres, an entirely new product, Inglehart's Browning, has been successfully introduced to quite a large number of people. There is nothing else like it on the market, it supplies a real need, and some of the biggest stores in Canada have taken it up enthusiastically. Inglehart's Browning has a triple use—it colors, flavors and seasons. It was invented by one of the busiest of Canadian housewives for her own use, and after using it constantly in her own kitchen for two years, finds it indispensable. With a bottle of Inglehart's Browning at hand a housewife can have a nice, brown gravy of unusually rich flavor in a few minutes. Add a teaspoonful to soup and you have it colored as well as deliciously flavored. A layer cake or pudding can be colored a rich brown with a spoonful or two, and just a little of the Browning tints them a creamy yellow. A circular of recipes goes with each bottle. The Browning is put up in 3 oz. and 6 oz. bottles by Inglehart's, Merton, Ontario.

Chr. Bjelland & Co., fish canners of Scandinavia, who are represented in Canada by John W. Bickle & Greening, Hamilton, Ont., are building a large factory to be used for the manufacture of their own labels and decorating their own cans. This step was found to be necessary in view of the immense quantities they use and in order to insure a better delivery of labels and a higher class of finished product. Modern machinery will be installed and the best staff of artists and the most skilled workmen will be employed. This will also insure their customers all the necessary show cards, etc., as well as goods of superior quality without increasing the cost of manufacture. Chr. Bjelland & Co. have their own mechanics' workshop for the manufacture and repair of machines and also their own factory for the making of cans, etc.

A similar suit was also brought against The Siegel-Cooper Co. for infringing on the trade-mark rights by selling a spurious Frou-Frou.

The Sealshipt Oyster System have recently brought suit against Drake & Erickson, U.S. grocery dealers, and asked for $2,000 damages because the former are alleged to have sold canned oysters from "Sealshipticases." This suit was brought by the Sealshipt Oyster System more to protect their trademark than to secure damages, but it was necessary, under the law, to specify a monetary loss. It is beneath the dignity of a reputable dealer to assist unfair competition against the Sealshipt Oyster System. No concern which attempts to trade upon Sealshipt popularity and Sealshipt success, should be encouraged by any honest grocer, primarily, be-

A suit has recently been brought against a former Sealshipt jobber in Michigan, who enticed registered sealshipt agents into selling canned oysters from the Sealshipticases under a license for the sole purpose of retailing Sealshipt oysters. These Sealshipticases continue to be the property of the Sealshipt Oyster System and any dealer who uses them for the purpose of selling other oysters, is not only dishonest, but he is breaking the law and cheating his customers. THE DEALER'S INTEREST AS A CONSUMER.

Advice to Manufacturers in the Writing of Copy for the Trade Press.

The second annual convention of the Grocery and Allied Trade Press of America was held at Niagara Falls, N. Y., recently in the auditorium of the Shredded Wheat Co. Among the interesting features of the program were the following: Address, "The Right Kind of Trade Paper Copy," T. A. DeWeese, Director of Publicity, Shredded Wheat Co.; "Advertising Agencies and the Trade Press," John Lee Mahin, Mahin Advertising Agency, Chicago; "The Ideal Trade Paper," Chas. G. Phillips, Root Newspaper Association, New York; "Analysis of the Make-up of Grocery Papers, and Suggestions for their Typographical Improvement," A. Eugene Bolles, Advertising and Selling, New York.

On Monday evening the publishers were guests of the Shredded Wheat Co. at a theatre party to Buffalo, on Tuesday afternoon on a trip round the Niagara Belt Line Railroad, and on Tuesday evening at a banquet that was indeed a gorgeous affair.

Fred Mason, general manager of the Shredded Wheat Co., was formerly secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers, and as such an old friend of the grocery trade paper publishers. The National Association was represented at the convention by President T. P. Sullivan, and Secretary John A. Green.

In discussing the matter of trade paper copy, Mr. DeWeese said that manufacturers of food products should not regard the dealer merely as a merchant whose interest is wrapped up in profit and the selling help he is given by the manufacturer. The dealer and his family are consumers, and an appeal should also be made on that basis. Get the dealer to believe in your goods and to verify your claims by using them on his own table, and you have an enthusiastic advocate of them, whose influence will be strongly felt among his customers.

ADVISES PERSONAL VISITS.

Trinidad Merchants Suggest That Canadian Firms Make Close Study of B. W. I. Requirements.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—We have read with interest the article on closer trade between Canada and the West Indies in your issue Dec. 23, 1910, (by David Williams) which, as far as it goes, puts matters in a fairly true light.

To our mind, if Canadian exporters really wish to extend their trade in the West Indies, the best course they can pursue is to make a point of personally visiting all the chief commercial centres there, so as to be fully alert to the secular requirements of the respective markets.

As elsewhere, business in the West Indies generally is not conducted on a basis of sentiment; it matters little which country goods come from, so long as good value is given for the money paid.

Once the Canadian exporters are thoroughly acquainted with the market conditions and requirements of the West Indies, provided, of course, that they have the capacity to supply the different commodities cheaply, which is the main essential after all, there is no doubt that they should command a good share of the trade in these waters.

SALES PLANS—This book is a collection of 333 successful plans that have been used by retail merchants to get more business. These include Special Sales, Getting Holiday Business, Co-operative Advertising, Money-Making Ideas, Contests, etc. Price $2.50, postpaid. MacLean Publishing Co., Technical Book Dept., 143-149 University Ave., Toronto.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

GROCERY FOR SALE—A substantial grocery business in a county town. Scope for butcher's or other business as a side line. Near several manufacturing firms. Horse, wagon, rig, etc. Ground and adjoining plot of land for sale. Apply KADWELL, Chatham, Ont. (6)

POSITION WANTED.

WHOLESALERS ATTENTION—I want to get a position on the road. Past experience, retail and wholesale grocery in Nova Scotia. Well known. Good references. Apply "Salesman," THE CANADIAN GROCER. (8)

WANTED

JOBBERS to handle our "Top-Notch" Butterscotch, best selling 5c. package on the market; also put up in bulk. Write for prices and samples. BRUCE & HUNT COMPANY, Limited, Toronto. (6)

PERIODICAL DEPT.

THE BUSY MAN'S MAGAZINE is the most popular periodical of its kind. Why? Because each issue contains a strong list of original articles of interest to every Canadian. It also reproduces the most timely, instructive and interesting articles appearing in the other magazines and periodicals of the month. The cream of the world's periodical press is too valuable to overlook. BUSY MAN'S is on sale at all news-stands. Better still, send $2 for one year's subscription. Mail it to-day. The Busy Man's Magazine, Toronto.

Grocery Advertising

By Wm. Borsodi

It contains suggestions for special sales, bargain sales, cash sales, etc.; ideas for catch lines or window cards, and many hints for the preparation of live advertising copy. A collection of short talks, advertising ideas and selling phrases used by the most successful grocery advertisers.

"It seems incredible that manufacturers should ignore the dealer as a valuable selling force, yet many of them do so."

The advertising manager of The Grocer happened into the office of a large firm with a national distribution, just as the manager finished reading our announcement that the Fall Number would be devoted to "The Selling Power of the Dealer." The above was his first remark regarding it.

He went on: "This is something that interests me greatly. There was a time when I held the same views as some other manufacturers do to-day. I believed that the dealer should be considered merely as a distributor and his profit fixed accordingly; that I should rely on the demand I was able to create among consumers.

"Then I began to study the real science of business-building as applied to my particular business. I soon found that I was getting only a fraction of the possible demand for my goods, and that what I did get was costing me more than it should. Yet I was doing good business and making money, just the same as others are doing now under similar conditions, who give scant consideration to the dealer and believe that their selling system is the correct one.

"I changed my plans so as to allow the dealer a fair profit, though not an extravagant one, and then earnestly and persistently sought his co-operation.

"I do not exaggerate when I say that for every $100 it has cost me to get the dealer interested I have got back $1,000."

Robinson's Patent Barley!

As a healthful, nourishing and enjoyable food for young and old, Robinson's Patent Barley is unequalled. Druggists sell it; grocers can sell much more of it—It is a food and right in their line. Those who are wise will always sell it.

When Doubt Creeps into Your Stock

Dollars Fly Out of the Window!

The only short-cut to permanent trade leads direct to the Road of Confidence. If you stray into the by-paths of Experiment you will wander far and long before you reach the goal. This is not fancy, but fact—a condition, not a theory!

The short-cut has been plainly blazed by those who have gone before—the successful ones. Be fair, friend, to yourself and to those sterling principles that have won out so signally in the daily battle of business life. Stock with quality goods, for when doubt creeps in dollars go fast!

Griffin & Skelley's
Seedless Raisins

There can be only one best, one leader, one nearer than another in the hearts of good cooks. And in the Raisin World that distinct and individual production, "Griffin's Seedless Raisins," easily takes first place.

Free from dirt, as well as seeds—carefully chosen by skilled hands and alert brains—the seedless raisin, standard of quality everywhere!

Griffin & Skelley's
Fine Asparagus

The natural, delicate, tender and toothsome quality of Griffin & Skelley's Asparagus is a bulwark of safety for the grocer who fears for the permanency of his over-particular trade. The private beds that produce this famous brand are guarded day and night by those who, seeking with might and main to hold the high standard up, never relax their vigilance over the growing stalks.

SYSTEMS TO FIT YOUR BUSINESS

HERE THEY ARE

Do you want a card-index system ?
Do you want a loose-slip system ?
Do you want a system in which each customer's account is kept in a separate book—a duplicate book, numbered from 1 to 50—where the customer gets with each purchase a duplicate slip showing total amount he owes and which bears the same number as the original which you keep in the book for your record ?

Cut of 100 book size, showing hood locked to cabinet, when not in use.

Bear in mind no matter what kind of system you should have for your business we will supply it and it will be a fire-proof system in the bargain.

We have spent 20 years in manufacturing credit systems and that's why we say we know we have something that will save you time and money.

It will cost you nothing to find out.

MR. Up-to-date Grocer, your ambition is (or should be) to install an Electric Coffee Mill.

When you do—get a good one, as good as you can afford.

If it's an "Enterprise" it will be backed by the oldest and largest manufacturers of these goods in the country.

Note the style illustrated. The grinders are connected direct to the shaft of the motor. No belts or gears to litter up the store and make it look like a machine shop and fewer parts to wear.

Perhaps you'd be glad to look over a catalog of electrically driven Coffee Mills, Meat Choppers, etc. Glad to send it.

which is absolutely pure. Manufactured in the valley of Emmenthal, Switzerland, from milk of the highest quality and guaranteed unskimmed. It is so rich and creamy that it will please even your most particular customers.

IT IS SUPERIOR

to the Gruyere cheese, which is made of partly skimmed milk, and which, therefore, cannot have that delicious flavor which has done much to make the Emmenthal cheese famous. Further, the Gruyere loaves are 1-3 or 1-2 smaller than the Emmenthaler.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

Such has been the success and reputation gained by Emmenthal cheese that many manufacturers, both in Canada and the United States, have tried to imitate it.

Note:—We import ours direct from Switzerland, and in very large quantities, so that we are in a position to quote you the right prices.

IMPORTANT DECISION

New York State Pure Food Law and Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce

Department of Agriculture declares Holbrooks Worcestershire Sauce to be a Genuine Worcestershire Sauce.

(Copy)

STATE OF NEW YORK

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Raymond A. Pearson, Commissioner.

George L. Flanders, First Assistant Commissioner.

Hon. William F. Sheehan,
37 Wall Street,
New York City.

Albany, January 11, 1911.

Dear Sir:—

The ex-Attorney General before retiring from office, failed to render an opinion upon the question which was argued by you before him relative to Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce."

He stated, however, in a conference with the Commissioner of Agriculture, that the question involved was, in his judgment, similar to the question involved in the case of Lea & Perrins' "Worcestershire Sauce"; that he found it difficult to distinguish between them; and that the line of demarkation was so indefinite as to make it doubtful, in his mind, whether the Commissioner of Agriculture would be able to maintain the position that the Holbrooks Company should brand or label the said goods to show the constituents thereof. He further stated that his judgment was that this sauce should be treated in the same way as the Lea & Perrins' sauce and for similar reasons.

In view of this attitude, I am therefore constrained to say to you that no further attempts under the provisions of the present law will be made to require the manufacturers of Holbrooks "Worcestershire Sauce" to label the goods so as to show their constituents, nor to prevent them from using the word "Worcestershire."

Respectfully,

R. A. PEARSON,
Commissioner.

An Up-to-date Grocery Store is incomplete without a

McCray Refrigerator

The cut shows our No. 410, the most popular of our grocers' refrigerators—perfectly adapted to grocery stores of average size. The exterior is of oak, antique finish; the interior is of odorless poplar or spruce, finished with two coats of shellac. All doors are provided with two thicknesses of double strength glass, except the ice door, which is fitted with a beveled plate mirror.

One grocer says:—"I am well pleased with my McCray No. 410. It is a money-saver and trade-getter. I sell just four times as much butter as I did before installing it. Eight hundred pounds of ice is the most I have ever used in eight days, and that was the hottest weather we have had."

We manufacture refrigerators and coolers for residences, groceries, markets, hotels, clubs and florists. Catalog for any of these lines will be sent free upon request.

Simple, But Oh, How It Sold Dates!

Here's a simple little thing one grocer did that brought him three days of splendid date sales.

He cut our advertisement of Dromedary Dates from a monthly magazine — we advertise in nearly all the good ones—and pasted it on the front of his window. Over it was a brush sign, "We Sell These," and in the window a display of the cartons with one open. He says he never sold so many dates in his life.

Dromedary Dates are sure to sell if people see them, because they are the finest selected fruit, wrapped carefully in oiled paper and packed in cartons. They're clean, fresh, and indefinitely moist. All jobbers.

We also pack ROYAL EXCELSIOR and ANCHOR brand package dates.

Pciking Out the Best Retail Dealers

This Can Generally be Accomplished by Listening to the Customers' Purchases —The Good Dealer Has the Confidence in His Patrons—Two Sales of Olive Oil Illustrating the Personal Power of the Grocer and Clerk—Objects to be Attained by Retail Sellers.

It Has been affirmed—and with a great deal of truth—that the superior and inferior retail dealer can be selected by simply listening to the questions of their regular customers. The customer, it will be found in the majority of cases, who has confidence in her dealer shows this confidence in her actions and in her words.

To prove these assertions the writer recently questioned a number of housewives on how they go about their grocery shopping and in practically every case, these women had so much confidence in their dealers that they never worried over the brand of anything—this was left to the judgment and good sense of the grocer. There are, of course, some dealers who do not have the good fortune to act as their customers' advisers and this is because they have occasionally been guilty of selling them something they ought not to have sold.

Dealer Selected the Brand.

"I used to like to deal at T—'s," remarked one woman, "before he moved away. All I had to do was to name over the items I wanted and I placed so much dependence on him I never had to mention what brands I wanted. I was positive that he sold goods of quality and was certain he would not sell me anything that he knew would not satisfy me.

"Why, I didn't even have to ask him what soap or tea or sugar I wanted and he never abused my trust. He knew I wanted a good laundry soap, a good package tea and the best granulated sugar.

"But I couldn't have that confidence in the grocers around here now because I don't believe they understand their business well enough. I could give Mr. T— my order over the phone in a couple of minutes; he didn't have to stop to ask questions. I simply read off my list to him without specifying the exact brand.

"But he has moved away from here and in order to get good goods I have to go up to B—'s or B—'s."

This Customer Wants Quality.

The experiences of the above mentioned housewife are somewhat similar to those of another who talked to the writer on her shopping methods.

"Mr. S—n can always be depended upon" she remarked; "I never have to tell him what special kind of anything I want. Occasionally I ask for some brand of goods, but if he has anything he says is better, I always take it without any parleying.

"Yes, sometimes I ask for a certain article which he hasn't in stock but he always gives me something else of a similar nature which, so far as I'm concerned, serves the purpose. As long as the quality is good and the food is clean and wholesome, I couldn't very well object."

These statements indicate the confidence a good dealer can work up among his customers. They illustrate that the dealer acts in the majority of cases as the customer's adviser on what that customer should purchase and what not; and this is the class of merchant who attracts the bulk of the trade in his locality, who gives the best service, and who sells the more profitable goods.

An Olive Oil Sale.

The other day while the writer was in a grocery store a young man—a stranger to the grocer—called for a bottle of Blank brand, olive oil.

"I haven't that brand in stock," he quietly replied, "but I can show you the best olive oil on the market; would you like it in a bottle or tin, I can let you have either."

He was told the kind of container desired.

"Here is an olive oil," he replied, "that I can safely recommend; I use it myself and I know it to be of excellent quality."

"I didn't want quite so much as that," the customer replied, in a tone that showed the sale had practically been made.

The grocer said something in a low voice to one of his employes and turned again to the young man who was after the olive oil, continuing his talk about the quality. In half a minute the assistant had arrived, with a smaller bottle which suited the purchaser as to size and the sale was then and there made.

A somewhat similar sale was made in another grocery store. Simply "olive oil" was asked for there and a clerk reached up for a large 65 cent bottle.

"This is the best that can be bought," he began.

He was asked the price and when the customer was given this information the latter wanted to know if he didn't have any cheaper.

"Not in that brand," he replied, "but I could show you a different kind of an inferior quality at less cost."

Clerk Drank Three Gallons.

"Why do you think that that is the best?" the prospective purchaser inquired.

"Look at the clear color of it and compare it with this brand," the clerk answered, holding the two up before the light. "I drink that kind myself; in fact last year I drank more than 3 gallons of it; used to take some after every meal and it did me a lot of good."

He Knew the Goods.

"Why are you requested to wipe the mouth of the bottle before and after using, as it points out on the label around the neck?" asked the customer.

"Because if you do not, any oil that gathers around the outside turns rancid and affects the taste of it."

"You ought always to keep it in a dark place," he further added, "so that the high color will be retained. You know olive oil is splendid for digestion and a person who can, ought to take it with every meal; and I would certainly recommend you to buy the best."

While the customer had before that undoubtedly decided to purchase the high quality brand recommended at first the last argument brought out the pocketbook which parted with 65 cents forthwith.

An Extra Sale Made.

"Is there anything else?" the clerk inquired as the customer was on his way to the door.

"I would like to get a small jar of some kind of preserved fruit or jelly for my Sunday morning breakfast," was the reply.

"Yes, we have a nice line of goods in this brand," holding up a 20 cent jar of clear looking crab-apple jelly.

"Is that pure?"

"Absolutely pure; there is nothing in it but crab-apple and the purest of cane sugar; we can recommend it to anyone; in fact the government inland revenue bulletin shows it to be genuine in all cases."

That clerk made the sale without any further explanations and an evidently satisfied customer left the store a moment afterwards.

The above incidents further illustrate the independence and salesmanship of the dealer; they show him and his clerks to be men whose recommendations go a long way in effecting sales of goods in which their interest has been secured and they emphasize the flesh gnd blood power of the dealer when face to face with the customer.

These men aimed to sell quality and satisfaction and incidentally made profits which were quite satisfactory to them.

The Dealer's Influence Over Customers

Some Actual Experiences Showing the Dependence They Place in Him—A Sale of Pickles Illustrating This and Demonstrating That a Dealer is a Real Salesman.

Winnipeg, Feb. 16.—"That sign aids me a great deal in selling goods which I otherwise would not," said a grocer recently when his attention was drawn to a sign which he had located near the door in view of outgoing customers and which read, "Have you forgotten anything?"

"Very often," continued the merchant, "it will cause a customer to stop and think, with the result that frequently other items are added to the order already given.

"There is also another way in which it is of use. A customer will be starting out and the sign coming to her notice she will often stop and say, 'Well, I think that is all I want this time.'

"Then I get in my work and introduce some line that is near at hand to her: 'Do you want any of this mustard, Mrs. Customer? It is very nice for meat, has an excellent taste and is not nearly as strong as the ordinary mustard. We have it in several sized jars. This one is worth ten cents? In this way the sign often gives me a chance to make extra sales."

Did Not Carry Brand Asked For.

Just then a customer called and the grocer, in waiting on her, showed how he handled a customer who inquires for a certain brand of goods which he did not have in stock because he wasn't convinced regarding the quality nor satisfied with the profit. He also demonstrated his ability as a salesman by selling another brand.

The customer had purchased a few articles when she said: "Have you Blank's pickles?" mentioning a particular brand.

"Have you ever used that brand of pickles?" asked the grocer.

"No, I have never used it, but I see it advertised in the papers a great deal," replied the lady.

"You are quite correct," he answered, "but I have made a thorough inquiry into the quality of that brand and would advise you to take either of these two;" holding up a couple of bottles in front of her, "you will find either of them an extra fine pickle, for we have tried them on our own table, and the manufacturers are thoroughly reliable."

The result was the customer bought, relying on the grocer to make a choice between the two. His little talk had unconsciously to her taken her mind away from her first thoughts. The whole circumstance goes to show the reliance a customer places on her dealer.

"How would you have handled that customer if she had said she had used that brand of pickles and found them a good article?" the writer inquired of the grocer when the customer had gone.

"I realize that it might have been a little more difficult to make the sale, but

A PROVISION COUNTER

This illustration shows the importance placed on their provision department by The Star Provision Co., of Regina, Sask. They have a special counter with marble top, a large refrigerator, cash register, and computing scale, in order to aid them in good service, and to promote the cleanliness and attractiveness of the goods they sell. Note the skylight above.

nevertheless I believe I would have been able to sell her. The brand she asked for may be a fairly good one, but in my opinion it is not as good as the line I sold her, for I know the firm is quite reliable. I always make sure of the quality before putting in a stock.

Argument That Might Have Been.

"If she had said she had used them and liked them, I would have said, 'Yes, it may be a very good pickle.' But I have examined all three, made comparisons, read all I can find about the manufacturers, and I still recommend one of these. I know that only the best vegetables and vinegar are used in these two. You will notice how clear the pickles are in each bottle. I am sure you would be satisfied with either.' I find that customers will generally buy what I recommend, as I always take great care that I do not offer an inferior article," he added

How Asparagus Grows in California

Its Home is on Islands in a Delta at the Mouths of Rivers—Produced From Seed—Soil in Which it Thrives is of a Peaty Character and Will Ignite Easily.

California asparagus is grown almost entirely on islands in the delta at the mouths of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers, below the cities of Sacramento and Stockton. That district is practically at sea level, in fact the tides from the Pacific Ocean are felt through the entire delta region.

That entire district is more or less of a swampy character as is evidenced by the heavy growth of the tule grass. This tule grass is to a large extent responsible for these islands, as it grows very rank annually, each year's growth forming a kind of peat or tule land. With each season the level of the uncultivated tule land is of course raised.

These lands were originally subjected to overflow at very high water, necessitating the building of levees or dikes. After the island is thoroughly protected by levees, the water remaining or that soaks in is pumped over the levee back into the river.

Best Kind of a Soil.

The soil of these islands is of the character of peat, as above shown, and extremely rich and productive. It is a light soil and will burn when dry if ignited. It is this character of soil that is peculiarly adapted for the cultivation of asparagus.

The asparagus is started from seed. The seed is taken from the plants the latter part of September or first of October and planted the following March about 2 inches under ground, in rows about 20 inches apart. These rows must be well cultivated during the summer following the planting.

The latter part of November or first of December of that year, the roots formed are dug up and left out of the ground about a month. In the meantime the ground is thoroughly plowed and harrowed and struck off into rows about 9 feet apart, with furrows about one foot deep between the rows. Then these same roots are planted again, this time about 18 inches apart in rows about 12 inches deep and left to grow, being well cultivated all summer and not cut over for market purposes. The tops should be permitted to grow and be cut off in January, the ground ridged up and taken care of until Spring, when the first cutting from the bed can be made.

This first cutting does not amount to much and should be of short duration, so that the roots may have plenty of time to strengthen themselves before next season.

The second year's cutting will increase quite a little over the first, but again the season of cutting should be short so as to insure the roots gathering plenty of strength and thus prepare themselves for heavier cutting that will commence the third year. In other words, the bed does not yield heavily until the third cutting season, which amounts to five years from the time the first work towards planting is done.

Quality Depends on Care.

The quality of the asparagus is regulated to a large extent by the amount of care and consideration given to the beds during the first three years of their existence. It involves a heavy expenditure, to say nothing of an endless amount of patience and painstaking work.

The floods that have done so much damage to the asparagus industry are the direct result of warm rains, coupled with heavy snowfall in the Sierra Navada mountains. It is not an unusual thing for there to be from 100 to 150 inches of snow on the level at points on the highest range of the Sierra Nevadas, where the Government has its observation stations.

The slightest break in the levee will generally result in the flooding of the island affected. If the levee is promptly repaired and the water pumped out, the damage to the beds may be small. In most every instance, however, it has not been possible to accomplish this, with the result that the beds were entirely ruined, causing a tremendous loss.

Probably the best leveed island in that district is Grand Island. This island contains in the neighborhood of 18,000 acres of land. It has cost these landowners for leveeing alone about $150 per acre. The levee on this island varies from 200 to 300 feet wide at the base, about 40 feet wide on top and from 40 to 60 feet high, built with enormous dredges.

An Extra Sale of Canned Peas Made By Bright Clerk

In a store which the writer recently visited there is a clerk who should some day command a high salary for his salesmanship ability, which he already has displayed to a marked extent. He believes in introducing some real salesmanship into his work and not acting as a mere machine by handing over the counter just those articles which the customer may inquire for. He believes in taking advantage of a customer's presence in the store to introduce and push new lines, and to increase not only the sales in those lines that are already asked for but to also extend the demand to other goods which under old time merchandising methods could never be sold.

When I entered the store to see the proprietor this clerk was busily engaged in carefully arranging a display of canned peas at his counter. I observed first of all, what a contrast this was to the store I had previously entered where the clerk was sitting on the counter reading the paper. While I was waiting to see the proprietor, a lady customer came in and gave her order for two or three articles.

"Now, is there anything else that I could send up, Mrs. Campbell?" said the clerk.

"No, I think that is all."

"Here are some fine canned peas, Mrs. Campbell, that we have just recently received. They are very tender, uniform in color and size with a very clear liquid and have an excellent flavor. They are a high quality article and I believe if you tried a can you would use them all the time."

"What size are they? I had some at a friend's the other day which were the finest I have ever tasted. They were a very small pea."

"It was probably the same sized pea that you had. These are quite small slightly under 1-3 of an inch in diameter or two sizes less than the early June pea, if you are familiar with that size."

"I guess you may send me up three cans to try them."

"I am sure you will like them, I will include them with the other goods."

This conversation showed me that this clerk was a promising young salesman and one that any merchant would be proud to have in his store. In the first place, he was not satisfied with just taking this woman's order but made an attempt to introduce something else. Besides he has a selling talk on the line that helped a great deal in the sale and his information in regard to the size clearly demonstrated that he had made a study of the goods.

Clerks will find that they can make themselves much more valuable to their employer by being real salesmen and not mere order takers or slot machines.

A bill has also been introduced in Congress forbidding the manufacture of the phosporus matches in the United States, the use of which is exceedingly large, on the ground that it poisoned the match workmen. Several European countries, including England, have prohibited the use of phosphorus in match manufacture.

Retail Grocer's End-of-Year Statement

How He Determines What His Net Profit Has Been—Figures Profits on Sales —Spends From $60 to $80 Per Month on Advertising—His Figures Analyzed and Commended—Another Dealer Asks Advice on Testing Teas.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Below I copy a mighty good statement sent me a few days ago.

"Dear Bro. Johnson:—I agree exactly with you as to figuring percentage and profits. Believe in paying good wages and using plenty of printers' ink. Pay my best man $17 per week, and am now spending $60 to $80 per month for advertising. Last September advertising bills were $81.05. Rent, $86.50 per month. Room, 16 x 80 ft. Have hired extra help during last three months, while our competitors have been laying them off. These are facts and not hot air.

"This being our first year our expenses have been exceedingly heavy."

All success succeeds; the who "gets there" has placed himself above criticism. Thus, the merchant who can show that he has succeeded under given conditions has a chance to say, justifiably, that his ways are surely right. Even merchants who, under the favorable conditions of a new country where competition is slack, make money figuring profits from the cost, may properly say that system is good enough for them. But, in these days, not only of competition, but of rapidly-improving system and more exacting and consequently more costly service, no man can afford to overlook any seemingly even minor detail, in the conduct of his business.

Knows His Exact Position.

Now, this correspondent shows by his carefully drawn up statement that he knows just where he's at. He has it all down fine. His statement accurately shows what are liabilities and resources. And that's something very few merchants have any true conception of.

First, as a liability, comes his sales, $50,760.21. Having bartered that value of goods for cash or accounts, he is liable for that sum—must give a clear accounting of it. Further down, showing that he owes $843.40, he places it, too, as a liability. Then comes Capital Stock; that amount having been put into the business to start with, he must "show it" at the end of the year, intact. Thus he's also liable for it. He's made a net profit of 2.81 per cent. plus, on his sales—that, too, must be shown up—he's liable for that also. Thus, he shows that he must account for $60,030.31. The question would now arise, what has he done with it

What the Figures Mean.

Well, he has paid for groceries, $26,214.78; meats, $13,730.22; general expenses have cost him $2,615.19; wages have come to $5,338.25; horses, etc. amount to $473.97; advertising, $290.14; ice, $257.41. These are regular expenditures of all kinds. These are properly resources. They are thus considered because they properly stand against the liability of total sales. Then come tangible resources or assets, which constitute about the only kind ordinarily understood by grocers in general. These are stocks of various kinds, $4,270; tools, etc., $1,700.25; cash, $1,124.94; bills receivable, $2,174.91; lastly we have the actual loss by bad accounts, put in, I should say, at an estimate which, taken in the light of the general appearance of this statement is liberal at $200. And, the last item, which is not by any means as usual as it should be, but which is just as correct and needful to safety as any other item given, the depreciation of 10 per cent. on fixtures, etc., $213.55.

Having gone all through this clear statement, then, this manager still has $1,426.70 on hand. Where does that belong? Properly, of course, there being no other liability, this goes in as net profit for the year and must be apportioned as a dividend on the $7,000 capital put into the business. He therefore, put this in on both sides; 2.81 per cent. on sales, for which he is liable; 20.38 per cent. on capital stock, as a resource.

As to Advertising.

I don't think I ever saw so complete, clear, concise and comprehensive a statement; certainly not emanating from a grocery store. What may be drawn from the side remarks about printers' ink, etc., is worth pondering, and each reader can draw his own conclusions. It is well to remember, however, that, while theoretically advertising always makes money, practically it does not. What is the proper limit, I am not yet ready to state as a general proposition. But if I were asked by this correspondent, I should say that he'd probably better revise his expressed determination to spend a lot on publicity this year. A little more than last year, maybe, but do not go into it too strong all at once.

TESTING TEAS.

A correspondent writes me: "I have several different varieties of chest teas. Would you kindly inform me how to draw them so I can tell which of them is the best and how much better?"

The apparatus for testing teas is simple. The absolute requirements are really two: Equal quantities of tea and fresh boiling water. The professional outfit consists of a number of cups of exactly equal size, a very delicate balance, a five cent piece, a tea kettle and a gas stove. A retailer may achieve satisfactory results using a number of cups from one "set" of dishes, a postal scale whereon to weigh the equivalent of a silver five cent piece and the household kettle.

Mark the cups on the bottom, 1, 2, 3, etc. Mark the samples to be tested in the same way. Of course, all "Japs" must be tested together, then all Gunpowders, Oolongs, Ceylons, etc. Set each cup in front of the sample of corresponding number and weigh into each the half-dime quantity of tea.

Judgment Must be Unbiased.

Next mix up the cups—change their positions around so you won't know which you are testing. This for the reason that you want your own unbiased judgment and you can't be sure of getting it on tea whose identity you know. Now take fresh water—water which has never been boiled—and make it boil. Have it bubbling fiercely before you use it. Then pour it on the tea, filling each cup equally full.

The next step depends on the kind of tea you are testing. Japans should stand about two minutes and then you begin by drawing the leaves up on the spoon to the surface so you can smell them for strength and flavor. In about 4 minutes the teas will be ready for tasting. The next test is for color of liquor, the lightest liquor taken in combination with other characteristics generally being considered best, though in many sections a darker, heavier drink takes preference over a lighter one, even if the lighter one have the more delicate flavor. As you taste, smell and variously judge the combined merits of the teas you should arrange the cups according to your judgment, the best to the left of the line and the others following to the right, according to their adjudged value.

When you have finished all this it will be instructive to refer to the numbers of the cups and samples to see how nearly your arrangement agrees with your costs. Much thought and study, much quiet practice in tasting and a good deal of suggestion from tea buyers and salesmen who know,—all these are needed to develop any buyer's judgment, whether naturally good or bad. It is a much simpler matter to learn to test teas than coffees, because teas are sold straight, as a rule, unblended, while hardly a coffee reaches the retailer that is not blended in greater or lesser degree.

Artificial Coloring.

I should add that the last test for Japan teas is for artificial coloration. After all other tests have been made, draw a lot again as before and allow to stand ten or twelve hours. Scum or a red rim around top of liquor denotes artificial color and will will aid in determining values. I believe there are other tests, but I am not familiar with them.

Gunpowders and Hysons are tested in a fashion similar to Japan. These teas are, however, universally colored, hence comparative tests must be made for other merits and demerits, save that the aroma arising immediately after the water is poured on is greatly indicative of fineness and the "smeller" must come into play at once. But the tasting of Oolongs should not begin until fully 5 minutes after the water has been put onto them. Ceylons are heavier than Oolongs, but must be tested in same manner, except that tasting is better deferred until the leaves have been steeping 6 minutes.

Personal Touch that Means Success

Practical Man Points Out The Power of the Dealer in Modern Business Building—Means and Methods for Selling Goods Above Actual Demand — Quality Talks More Than Price.

By J. E. Brown.

efore Edmonton Retail Merchants' Associati on.

When one has decided to build, he first considers what it is to be used for and what end it will serve, and then considers the material and the cost.

Just so with business. What are you going into business for? What kind of a business do you want, and what end is it to serve? After you have decided this point, then you can lay your plans and if you are wise you will select material in the shape of principles, character and merchandise to build with.

Few buildings are greater than their architects and few businesses are greater than the men and principles back of them.

So I would say the first thing is to take stock of yourself and see if you are a born trader, or if your liking for trafficking is strong enough to compel you to learn its many and intricate paths.

If you think that just anybody can successfully run a business, you had better never start, for the chances are you will go on the dump heap of mercantile failure where more than 75 per cent. of men who start in business land.

Of course, a few succeed in spite of the fact that they know little of business or methods, but there are exceptions to most rules.

Ability to Learn Required.

If you have the ability to learn the detail and principles of your trade then you have the first requisite. But ability is a worthless asset if you lack patience, initiative, energy, and adaptability. These five qualities combined make proficiency and this is the quality that spells success. I mean these are the five essentials that form the foundation to build on.

The materials that go into the superstructure are absolute honesty with the public, reasonable value given in exchange for the price, the personel of the firm and employes to be above reproach, so that every statement will carry the convictions of truth and fairness, a cool head that will not be turned by the blush of success and a resolute spirit that will stand firm when the clouds of adversity rise and threaten and the disposition that "He who serves best rules most."

Must Resist Temptations.

You must be a man who can resist the thousands of temptations to take undue advantage of the public's confidence and often igonrance.

You must also have the faculty of saying no to the numerous insidious schemes presented for the sole purpose of separating you from a part of your hard earned cash.

And yet, when one is catering to the public, he must be courteous, suave and polite enough to radiate an atmosphere of agreeableness that will intoxicate all who come into contact with us, remembering always that the dear public is a very numerous personage with a lot of needs, notions and eccentricities and that you, as a man in public business, will be called on for favors as well as wares.

You are fitted to become a merchant in proportion to the degree that you possess these qualities.

If you have but a few of them and a vision not longer than to-day's gains you will be known as a "storekeeper." If you have a working acquaintance with most of them you will become a "merchant" and if you are a master of them you are building a business that will be a blessing to your day and a monument to your name.

Strive for Simple System.

We hear a great deal about methods in business. There are new systems coming up every day, many of them emanating from professional systematizers who invent new ones as fast as the old ones are sold and exploded. Beware of them and select after careful acquaintance with the needs of your business, the simplest system that will give you the detailed information necessary to the conduct and development of the business. I am a crank about system and approve of it, as no business is running safely that cannot be analyzed and checked to secure any information that may be wanted; but get at it the shortest way and discard all the rubbish of red tape.

If you want to sell high class merchandise you must locate in a large community of well-to-do and wealthy people so as to have a market for such goods. Then your store fixtures and service must all be in keeping with the class of goods kept and the taste and desires of your wealthy patrons. The profit on this style of business will have to be larger than on the more staple lines as style and make are demanded by this better trade and consequently the merchant's risks are greater and losses more frequent. This trade is more exacting and more appreciative also which requires better trained salesmen of exeprience and more definite knowledge of goods and qualities. Such stores have to be well financed for its patrons will not trade there if it lacks the air of prosperity.

Selling to Middle Classes.

If your aim is to sell the great popular middle classes then your general apearance and equipment must be in keeping with this idea, but never one of stinginess or restraint. Generosity must be in the air and goods and values appealing to the reason, for this is the practical class of hardy customers who are neither extravagant or shiftless. The help in such a store should be most democratic, sensible and well informed in regard to goods. This is the trade to whom it pays best to display and demonstrate the values and uses of merchandise These are the busy, pushing, inquiring people who are ever interested in all they see and hear. They are the toiling, thinking, producing class who want to know and make use of their knowledge.

Here is where I want to say that the merchant who will have intelligent help to show the people the qualities and uses of his goods will get the best of the trade.

Demonstrating Catsup.

Every general retail store can afford to demonstrate most of its merchandise. It will pay good grocers to give samples of food stuffs to the trade, and have a good cook tell and show them how to prepare and serve everything. As an example suppose you carry three or four makes of catsup. Let the demonstrating salesman open up each and put a spoon full of each on a clean white blotting paper and as the liquid is absorbed by the blotter the real body of the catsup is left for examination. You will find that the cheap one is nearly all absorbed and nothing left but a brownish red powder, while the good one hardly wets the blotting paper, but leaves a good heap of rich red tomato. One is made from refuse from seed growing houses and the other from fresh ripe sound tomatoes.

The customer who sees such a demonstration is at once won over to quality without consideration of price.

At the same time, canned pork and beans and oyster cocktails can be demonstrated with the catsup.

The Dealer's Selling Power.

I have seen gallons of olives and olive oil sold in a day by a demonstrator who knew how to make salads and serve a small bite on delicate plates. I have seen large quantities of fine teas and coffees sold through serving small cups and at the same time demonstrate a percolating pot for making it.

I have seen almost every customer entering the store sold rice by a clever girl who served it made up in several ways and at the same time sell rice cookers and other things. I have seen colored wash goods sold by having samples washed at the counter. We have all seen more paring knives sold in one day by a demonstrator than a big store will sell in a year without.

I have seen a dozen clerks kept busy selling sheet music while another sang the songs or played the music.

And, gentlemen, I saw a little flat chested woman sell $25,000 worth of bust forms by demonstrating them at the New York Fashion Show.

Demonstrating is only a practical form of advertising which makes everything so clear to the customer that confidence in the goods and houses is at once formed.

Practical Methods.

This kind of display and presentation of goods is the entertaining feature that at once claims the attention which is the first step in making a sale. It is one practical method of introducing new up-to-date goods to the public and at the same time selling enough to make it profitable.

Again it forces salespeople to become intelligent about goods, which is the thing most needed to-day.

Do you know that a grocery clerk offered me a few weeks ago, a Swiss cheese for Roquefort and insisted he was right. He was either ignorant or dishonest and took me for a sucker. From my standpoint his attempt would create disrespect for the store.

I could talk all evening about intelligent service to the public, as the lack of it is really the largest hindrance to a store's development.

Personality Builds Up.

It is the personal contact that builds for or against the store. Too many merchants think if they only had the money they could do all they wanted. My dear sirs, this is only a means, but not the necessity. You might have money enough to buy the best corner in town, and erect the best building that experience and money could build and then send the shrewdest buyers out and glean the markets of the world for just the goods needed and then employ the best decorators to arrange them to tempt the customer and then have the cleverest advertisers write the most alluring description of the goods and invite the public in and they come by thousands and fill your store and your bosom swells with satisfaction and your hopes reach out for more.

But, gentlemen, that might be your biggest day. Not because your goods, prices or accommodations did not suit the public. Oh no, it is a much more serious thing—the clerks behind the counter did not know their business or your business and the public failed to get the service they want—the personal contact was not satisfactory.

The information, help, service and satisfaction were lacking, not because the store did not have it, but entirely because the sales persons failed.

Too many merchants try to "stand in" with the public, but never think of "standing in" with their help. One is just as commendable an aspiration as the other. The first often costs more than you can afford and only brings friends while you pay or play, while the other only costs you the price of what good clerks earn and their self respect.

You employ help to do work you have not the time to do, or to do work better than you can do it and in most cases you ought to get help for both reasons.

The man who is so narrow that he hires help to do only the things of little importance will always have a small business.

Duty of Employers

There is one type of men who ought never go into business, and that is the man who is afraid to let the man under him know what he knows. Nobody knows enough and the man who knows less is more useless.

The proprietor, overseer or department head who is not broad enough to teach help under him all he knows, is hindering his own prosperity, the business and the help under him. He belongs to the old school, who said " a little learning is a dangerous thing."

Teach your employees how goods are made, their uses, who makes them, their cost and the profit necessary to sell them to have a successful business. Once they know this your interests are safe.

Some one is saying now that you do not dare tell some clerks such things, and if you have help of this kind, do not be foolish enough to keep them when there are good people to be found.

There are many more things I would like to say about store help, but it would be better to say it direct to them instead of the employer.

Too many merchants put too much stress on the price, thinking that it is the attracting power for a store.

There never was a greater delusion and misconception. Price never created a desire for goods and a sale never was made without the desire for the article.

I admit that after the desire is there, price concessions help to remove an obstruction to obtaining it, or make it easier for one having a desire for the goods to gratify it. But I repeat, price never creates a need or a desire for goods, except perhaps with the millionaire spender who occasionally buys goods for their exorbitant value, which only proves that a cut price is not good business.

The genius who always buys his merchandise cheaper than everybody else has not yet been born, although every side street almost boasts of such, but never the first class store of any town.

Good Profits and Low Expenses.

The real mercantile genius is the man who sells the most goods at good profits and keeps expenses low, consistent with good business.

Thank goodness the men to-day who are making the reliable merchandise and commercial records are men of honor who maintain values as well as integrity.

And I am glad to note that the most successful firms in the commercial world to-day will not tell a lie in advertising any sooner than they would violate a business obligation. And yet we occasionally see an advertisement that is full of misrepresentation and exaggerated values, that are intended to deceive the public outside of the stores, who we should remember are just as shrewd as the storekeeper. Better not advertise at all than make statements that cannot be made good. The best advertising is creating a desire for what you have to sell and having goods measure up to the representations.

Advertise as long as you can tell the truth, then quit always remembering that a public business is an open book and that whatever it contains the public will know.

Answer the question each for ourselves. Are we master builders?

CUSTOMER RETURNED CAN OF OLD CORN

Some Reasons Why the Dealer Should Look Carefully to Freshness and Therefore the Quality of the Stock—Methods for Carefulness in this Respect—How to Know the Old From the New Goods on the Shelf.

"Please, mother don't want this. She says that it does not look fresh," said a little girl entering a grocery store the other day and carrying a can of corn with the wrapper on it very badly faded.

"Well, where did that come from?" exclaimed the merchant as he examined the can. "Why we haven't bought any of this brand for two years. It must have been set back on the shelf," and after a further examination he found five more cans which he must have been carrying in stock for two years, and which were likely packed some time longer.

It is for this reason that many customers are annually lost by merchants. One of the essentials of a grocery store if it hopes to retain trade, is to keep the stock fresh. There are many merchants who devote little attention to this important detail. When goods are opened, they are placed on the shelf along with those already there without any system so that the new goods will go out first.

In the well regulated grocery store this phase of the business is closely looked after, so that customers will always receive fresh goods. Where possible goods should not be opened up until the stock is completely sold out. Of course, this is not possible with goods which are placed on the shelves, as they must be kept filled in order to present a good appearance and with these the merchant must work out some plan so that the older stock will be sold first.

In some stores, the older goods are merely placed to the right or left of the shelf and the clerk knows from which side to sell. In other stores, this detail is looked after more closely still, and each can or package of the older stock is marked before the other is put up. This is done by using a small character in the corner of the article, that each clerk may easily distinguish the old from the new. By this system package goods are always kept fresh.

Something might also be said in regard to bulk goods. In the case of currants, raisins, rolled oats not in packages and similar articles which are kept in bins or other receptacles, when the stock becomes low, the fresh goods are often dumped in upon the older. In this way, the goods in the bottom will often remain there for a long time before being sold and the customer who receives them will likely be displeased.

It is best, therefore, to remove what is left in the bottom before putting in the fresh. It requires only a short time and protects the merchant's trade. Every merchant will find it greatly to his advantage to make an extra effort to keep his stock fresh.

Another Letter on The Mail Order House Question

By M. Moyer.

The story that Theo. Legault related in the last issue of The Grocer about his citizens buying a present for one of their lodge officers and paying 100 per cent. more for it, to a mail order house than they could have bought it from their local dealer, is only a repetition of similar cases which could be mentioned by the thousands.

He very tersely puts it that the people in his district have acquired the habit, which he claims is contagious, and in consequence, they do these foolish things, contrary to their own interests.

Like gold mining, where one profits thousands lose, and yet the business goes on because they have acquired the habit.

That this habit, or disease, has spread over the greater part of the country, and is causing destruction, is universally admitted: the people are beginning to look for a remedy. They all begin to realize that in proportion as these large concerns are making their millions from mail orders, the country villages and towns, and consequently each individual, is suffering.

The wealth of the country is flowing into the large cities and the country is becoming depopulated and impoverished. Farms, for want of help, are neglected; towns for want of trade that naturally and rightfully belong to them, are at a standstill, properties are decreasing in value, and the revenue necessary to keep the roads, schools, churches and the management of municipal affairs is difficult to obtain. These are all the effects of this contagious disease.

There is no argument in favor of such a system. All admit that it is wrong from every standpoint; it cannot take the place of the retail stores to supply the people, but it interferes with the most economical system, and is a parasite on the general welfare of the country. The people have been led by incessant advertising, but they are now beginning to see where it will land them. By interviewing the farmers as well as the buying public in general, I have reason to know, that they are ready to co-operate with the merchants in instituting an educational campaign in order to obtain the true facts, and arrive at a system that will distribute the wealth of the country to the people where it belongs. If the merchants in towns cannot sell as cheaply with much less expense than the mail order house under much heavier expense, then they ought to wake up; but if they do, the people should know it. Here is where education is necessary. People would surely not pay 100 per cent. more for goods if they knew that they could get them that much cheaper at home.

Investigating committees should be appointed in every town, composed of farmers, merchants and others. If the merchants expect people to deal with them, the people also have a right to say what kind of service they want, and not be satisfied unless they have the best. This the merchants can give them if they knew that they could depend on their patronage.

The feeling of antagonism should be removed, and the merchant and consumer should harmonize their views and build up a system for the mutual benefit of all.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

CANNED LOBSTER TO BE HIGHER.

Although prices for new pack lobster have not been officially named, yet from advance information there is every reason to expect an advance of about 10 per cent.

The cause of this is attributed to the assertion that the pack will be insufficient to meet the demand. Canned lobster has been meeting with splendid receptions during recent years particularly because retail dealers have got behind it with their selling forces.

LOOK AFTER SEED STOCKS.

Seed-time will soon be here and it is now due the retail grocer's stock to be supplemented by a good supply of garden and flower seeds. The grocery store is the logical place for seeds to be bought and sold because it is the establishment frequented by the majority of probable purchasers.

The seed department can be made a profitable one if taken early in hand. The dealer who is first on the scene with a supply of the highest quality is usually the one in a certain community to get the biggest share of the business.

Stocks should therefore be looked after soon, and seeds should be displayed, talked up and advertised if the best results are to be secured.

SECRET REBATES AGAIN.

After all that has been said about the giving of secret rebates, there are still many wholesale grocery travelers indulging in this criminal practice. Some wholesalers find that their travelers are confronted with the problem every week. These men call upon retailers to whom they ought to sell certain goods only to discover that dealers refuse to buy unless a better price is given or some other consideration.

Men in business ought to be honest. It should be a matter of principle for a traveler not to offer any secret inducement to a retailer, or for the latter not to countenance any such proposal. Every act of this character tends to lower the honest business plane and has a demoralizing effect upon merchandising as a whole.

Apart from this, the giving of a secret commission clearly shows a lack of salesmanship ability on the part of the traveler. If he must stoop to the point of having to hand out a two dollar bill or more to get an order, it brands him as a man not to be trusted and a man who has no qualifications to be called a salesman. Business done on honest principles is the only business that is permanent.

SELL PRESERVED FRUITS.

The amount of preserved fruits and fruit jellies consumed is becoming greater each year. The pure food laws which regulate the manufacture of these lines have done a great deal in establishing a feeling of confidence among buyers. The housewife is each year putting up less fruit and naturally this creates a better demand for these lines from the grocer.

Every merchant, knowing the large amount of fruit which is now used should make an extra effort to secure the trade in this line. In order that this can be done he must carry the best quality of goods, as the greatest drawback in the sale has been the feeling among consumers that the quality was not the best.

The retailer should call the customer's attention to the strict pure food laws which now govern the making of these goods, that the fruit is preserved in modern factories under approved sanitary conditions, and that only pure and wholesome articles are used in its manufacture.

SELLING SUGAR AT A LOSS.

A Toronto grocer offered a customer a hundred of sugar last week for $4.65, the customer of course expecting No. 1 granulated.

The cost of that amount to this dealer was $4.30 which allowed him 35 cents above the cost. Figuring this out on a percentage basis his profit was about 7½ per cent.

Is it any wonder that so many grocers are not making the business profitable? Here is one selling at a profit of 7½ per cent. when it costs him 15 per cent., or at least 12 per cent., to do business.

It would be better under most circumstances not to sell any sugar than to sell it at a loss.

KNOW THE QUALITY GOODS.

In these days of advanced grocery ideas and methods, there may be some members of the trade here and there who are still inclined to scoff. It is to be hoped that they are exceedingly few.

A little example will illustrate the point. Suppose the telephone rings and a customer gives an order; but as happens a hundred times a day she depends upon the grocer to send her the "best" of some particular article.

Is there any grocer who would reply that he was not sure he had it or that he did not have it? He might have a little doubt in some cases as to two brands or more which he believed to be all of the first quality.

Again when a customer in the store, referring to some article, asks the grocer as to its quality what would she think of him if he were to reply that he did not know?

The trade has been advancing and today the grocer who amounts to anything takes a pride in his work and realizes his duty to himself to study it. When the grocer says "this is the best" or "I will send you the best," he implies that he is thoroughly acquainted with the qualities of all the goods on his shelves. This is only as it should be and beginning with that fact he should combine his efforts to increase his knowledge and improve his methods of carrying on his business.

THE POWER OF SHELF DISPLAY.

It has been said that "some merchants regard their show windows as merely places to be filled up, the same as the shelves."

Now why should the shelves be merely places to be filled up. Occupying as they do a position open to the view of all customers in the store, they should not only be locations where the goods may be stored but should be a great asset in the selling of goods. Therefore every merchant should arrange the goods on the shelves so that they may act as silent salesmen.

With this in view, some attention must be devoted to the fixing of the shelves. Goods of one class should not be scattered about in all parts of the store but should be placed together, in which position they will attract more attention than a can or package placed here and there. Goods on the shelves should be carefully dusted quite frequently so that they will be as attractive as possible.

Spare moments may be spent to good advantage in arranging and re-arranging the goods on the shelves. Their value as a selling power may, in many instances be increased considerably by the addition of price and show cards, of which far too few are used in the ordinary store.

Practical Methods in Retail Stores

Advertising Potato Flour in the Newspaper by Recipe—A Western Dealer's Method for Finding the Standing of New Customers—Unique Guessing Contest From Alberta—Dealer Tells Why He Can Sell Cheaper for Cash—Several Retail Advertising Suggestions.

Installing Display Refrigerator

Kamloops, B. C., Feb. 16.—Ramsay & Philips, of this town, have just completed an eleven-day clearance sale of groceries, which they held in order to clear out their stock on account of extensive alterations which they are making. They are making some improvements in their storehouse and basement, putting in cement floors and installing a large refrigerator which will display goods to customers in their store.

During the sale, they gave 20 per cent. off all glassware and crockery, but all goods were sold for cash. In announcing this sale they used a full page in their local paper, quoting many articles of groceries with prices in each case.

How Potato Flour Was Advertised.

Quebec, Feb. 16.—A. Grenier, grocer, 94 St. John's street, in advertising a brand of potato flour which he handles, introduced into his advertisements in a local paper some recipes for cakes in which this flour should be used One recipe was for angel cake, and read as follows: "Mix and sift together, one and a half teaspoons each of cream of tartar and salt; ½ cup sugar and 1-3 cup Blank brand potato flour; beat until stiff the whites of five eggs; cut and fold in the dry ingredients; add ½ teaspoon of vanilla and bake 15 or 20 minutes in one dozen small tins or about 30 minutes in a bread tin."

Another recipe was for cream almond cake. A caution at the bottom of the recipe read: "Always use cold water."

Mr. Grenier has struck a strong point in the advertising of this line of goods, as it appeals directly to and interests the parties that it should in order to get results—the housewives. This kind of advertising no doubt will bring good results to the grocer who uses it carefully.

Hunts Up Past History.

Winnipeg, Feb. 16.—A grocer of this city believe that customers should give reliable credit references before any credit is extended to them. He believes that the best time to find out information regarding customers is before they start to deal, and not after they have run up a large bill which cannot be collected. For the carrying out of this idea, he has had printed an application form for credit on which the following questions are placed:—

Name of husband, in full:—
Name of wife, in full:—
Adress:
Husband's occupation:
Name of present employer:
How long in present position:
How long in previous position:
Name of previous employers:
Name of landlord and address:
Previous landlord and address:
Name of last grocer and address:
Name of last butcher and address:

These questions are followed by the accompanying remarks: — "We have adopted this system only as a protective measure to insure ourselves against "bad" accounts, which is no more than justice to ourselves, and by so doing we are enabled to supply you at prices just as low as if you were paying cash for your orders. Please understand that every customer must comply with this system, and under no circumstances can we extend credit without this application being filled out fully and returned to us."

A Guessing Contest.

Claresholm, Alta., Feb. 16.—A. Hutton, a local merchant recently interested the public in his store by running a guessing contest. The contest consisted of guessing the closest to the number of sacks of flour that Mr. Hutton had sold during last year. The prize offered was a hundred pounds of his best flour. Many guesses were received as a result, ranging all the way from four hundred to four thousand. The correct number was 967½, the winner guessing 990.

A Talk on Cash Business.

Strome, Alta., Feb. 16.—Dixon & Son are endeavoring to convince customers that the cash system is the best. Along with their regular advertising they recently had the following short talk on this subject:—

"Reasons why Dixon & Son can save you money—Cash versus credit.— The farmer dealing in a cash store has not to pay to provide against loss by others who never pay. He knows that every article in a cash store is marked on a cash basis. He finds that in a cash store he buys for $85 what he would have to pay $100 for at a credit store. Another thing—which a community ought to look at—in the matter of merchandise is, that requirements purchased in a local cash store are on the average lower than in a city store. It costs every merchant who is doing a credit business of say $30,000 yearly at least $700 for books, stationery, postage and time required in keeping the books and an average loss of at least $1200 on bad accounts, which make a total of $1900. This has to be made up by those who pay cash at a credit store."

Uses Recipe in Advertising

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 16. — "That's what I call a good advertisement," was the comment of a Chatham housewife on glancing through the columns of a London paper.

The advertisement was that of John Diprose, grocer.

Opening with a conspicuous heading in display type, "A Good Recipe for Cornmeal Cake," the recipe follows in ordinary type. Then a three line talk on "our —— —— corn-meal," a few words about guaranteed maple syrup, and the same about —— syrup— the kind of talk which makes you anxious to pay the price, which is quoted in each case. Then follow the addresses of the three John Diprose stores.

The advertisement occupies only four inches of space, single column, and the incident affords evidence on the question as to whether or not a small advertisement attracts notice. In this case the use of the recipe was the item particularly commending it to the reader.

The Power of Association.

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 16.—Porter S. White, a George street grocer, has been advertising maple syrup in the local papers lately. He emphasizes the fact in his copy that it is the genuine article, and drives the point home by the statement "take our guarantee that it's good and order some." He goes on to advertise pancake flour: "Maple syrup suggests buckwheat flour and you might as well include some pancake material with your order. Our —— —— brand gives splendid satisfaction."

These two lines being associated, if a customer orders one, she would be very likely to order the other also. The same applies to the impression made upon her in reading such an advertisement.

A MAN OF IDEAS.

The Grocer was shown the other day a unique colored picture postal card, which to use a colloquial expresion, had been "doctored." The illustration is that of a scene in Birch Island, Georgian Bay, Ont. Originally there were five Indian children standing in the foreground—three boys and two girls. A retail dealer secured one of the postal cards and pasted miniature photos of the heads of three travelers on the necks and shoulders of the three Indian boys, each head holding a Scotch Tam-o-Shanter The resulting effect can be well imagined when it is known that the personel of the 'knights of the grip' was L. Chapman, traveler for a Toronto wholesale house, Tom Scott, representing a soap firm, and Mr. Soper, a flour concern.

Beneath the post card is to be found this poem by the ingenious retailer:

Three youths who started full of hope,
one found his place in ——/—— soap;
another wiles away an hour in demonstrating —— —— flour; the other, too, has found his place—see his bland smile old leatherface.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Cream of Tartar—Advanced.
Colored Teas—Firmer.
Dried Fruits—Firm.
Buckwheat Flour—Up 10c.

Montreal, Feb. 16.—One of the features of the market this week is the situation in colored teas resulting from the new ruling in the United States which after May 1st will bar colored teas from that country. Further reference to this subject appears later with the reasons why it is of interest to the Canadian dealer in teas.

It might also be pointed out that syrups are in good demand in anticipation of an increased business during Lent. This might be remembered by grocers who are looking for new avenues of business at this season of the year. The Lenten season will undoubtedly bring business in lines that are not always in best demand and the wide-awake grocer will discover many of these for himself by the experience with his own customers.

Dried fruits continue to maintain their strength as also do canned goods. Coffee does not look weak, although the speculative price has been wavering of late. Sugar is doubtful and the bulk of the buying seems to be only for present requirements just now.

Sugar.—The market is problematical. From local reports purchasing is mostly in small lots for present requirements. Naturally the future movement of the market is merely a surmise. The market seems to have recovered some of the ground that was lost, if it were by no other means than strengthening up after a rapid decline that had every appearance of going further than present quotations. One section of the trade is inclined to think that the bottom has been reached. Others are at least looking for a little lower price, although they admit that the market has become slightly firmer. They maintain, however, that the primal cause of that weakness has not yet been removed.

Syrup and Molasses.—The sales of syrup of late have greatly increased and for the next month or two will surely be up around high figures. The approach of Lent means new business for syrup which is one of the articles the sale of which receives a new impetus during that season. Business in this line has been satisfactory. Molasses is in fair demand and will likewise receive increased enquiry.

Dried Fruits.—There is not a great deal of interest in dried fruits, although it is apparent that trade is beginning to waken for the new year. It might be said that in some lines there was no noticeable curtailment of demand. California seeded raisins are higher in the primary market and California loose are unchanged but firm. In regard to dates one report says stocks are not sufficient for the requirement of the trade until the arrival of new dates next fall, and also that dates of inferior quality are now selling at full prices. Other dried fruits are strong.

Tea.—The attention of the Canadian trade is directed to the tea market. Already, as the result of the action of the United States Tea Board in its ruling against colored teas, advances of from three to four cents have been made and in some cases more for the grades against which action has thus been taken. In addition numerous enquiries have been received by large Canadian tea houses for colored teas which according to several authorities are likely to have much enhanced value on this side of the line. After the first of May the new law states that no colored teas shall be brought into the United States. It will likewise be only after that date that the new crops will be available. Also, the stocks now held are not heavy. From the fact that the public have been brought up to call for colored teas in the United States, the demand will not thus be immediately broken off. Therefore, it is claimed that the tea merchants in the United States will desire to stock up with these lines and their source of supply is limited. It is pointed out that this is the reason for the call to Canadian houses. Again, if the prices from the south are really enticing, it is not likely that Canadian houses will hold their stocks. This is mentioned as the views of several who are closely in touch with the markets and who have carefully considered this recent action in the United States. Japans, China greens and Ceylon greens are the teas against which action has been directed. The individual Canadian dealer can probably figure out whether he will be affected or not. The situation is undoubtedly an interesting one especially as it has arisen within the past week.

Coffee.—Speculative coffee is off a few points this week due to the recent coffee happenings, but the actual market is just as strong as ever. The war between the longs and the shorts may go merrily on but all the time reports from the primary markets show unrelenting fixedness of prices. Figures might be quoted to show how the visible supply is decreasing and the effect the new crop will have but this has all been mentioned before. Undoubtedly the crux of the price question centres upon the new crop. In the meantime local demand is well maintained.

Spices.—Cream of tartar is firm and advances have been recorded of late. The consuming demand for pepper keeps good and the visible supply of this market is being steadily reduced, there being little of any grade on the way now according to one report. The Tellicherry and Aleppy crops appear to be materially less than last year and a higher market is expected. Foreign values of black pepper are high.

TORONTO.—One firm has advanced the price of canned tomatoes ten cents per dozen this week and others believe that conditions warrant higher prices than are being quoted just now. Stocks are evidently scarce and wholesalers are buying among themselves in some cases in order to replenish their stocks at prices as high as are now being quoted to retailers. Some canned tomatoes are being imported from the United States to this market in order to make up the deficiency in stocks here. As the heavy selling season for canned vegetables does not come on for about two months, retailers in some cases are buying only for immediate needs. The trade in canned fish is not extra brisk just now but dealers are looking forward to an improvement in the near future as the lenten season approaches.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS

Tea—Firm.

Beans—Advance

Dried Fruits—Firm.

Canned Lobster—New pack higher.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Wholesalers report that business has been a little quiet, so far this month, due no doubt to the bad roads throughout the country, making it difficult for the farmer to get in to do his trading, and the big falls of snow have also had an effect on the lumber camps and other industries throughout the country which eventually brings a decrease in business.

Sugar still remains in the critical position it held last week and the position of the market is as hard to ascertain as before. While some believe that the bottom has been reached, there are others who think that there is the possibility of another slight reduction. Raw sugar is a little firmer in New York, but United States refined is expected to take a drop to adjust itself to raw prices and some believe there is a possibility of Canadian following as it did last time. The demand for sugar has increased, showing that some dealers must believe that the bottom price has been reached.

Tea is decidedly firm, due to the strong position of the world's tea markets at the present time. The new ruling in the United States, shutting out all colored teas after May 1st has caused a big call for greens in that country, where they are largely used, and the result has been a raising in prices, which has also had some effect on Canadian markets.

Dried fruits are enjoying a brisk trade just now, business being divided among the several lines. Figs have a good trade on account of their low price, and prunes are called for freely because there is generally a good trade in this line.

The price of new pack lobsters are being fixed and will show an increase over present prices of about ten per cent. Trade in general in canned goods is only normal.

Sugar.—No changes have taken place in sugar prices during the past week and the market is still in a critical position with differences of opinion existing as to whether the bottom has been reached or not. There are no special indications just now of what the immediate future of the market will be.

European beet sugar continues to strengthen and it is now quoted at 9s 5d f.o.b. Hamburg, which is equal to 3.98 duty paid New York, as against the duty paid value of 3.48 for 96 degree test Cuba centrifugals or a difference of ½ cents per lb. From 3.45 last week, the New York market advanced to 3.48 with rumored sales at 3.51. Holders are firm and quote 3.54 for March delivery.

It is felt that the New York refined market will adjust itself according to the price of raws within the near future and it is thought by some that there is a possibility of the Canadian refined being affected, as the last drop in New York refined was followed by a similar decline here; but whether it will or not is an unsolved question, others believing that the bottom has been reached.

The demand for sugar is showing more activity, indicating that some dealers at least believe that the price is at the lowest point, or with the possibility of it being at the bottom, they are willing to run chances.

Dried Fruits.—There is a strong healthy market in dried fruits with steady prices. Stocks are not plentiful and higher prices are predicted on some lines before new goods arrive. Prunes in California are growing scarce, sizes smaller than 50-60s being well cleaned up. Reports from the Pacific coast also show a firmer market in raisins. Figs on account of their low price compared with other dried fruits are getting more attention just now than they have in other years. Prices on all lines are unchanged.

Tea.—As soon as the decision of the tea experts preventing the importation of colored teas into the United States after May 1st became known, there was at once an active inquiry for green teas throughout the United States, causing in some cases an advance of three or four cents per pound, which has caused teas to become a little firmer on this side of the line, as stocks of greens in the States are not overly large and will soon be cleaned up. There has always been a big demand for colored green tea in the United States. Coupled with this, the world's tea markets are in a strong position at present. This position has been brought about by the universal increase of consumption of tea, while production remains about stationary. The strength of the Ceylon markets has been increased owing to the large acreage of tea damaged by the inter-planting of rubber trees. The total Ceylon crop for 1910 is less than the previous year by eight millions, this large decrease being partially caused by unfavorable weather in the tea-growing districts.

Coffee.—The movement of coffee during January resulted in a decrease in the world's visible of about 600,000 bags. The statistical position of coffee at present is as strong as ever, with nothing known of just now that will weaken it for some time to come. Willet and Gray's Journal says: "Conflicting reports about the next crop will appear, but the weight of good opinion is not only that a large crop is impossible but the recent moderate estimates are being reduced. The rain in January came too late and in insufficient quantity to do good because the trees lacked strength, large quantities of young fruit could not develop and was lost and no amount of rain could replace it."

On the whole buying is being done sparingly but local wholesalers report that the demand is normal. Prices show no change.

Spices.—There is a firmer undertone in pepper in the foreign market. Total crops of pepper for 1911 are variously estimated at from 39,000 to 42,000 tons, against 51,000 in 1910. Cloves are firm but all spices remain unchanged in price, with a moderate trade.

One opinion was expressed that they will go much higher at the opening of navigation as the west will pay higher prices than exist here at present, but will not buy just now on account of the high freight rate.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS:—

Sugar.—Firmer.

Syrup.—Demand Increasing.

Dried Fruits.—Steady.

Winnipeg, Feb. 16.—With the settling of the elements and the readjustment of conditions after the severe storm, trade in all lines has taken a turn for the better. Passenger and freight train services have resumed their regular schedule and travelers who were tied up in small towns in the Northwest are again on the move. As much valuable time has ben wasted, endeavors are being made to catch up by the majority of travelers, and as a result large orders follow one another.

The annual bonspiel is at present being held in the city, having started last week, and a large number of country merchants have taken the advantage of combining business with pleasure, and are thus keeping wholesale and jobbing houses busier than usual.

Trade has been steady for all lines during the week, and unusually firm, there being no changes in prices whatever to report this week. Sugars are a little firmer, and dried fruits and coffee still hold their high figures. Stocks of evaporated apples are practically all used up, and only a few of the larger retail houses are now carrying them.

Sugars.—Prices remain stationary and demand has increased considerably. Several cars are being placed on the recent firmness shown on the steady market, and the belief is that bottom has been reached for a while. Stocks are plenty large enough to prevent any immediate advance on the local market.

Syrup and Molasses.—A growing demand is still in existence for syrup and prices remain firm. Molasses, while fairly active, has not increased in demand as fast as the former, but both wholesalers and retailers are satisfied with the trade. Prices remain firm at last week's quotations.

Teas.—January and February are always considered "the tea months" with wholesalers and jobbers, as these months are generally the quietest in the year for general lines, owing to the heavy stocking up of retailers for the Christmas trade. Accordingly all lines of tea are generally pushed these months by salesmen and travelers, as the merchants have some time to investigate qualities of same. Sales so far this year have been satisfactory. The market for low grade tea is much higher than it was a year ago, while the high grade teas are if anything lower than usual, and much lower in comparison to the existing higher prices for low grades. The result is that jobbers are endeavoring to interest retailers into handling better grades, and stock up with better quality by booking for several months ahead.

Beans and Peas.—A strong active market still prevails for both beans and peas. No advance has taken place during the week, and last week's prices are still quoted.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Feb. 16—With plenty of local potatoes offering the price is holding down though a slight increase is recorded. The quotation is $32 per ton. The dry weather of the last summer kept the local potatoes dry, and it is seldom they have been of better quality. Unless something happens it is not likely that importations will be made from Japan this season. The samples received from that country were good, and as they can be secured at a reasonable figure, supplies may be obtained from there in the event of a stringency in the market here. There are no Ashcrofts on the market now.

Boats this week brought in butter from Australia and New Zealand, the latter coming by way of San Francisco. The quality is better than for the last few seasons past. This is the first time that New Zealand has been on the market here in any quantity. For several seasons the Australian article has been alone, and that may have been the reason for its inferior quality. Quotations are 30 cents for solid and 31 for bricks.

British Columbia apples have nearly all been used up, and the table apples on the market now are from eastern Washington. Some excellent fruit is being displayed.

A decrease is noted in the prices of hams and bacon, the former a cent and the latter a cent and a half.

Sugar is down another ten cents, which brings it now to the figure at which the imported sugar formerly sold. It will take the place of the China sugar and the article from Scotland will have to go down to hold the trade. Reduction is also noted in the yellows.

Eggs are comming in from California which will keep down the price of locals, though they are now about to the lowest for the season, judging from the past. The eggs from the south are finely selected, fresh and of excellent quality.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Feb. 16.—A number of staple lines were marked down last week. Molasses dropped three cents per gallon and is quoted at 27 and 28 cents. Cornmeal is five cents cheaper, the price now being $2.80 to $2.90. American clear pork is now at $23.50 to $25.50 and pure lard is 14 to 14½ cents per pound. The only change in the produce market is in the price of case eggs which are now offered at 27 cents per dozen.

RAW SUGAR AT HALIFAX.

Large Quantities Coming In—Retail Grocers to Hold Outing.

Halifax, Feb. 16.—A West India liner, Boston, arrived here this week, bringing six thousand bags of the new crop of sugar from Jamaica. The planters say that this year's crop of sugar will be fully 25 per cent. greater than that of last year. The sugar is of good quality and good times are anticipated as a result of the staple crop of the Island.

The chief article on which customs duty is levied at Halifax is sugar and the increased receipts will bring up the customs returns at this port to large figures.

The retail grocers of Halifax will hold their annual outing on Thursday next. The party will go to the Florence Hotel at Bedford, and a committee has been appointed to complete the arrangements. The grocers plan on having an excellent time.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

The Minto Tea Co. is the name of a new concern recently formed with headquarters in the Queen City Chambers, 32 Church St., Toronto. A. H. Minto, who is identified with it, is familiar with the tea business, having had 17 years continuous experience testing and handling teas. He is a son of the late Wm. Minto. The Minto Tea Co. will import both tea and coffee for sale in bulk.

The Wm. Cane & Sons Co., Newmarket, Ont., have patented a device for holding down the lids of jam, candy, lard, spice, etc., wooden pails so that they cannot be removed until they reach the buyer. This Patent Wire Seal and Fastener, as it is called, will prevent pilfering on the part of delivery, express, railway men, etc., and therefore will insure safer delivery as well as a lower freight rate. The above company have also installed a new pony band saw for manufacturing clothes pins which gives them a greater output. They are also enlarging their wash-board department.

A neat catalogue has been issued by the Galesburg Cornice Works, Galesburg, Ill.; illustrating their vegetable display stand and mist machine. These devices are now in use in many stores in Canada and are proving most beneficial for the displaying of vegetables, since they are kept always fresh, clean and attractive and prevent withering.

Chocolate "Bordo" is one article that every dealer can sell quite readily and at the same time develop his confectionery department. It is a high grade confection with a most pleasing flavor and has gained a remarkably fine reputation since it was placed on the market. A post-card to the originators, The Montreal Biscuit Company, Brewster Ave., Montreal, will bring samples. Let every dealer anxious to make more profit from his confectionery department write today.

RECIPROCITY IN TEA.

A typographical mistake was made in setting up the heading of the Red Rose Tea advertisement in last week's Grocer. It read "Reciprocity in India" and should have been "Reciprocity in Tea," This caused the appropriate effect of the ad. to be lost and the publishers of The Grocer regret the error.

A General Merchant's Experience

A merchant, who conducts a large general store in an Ontario village, stocked Red Rose Tea a couple of years ago because he was convinced of its quality. And he has ordered Red Rose a good many times since. This week he ordered another hundred-pound case by mail and in his letter says:—

"I generally keep three brands of package tea for my customers, and the three that I had last year were Red Rose,————and ——————. Well I have dropped————altogether, or my customers have, and the Red Rose and————are a good team, with the Red Rose leading quite a little bit now."

This is proof, hot off the griddle of experience, that quality pays. Here is another proof:—

The sales of Red Rose Tea are increasing faster since the first of this year than they ever did before.

Experiences in Collecting Accounts

More of the Troubles to Which Merchants are Subject—One Instance Where a Dealer Received a Severe "Call"—Husband did not Know His Wife Owed the Money—Suggests a Change in Garnishee Law.

By J. M. Donovan.

I am always greatly interested in all articles in The Canadian Grocer pertaining to the collection of accounts and the manner in which merchants are abused when they ask for their own, and perhaps my experiences along this line would be useful to fellow merchants. I know I have been a little short and perhaps discourteous myself with some customers who would not keep their accounts balanced on my books, for a person's patience is often strained to a point where he can scarcely help it.

A short letter containing some plausible excuse why you need the money when the account is due is the easiest and most courteous way. If two or three letters of this nature are of no avail I threaten to bring the customer into court unless the account is paid. This occasionally brings matters to a head, especially with women.

Some it would be useless to threaten as it would only make it harder still to collect the account, and to these I send a short letter stating my circumstances and why I need the money and in the majority of cases it brings good results. Some customers would allow their accounts to run forever if you did not follow them up.

Letter to Slow Customer.

I had an account of $15.90 with one customer and although I considered that she was worth it, still it had been running for months so I sent her the following reminder:

> "Dear Madam,—In asking you for the enclosed amount, I sincerely trust it will not in the least inconvenience you to comply with my request for the payment of same. I have other customers to whom I am sending a similar request also as I have two bank drafts to meet this week, payment will be greatly appreciated."

The above letter brought good results from this customer who settled within 24 hours and also from other customers to whom I sent a like request.

In the matter of threatening to garnishee men I believe it is of little use as we must leave them at least twenty-five dollars and the class of people who give us the most trouble rarely draw over that amount and are in a position to laugh at us for taking such a course. Even if they do draw a few dollars more if an account of $25 is put in against them, it will take a long time for a dealer to collect it for it is not often such a debtor works full time.

I have known cases where garnishees have extended over a year and then been given up by the merchant and in these cases what little bit was collected was kept by the lawyer for his work. The way it stands now the garnishee law is of little use to a merchant to collect a debt from a married man unless he draws his pay monthly, while most men draw it every two weeks.

Change in Garnishee Law.

I believe that the law should be changed, making the retaining amount ten or fifteen dollars, so that something worth while could be collected by garnishment. If $15 was the amount that could be retained by a married man, it would force a good many to be honest and this would in time make them better citizens. Employers could do much to make them such and would eliminate a great deal of this bad pay and deadbeat business if they would work in conjunction with the merchant. This would be better for the employers also, as a man can not be an honest employe who is not otherwise honest.

A Customer's Displeasure.

Merchants receive many abuses in their work of collecting accounts. Just lately I had a case myself where a customer showed her displeasure because I asked her for my own. It was a customer who left me about two years ago, owing a good sized account. She would pay a little on this account once in a while when she got ready but did not get it reduced very much. So I dropped her a note, but two years was undoubtedly too short a time in which to expect an account to be paid. She appeared in the store with blood in her eye and her temper worked up to a high pitch. She threw down her account to a clerk with a whole five dollar bill and gave the clerk some very flattering advice to give me for asking for the account.

I was so out of patience at her for leaving so much advice and so little money that I wrote to her husband about the matter. I believe there was war in that household, as the husband knew nothing of the account; but it ended very happily for me for I received my money in full.

RETAILER CAN SELL MORE CANNED GOODS

Wider Market is Possible, Says Canner at Big Convention—These Goods are Now Recognized as a High Class Quality of Food—Harmful Preservatives Not Used by Responsible Manufacturers.

"Don't get away from the earth. Don't expect that the good people of this country are not going to know that a can of strawberries is not a can of strawberries if it contains three strawberries and a little muddy liquor; that a can of tomatoes, which should represent the clean, bright appetizing love apple, is not a can of tomatoes when it is filled with a little core and some real fresh water; that a can of peaches which represents the culls of orchards rather than the section that appeals to the eye, will be a detriment to the canned food industry every time it is permitted to masquerade before the public under a four color and gold label."

This is one of the paragraphs from a speech at the recent convention of American canners. It is not suggested by referring to it that canners on this side of the line should pay particular attention to this advice of a United States canner, but it might be taken as a motto with the determination of never losing sight of it. The quality of canned goods is best appreciated by the grocer who cannot open the can to display the goods, but must depend solely upon the reputation of the packing company and the standard which the label represents.

Better Demand Possible.

This speaker also pointed out that the consumption of canned goods is insignificant in comparison with the demand that can still be built up. It has been within the past three years that the greatest advances have been made. The people have been educated away from the idea that harmful preservatives were employed. Figures were quoted to show that the consumption of canned goods even now is per capita a mere bagatelle in comparison to what it might be.

The speaker concluded by urging vigilance on the part of the canners; care with the raw product, better containers, sound boxes, efficient employes and a general uplifting of the trade to a higher plane, and especially a maintenance of the standards that have already been attained.

TO OFFSET CHAIN STORES.

The Amsterdam Grocery Company, recently incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000, has opened a warehouse in New York, and commenced business. The stockholders are retail grocers who in order to meet the competition of chain and department stores have co-operated to form a buying corporation. Stock in the company is issued only to retail grocers, and a grocer owning one store is limited to five shares, so that no one man can get control of the company. Stockholders may not deal with the company unless they wish, while the company will sell to anyone whether they are stockholders or not. The company does not deliver goods to the retailer, who is obliged to send around his wagon for his own goods.

The Most Rapidly Developing Market in all the World is that of Western Canada. Manufacturers and shippers of grocery lines in Eastern Canada, Europe and the U.S.A. can find no method of getting into this great market equal to shipping their goods to us. We maintain large track warehouses in the five great distributing points of Western Canada—Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina. Our connection with the trade is most extensive and our facilities the most complete.

Easier Feeling in Live Hog Prices

Caused by Lower Prices in United States Market Where Supply of Hogs Has Increased—Eggs Continue to Lower in Price—Offerings From United States Markets at Low Price—Cheese Continues Firm.

On the United States markets the price of live hogs is tobogganing daily, on Monday a drop of 50 cents taking place, followed on Tuesday by a further decline of 15 cents. The increase in the supply of hogs at packing centres has been responsible for the lowering prices. There has also been a declining tendency in pork products in the States, due to the influence of the accumulating stocks on the market. This has had a depressing effect on the live hog market in Canada and prices are weaker. The English market is quiet and also shows a weakened tendency.

Eggs are still weak and prices at all centres continue to sag. Not only have there been freer arrivals, but the low prices in United States markets have had a depressing effect, as large amounts have been imported to all centres from the U. S. markets. The demand has been larger than usual for this time of the year, and only for the offerings in the United States, supplies would not be large enough here. In Vancouver eggs are being brought in from California and the good quality imported article is quoted at 38 cents, whereas local eggs there are 40 cents. Lower prices may be expected as United States firms are daily offering eggs at lower prices.

Arrivals of butter have shown a decrease lately, and prices seem to be holding steady throughout the country. An impression seems to prevail that prices are about as low as they should go, but a low market in the United States has a depressing effect. However, it is felt that present supplies and future arrivals will all be needed during the next few months to supply the demand. Australian and New Zealand butter is being offered in British Columbia for the first time in large quantities. It is quoted at the same price as the eastern Canada article.

The cheese market continues firm, with limited stocks. Stocks in England are also light, with a firm market, finest Canadian being quoted at 61s to 63s. The total exports of Canadian cheese from May 1, 1910 to Feb. 8, 1911, were 2,046,781 boxes against 2,040,301 boxes for the corresponding period in the previous season, showing an increase of 6,480 boxes.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—The market has been steady but rather quiet. There is fair demand for the various pork products, but the amount of business passing is rather light. Prices have been holding fairly steady, and no appreciable change has been reported.

Butter.—Prices in this market while unchanged, are reported a little firmer. Supplies in the surrounding country have become light, and it has been noticed that demand is being concentrated more upon city stocks. Some have stated that they expect to see higher prices, but the reasons for a change are hardly considered that apparent. Demand continues good and the market on the whole is considered quite satisfactory.

Eggs.—The market is weak. Prices have been sagging and the prospects are that they will continue to sag. The demand is good, but the supplies are far more plentiful than was expected. The rapid decline in prices on the U. S. markets was bound to have an effect on this side of the border and the high prices that had been maintained for some time and were apparently good for a few weeks, suddenly broke. Prices not only lowered, but the supply has been so plentiful that the market is still weak.

Provisions.—Live hogs are a little weaker, tending to lower prices, under pressure of heavy offerings on the markets of United States and Great Britain. Live hogs at country points are quoted just now at $7 per cwt. Dressed hogs are weaker also and are ranging between $9.25 and $10. The easiness in lard has amounted to ¼ cent reduction in the pure article, and in pails is now quoted at 12½ to 13 cents. Other prices are holding steady with a normal business passing in the staple lines.

Butter.—Butter prices are holding firm at present quotations. The arrivals are only normal and the market is not at all loaded. Demand is not overly large, retailers, on account of the recent drop in prices, fearing that the bottom has not been reached, and therefore not wishing to load up. However, it has been hinted that higher prices may be seen within the next month, as the supply generally drops off a little during February and March. However, there may be quantities of butter in storage, the amount of which is difficult to ascertain, and which might have some effect on prices.

Eggs.—When eggs get started on the downward course it is hard to tell when the end will come. For the past five weeks, prices have been gradually dropping to a lower level, and they still continue sagging. This continued drop has been brought about by the plentiful arrivals of new laids and also by the extremely low prices now ruling in the United States. Large quantities have been brought here from United States markets and lower prices are continually being offered by dealers in United States centres. Demand is fairly good, but one dealer stated that no doubt it would be much greater if it were not for the presnece of canned eggs in Toronto, which the bakers are using largely. It was stated that if eggs were not available in the United States just now that dealers would be unable to supply the demand with the present arrivals from this province.

Eggs.—Stocks of storage eggs are rapidly diminishing and southern fresh eggs are practically the only ones offered. Considerable difference prevails in prices offered by different wholesalers; some offer fresh eggs brought in by express at 32c, while others ask from 35 to 37c for them. On stored stocks a declining market is in existence and 25c to 27c is the price now quoted.

Butter.—Stocks of eastern creamery are large, and demand keeps steady, while dairy butter continues to decline. Manitoba creamery bricks are quoted at 37 cents, while eastern creamery are now quoted by some houses at 27 cents, and others at 30 cents.

Cheese.—The market in cheese is no higher this week than it was last. Stocks are fairly heavy, Ontario large being quoted at 13½ cents, and Ontario twins at 14c.

TO REGULATE COLD STORAGE.

A cold storage bill has been introduced in New Jersey prescribing conditions under which cold storage foods can be sold. It would compel the branding of packages containing food with the date of their receipt in any cold storage warehouse. It would prohibit the holding of food in cold storage for more than six months without the consent of the State Board of Health. It would give power to the State Board of Health to inspect and supervise all places in the State used for cold storage, and would compel cold storage men to submit quarterly reports stating the quantity of each food stuff on hand.

Flour Market in Uncertain Condition

With Slightly Easier Feeling—Manitoba Wheat Shows Slight Weakness—Trade is Slack and Prices May be Cut to Stimulate Demand—Flour Trade in United States Greatly Depressed Just Now.

No changes have taken place in the price of flour in Canada during the past week, but a slightly easier feeling is noted in the market. Manitoba wheat is slightly easier, and the price being lower than a few weeks ago, has a depressing effect also. Another fact is that trade in flour is slack and if this continues some of the big mills may reduce prices in order to stimulate demand, and this would likely result in a general reduction. However one opinion was expressed that some of the big mills at least are not anxious for any drop in prices, as they loaded up with considerable wheat at the high price and wish to get out even on the transaction. Flour prices in the United States are also much weaker and sales are reported there at lower prices than have been ruling. Millers in Minneapolis have cut the price of flour 15 to 20 cents a barrel in the last week, making a drop of about 50 cents in the last four weeks.

The price of No. 1 northern Manitoba wheat at Toronto is $1.00½ just now, while a month ago, quotations were $1.04. Ontario wheat has also suffered a shrinkage and is now worth 84 cents. Trade in Ontario flour has been slack, dealers operating on a hand-to-mouth basis and with little export demand.

Demand for flour continues slow in all the United States markets, and many big mills are credited with offering flour at greatly reduced prices. Taken on the whole, the markets in both the United States and Canada seem to be in an unsatisfactory condition just now, but millers are looking for an improvement. The English flour market is quiet and easier, Canadian patents being offered at 28 S ex ship.

It is generally believed that stocks of wheat in the world at the present time are larger than for some years. The visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada east of the Rockies last week was 53,845,000 bushels as compared with 37,215,000 bushels last year, showing an increase of 16,630,000 bushels.

Cereal prices continue without change, with a good demand reported from some centres. Oats are weaker in the United States markets. but continue steady to a shade easier in Canadian markets.

MONTREAL.

Flour—Prices here remain unchanged, but the market seems to be a little easier. A recent easiness in wheat brought Manitoba into line and the heaviest export business for some time. Supplies of wheat are said to be more plentiful than ever before and views are held here and there that the trend just now is downward. There is a fair amount of business passing. In the United States, market reports state that flour is depressed and that mills are accepting lower prices.

Cereals—The market is uneventful. Prices are unchanged. There is a good steady demand for rolled oats and in fact in all the heavier cereals there is good business just now.

TORONTO.

Flour—The flour trade is conceded by most millers to be pretty slack at the present time, although some mills report that trade locally compares favorably with other years. At any rate an increase in business just now would be gladly welcomed. Wheat continues to vary within a small margin, and while there is an easier feeling at the present, no change has taken place in quotations. The flour market is in an uncertain condition just now and the opinion was expressed that if the present slackness continues, a drop in prices in order to stimulate trade would not be a surprise. This might be offset by the fact that many millers bought wheat at the high price and want to get out even, before they drop their prices.

Cereals—Local trade in rolled oats is keeping up fairly well, but export business is not brisk. One dealer says that trade has not come up to the standard that some mills had expected for this season and that some millers who had loaded up with oats in the expectation of a big trade, are now attempting to sell a portion of their stock. Prices, however, remain the same.

WINNIPEG.

Flour—Trade in flour has improved considerably during the last week. The domestic demand has picked up considerably and large quantities are being shipped west and merchants have been stocking up. Eastern demand has fallen off somewhat, but is expected to improve before long. Large quantities have been sold for export at the opening of navigation which was composed mostly of first patents. Millers report that they did two thirds more trade during January in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions than they did last year. The outlook for February is also good, but March is always quiet, owing to merchants waiting for the opening of navigation so as to secure lower freight rates.

Fish Prospects for Coming Lenten Trade

Canadian Consumption Increasing and Retail Dealers Should Look to Their Stocks—Boneless Cod Likely to Be Scarce But Finnan Haddie Will be Fairly Plentiful—Lent Will Soon be Here.

Montreal, Feb. 16.—Statistics show that the consumption of fish in Canada is steadily and rapidly increasing. This fact is not only gratifying to those who are immediately interested in this great industry, but it should appeal to all Canadians and especially the retail grocer.

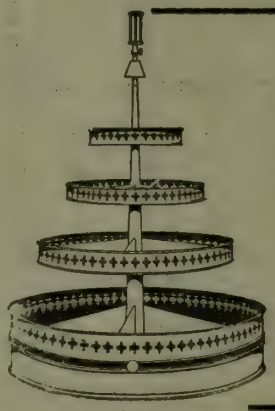
The reasons are practically self-evident. In the first place fish is recognized for its high food values. Then it is cheap in comparison with the other foods in common use. And as a third reason, the Canadian supply is to all purposes unlimited. As is often the the case, articles that are easily obtained frequently do not receive the attention deserving them, and this seems to be true of fish. But during the past few years there has been an awakening, thanks largely to a few men who have labored in season and out to win due recognition for Canadian fish, and as a result the benefits already apparent are highly satisfactory.

Lent Near at Hand.

The Lenten season begins with the first of March this year, and one result will be a heavier demand for fish. Advantage of this opportunity for new business should be taken by grocers for the average dealer in fish is able to report good profits. As a pre-lenten subject it may be well to consider in this article the situation in regard to the supply of Atlantic fish only.

In the opinion of one dealer, boneless cod is likely to be scarce and dear. Readers of these columns remember that owing to the failure of the United States fleets the Canadian market was invaded and practically every available supply was purchased to meet the deficiency south of the border. The supplies of green or cured cod were snatched up at a higher price than could have been obtained in the home markets. It is not meant that the market is going to be bare, but in all probability boneless cod will be a scarce article.

It is also stated that Labrador herrings are scarce and the price will likely be higher than in former years. This is condidered an exception for the herring has generally been in good supply. Mackerel is also reported scarce and ought to be dear. There is no pickled mackerel, supplies being all fresh or frozen.



Quebec and Ontario Tastes.

The chief business is in haddock and steak and market cod. Finnan hahdies which are simply a form of haddock are said to be plentiful. Prices are fairly high because of the increased demand for fish and the scarcity in some lines, but the prospects indicate a heavy trade especially judging by the amount of business that has been done up to the present. It is generally admitted that haddock is the favorite fish in Quebec and cod holds the upper hand in Ontario. However, it is found that the trade is well divided. Haddock fillets are finding a prominent place on the market. They are the cured haddock with the skins removed and dipped in a tomato sauce. They are not widely known yet but they are rapidly finding a good demand.

What is known as steak cod and market cod ought to bring a heavy business and altogether the Lenten season should find supplies ample for all requirements.

CALIFORNIA LEMONS.

The lemon business in California appears to have taken on new life and the acreage is increasing rapidly. There are now 18,000 acres of bearing lemons in the State, and it is estimated that at least 5,000 acres will be planted this spring. The available acreage for lemon culture is large, and if conditions surrounding the industry remain settled and stable, it is stated by some that before long California will supply the entire United States demand and leave a surplus of lemons for export. There is promise of a large lemon crop in California this year. It is estimated that the yield will reach seven thousand carloads. A great deal of attention is being given to improving the methods of handling the lemon in the field and packing houses.

When It Comes to Biscuits

the Grocer Who Knows Stocks

CHRISTIE'S

Because They Are the Best

¶ The superiority of Christie Biscuits is unquestioned. Since particular women from coast to coast call Christie Biscuits "The Best Baked" and "The Purest of all Pure Foods," the reasons for the wise Grocer's preference are self evident.

¶ There's just one surety of biscuit purity—right inspection of every ingredient entering into the "bakes," combined with cleanly, scientific baking under modern and sanitary conditions.

¶ CHRISTIE BISCUITS are the best and purest because we take every precaution that makes for biscuit perfection. For fifty years we have endeavored to bake the best biscuits—we have been insistent on high grade quality—we have constantly improved our facilities until to-day our big factory is known as the cleanest and most modern in all Canada.

¶ All our energies have been concentrated in the making of better biscuits. The name "CHRISTIE" is not only a surety of biscuit purity, but also a household word all over the Dominion.

¶ N.B.—Christie Biscuits sell more than biscuits.

The President Wrote a Letter To Sir Richard Cartwright

Just the other day it was, too.

And he said we were not interested in the new Elevator Bill before the Senate.

Because, he added, we operate our immense chain of country elevators simply to purchase the best wheat for our exclusive milling requirements.

We don't buy to sell again, don't you see.

So we don't care what happens at terminal elevators.

Now, Brother Grocer, if we had not such a large organization of wheat buyers, we would have to purchase whatever wheat the dealer cared to send us.

We would have to take chances with the wheat, you would have to take chances with the flour.

We might be exposed to the Mixing Evil.

And that famous FIVE ROSES wouldn't at all be the flour it is. The standard by which others are judged.

But no, we have bought the keenest wheat-buying brains to be had.

And we have made these experts the managers of our elevators wherever the best grains grow—one expert per each elevator.

And so FIVE ROSES flour, unlike its less fortunate rivals, is milled from the cream of the Manitoba harvest.

Are YOU going to sell "skim milk" brands?

Aren't you going to be the Quality Store?

And get the cream of the trade.

Potatoes are Firming Up in Montreal

Weather Has Recently Interfered With Bringing in Supplies—Spanish Onions are Selling Well—Larger Consumption in Oranges May be Looked for—Fair Trade in Imported Lines for This Time of the Year—Firm Market in Bananas.

The heavy shipments and good quality of California oranges this season will, no doubt, bring the public into the use of more oranges and a larger consumption in this line may be looked for. This high quality was manifest six weeks earlier in the season than usual. Other years California oranges reached the good quality stage just in time for the Christmas trade, but this season good quality fruit was being received here in November. The orange season is probably at its height now and fruit is being shipped which has not been duplicated for quality in many years, except in isolated cases of small quantities of some especially fine product. Prices must have also been quite satisfactory to the consumer.

California celery is also receiving considerable attention just now. Arrivals were short for a time as it could not be gathered on account of rainy weather but supplies are fairly plentiful now. No Florida celery has as yet been received on Canadian markets.

Potatoes are firm at some centres, the weather having interfered with shipments and caused prices to stiffen in those places. Home grown onions continue scarce with a good trade in the Spanish article.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruit—The general fruit trade is about normal. Lemons are in fair demand with the price steady. The supply of oranges this week was slightly below the usual figure and prices as a result was slightly below the usual figure and prices as a result were a little firmer. Trade is confined largely to seasonable goods which at this time are not numerous.

Vegetables—Potatoes are decidedly firm with quotations at $1.20 and $1.25. The weather recently interfered with bringing in supplies and prices for that and other reasons have stiffened considerably. There is a fair trade in imported goods such as celery, cauliflower, lettuce, etc. Business is inclined to be quiet just now and excepting the seasonable lines there is nothing specially exciting.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits—The first shipment of marmalade oranges to this market has been about completely cleaned up and dealers are waiting for the next shipment which is expected this week. Prices will be about the same as for the last, $2.50 to $2.75 per case. Lemons are arriving freely and the firmness in this line still continues. The quality of the lemons arriving now is good, and should stimulate sales. Florida strawberries are coming down to a more reasonable level and are now quoted at 50 cents. Mexican oranges have also been reduced and are now ranging from $1.75 to $2.

Vegetables—There is a big trade just now in Spanish onions with prices ranging around $3 per case. This line has ordinarily a fair trade and with the great scarcity of the home grown article, it has been greatly increased. However, supplies are plentiful and dealers will be able to care for all enquiries. There are few home grown onions on the local market and holders are asving big prices. A fair trade still continues in potatoes with Ontario at $1 per bag and choice New Brunswick at $1.10. The market is well decorated with such imported goods as celery, cucumbers, etc., with a good trade for this time of the year.

WINNIPEG.

Fruit—Trade has been quiet during the last week outside the city, but has increased somewhat in the city. Shipments of oranges have been exceptionally good, and the fruit is a full month earlier this year than it was last. A decided improvement in grape fruit is also noticed. The appearance of the fruit received a short while ago was considerably disfigured by scales which seriously hindered sales. Later shipments, however, are free from the trouble, and the quality is good. A few changes in prices will be noticed. Northern Spies are scarce and have advanced $1 per barrel, Florida grape fruit have dropped 50c per keg, while California lemons have advanced 50c per crate.

Good Demand for Fresh Frozen Fish

Fairly Liberal Offerings in This Line Also—Decided Scarcity in Labrador Herring and Green Cod—Stormy Weather Has Interfered With Fishing Lately—Prospects for a Good Season Are Bright.

Some lines of fish are in rather decidedly limited demand, some indeed being practically off the market for the time being. From the various reports received it is evident that the features of supplies are a scarcity of cured fish and fairly liberal offerings of frozen fresh fish. Stormy weather is reported to have interfered with fishing operations of late, and one result is that new fillets are scarce and some are not quoting them for the time being.

There is a decided scarcity in Labrador herrings and in large green cod. Salt herrings in barrels are scarce. There is an active demand for frozen fresh fish with the supply well up to the demand. Frozen haddock, finnan haddies and other lines that appeal to the Canadian trade are in good supply. It is noted that the lines in which the scarcity is most noticed are those which are heavily exported. Package boneless codfish is scarce.

Business is well maintained, and prospects for a good season are bright.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

St. John. — Owing to the stormy weather last week, the receipts of fish were scarce, and the dealers were forced to import from Newfoundland and upper Canada. A new product called lobster rarebit has been put on the market in Prince Edward Island by a lobster packer and expert in seafood. This product is a compound of certain parts of the lobster which have heretofore been thrown away as waste matter by the canners of this crustacean.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—There are practically no changes in prices this week. The general market conditions, however, have been changed somewhat by changes in supplies. Frozen fresh fish and finnan haddies are quite plentiful and are apparently receiving the bulk of the trade just now.

ONTARIO.

Toronto.—Prices in all kinds of fish continue at about the same as for some time past. No. 1 smelts have been reduced slightly, and are now quoted at 9 cents. Trade is not running in any particular line, but is distributed evenly over the whole list. Supplies on hand at present are fairly large, and dealers expect to be fully prepared to handle the Lenten trade. Although oysters are selling quite freely now, some dealers state that this season's trade has not shown any great briskness.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax. — Bare markets and high prices briefly summarize the fish situation in Nova Scotia. All points along the coast report fish scarce, and the weather has been so stormy that the fishermen have been unable to reach the grounds. At some points the conditions have been so bad that the fishermen have removed their lobster traps from the water, and will not put them down again until the weather improves. Less than 200 crates of lobsters were shipped to Boston this week—one thousand less than last week. The price in Boston has advanced from $28 to $30 for large, and from $12 to $16 for small.

The stocks of salt codfish now held here are small, and the fish in the hands of the dealers along the shore have all been disposed of. The last cargo sold at Lunenburg netted $6.50 per quintal, which is the highest price on record.

There is reported to be some stock in the dealers' hands at St. John's, Nfld., but the quantity is limited, and there are three months yet before new fish will reach the market, so it is evident that the fish now held at St. John's will soon be bought up. Add to this the fact that the green fish on the coast has been bought up and there is none to dry in the early spring as in other years, and the situation is unprecedented in the history of the salt fish trade. Never before has the season's catch been disposed of so early in the season. Large shore cod is quoted here at $7.75 to $8, ex-store and medium at $7 to $7.25. Bank cod are firm at $7 and large shore haddock are selling at $5.25 to $5.50. Pollock are $5. Shore cod from vessel are $6.50 and haddock $4.75 to $5. Herring are selling from $4.75 to $5, and No. 1 mackerel at $20 per barrel.

One steamer from Neil's Harbor, Cape Breton, sailed at Gloucester last week with 425,000 pounds of salt cod. This is the second largest cargo ever landed by a foreign vessel at the American port. When Gloucester interests are buying up cod at high prices and paying a large amount in duty, it shows the scarcity of fish.

A grocer reports that he recently got rid of rats by sprinkling lye on their runways. The lye burns their feet and they soon choose some other home.

FROST-BITTEN EGGS AGE RAPIDLY, SAYS DEALER

This is Why He Claims That Montreal Wholesale Men Have to Discard So Many—Light Freezing Turns the White a Watery Color and the Yolk to Thicken—Frozen Eggs May be Detected by Candling.

By F. Newman.

The recent letter of Woodman & McKee which appeared in The Canadian Grocer regarding winter eggs, show that they like many others even in Montreal do not realise where the real trouble is.

It is true that some farmers at this season of the year, as their hens begin to lay and when they receive fancy prices for fresh stock put their old eggs in with the new laids and sell all as fresh eggs.

But by far the largest majority of the eggs that are culled in Montreal at this season as old eggs are really new laid eggs which have been frozen.

Even a light freezing destroys the texture of an egg and causes the white to turn watery, the yolk to thicken and rapidly settle to one side, aging it as much each day after being frosted as it would in two weeks if it were not frosted.

Most of these eggs can be detected by candling in a dark room or by looking at them through a tube of paper when near a window. An egg that shows the white appearing watery and the yolk to one side, will after lying in a store a few days and shaken on a train till it gets to Montreal, be no better than a good 6 months old egg.

I have bought from the farmers and from other stores for many years, and having seen these eggs as they arrive in Montreal I am satisfied that the Montreal houses, as a rule, are honest in their candling and that three quarters of the real loss in eggs at this season of the year is due to frost before the eggs are gathered by the farmers.

Buying and shipping a good many at this time of the year and handling $1,000 to $2,000 worth per week during the egg season, I know something of eggs.

A dispatch from Washington says that the existence of an alleged coffee trust has been called to the attention of the Department of Justice at Washington. It is charged that the marketing of Brazilian coffee is entirely in the hands of a combination which controls the market and is now planning an advance of 4 cents a pound. The department is told the combination is preparing to market 76,000.000 pounds of beans at an advanced profit of $3,000,000.

At the arithmetic class the teacher propounded the following problem: "A customer comes into your shop and buys 2 lbs. of sugar at 6c, two dozen eggs at 25c a dozen, and at the dairy next door he gets one pint of milk for 4 cents. What does it all make?" "Custard!" replied the brilliant young student in the corner.

Ingredients in Chewing Gum and a Great Discovery

The one-time belief that almost anything was good enough to enter into the manufacture of chewing gum has passed away.

The chief ingredient in its making is chicle, the sap of a South American and Mexican tree. It is this sap which gives the gum its elasticity. The sap is collected in much the same way as the sap of the maple tree is obtained in this country. It is boiled in caldrons and then poured into moulds to harden and dry after which it is baled and shipped to the gum factories. When it arrives at the factory, it is thoroughly cleaned and afterwards dried. It is then sent on to the cooks who put it into large steam jacketed pans and add to it pure white sugar, granulated pepsin, powdered kola or other desired ingredients. Flavorings such as oil of peppermint, oil of wintergreen, etc., is then added and while it is still warm it is worked until it looks like gingerbread. It is then cooled, passed through steam rollers and reduced to proper thickness and cut into the required sizes. The finished gum then goes to the wrapping room where it is wrapped in waxed paper, tin foil and pretty wrappers and is then ready for sale.

The manner in which gum was first discovered is interesting. About 1884, a quantity of this Mexican gum was sent to New York on board ship partly as ballast and partly in the hope that it would be found suitable for use by bookbinders or possibly in the leather trade. It found no purchaser as it was thought quite useless for any known purpose, so it was decided to tow it out to sea and throw it overboard. One of the men standing on the wharf casually picked up a piece of the gum, examined it and found it would "chew." The idea at once occurred to him that it would make a new kind of chewing gum and he succeeded in obtaining the whole lot for the trouble of taking it out of the ship. That man developed into a big chewing gum manufacturer and is now a millionaire, several times over. The sale of chewing gum throughout the world is now enormously large.

Nature has solved the problem of distribution. It uses a multitude of agents to effect the distribution of its products.

Nature does not expect every seed to fall upon fallow ground and to take root. But, it achieves a profitable percentage upon its distribution. This is all that an advertiser has to do to reap a profitable harvest on his outlay.

A GROCER'S CO-OPERATION

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes gives a lustre which far outlasts all others under the heat of the stove, and that is why it has so many friends that call for it over the grocery counters the world around. We believe that the real live grocer wants to push the goods that please his customers, and that is why we have the hearty co-operation of thousands upon thousands of grocers everywhere. It pays you to push it.

MORSE BROS., Props. - Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

Think It Over!

Isn't it worth while to handle a line that the women want? Such a line is which produces a lasting jet black polish in the minimum of time and with the minimum of 'elbow grease.'

Moreover, there's a 'worth while' margin of profit for you in selling "Black Knight."

"I like your paper all the more, because in every issue you advocate dealers handling quality goods."

This was a statement made not long ago to THE CANADIAN GROCER by one of Canada's big manufacturers. He makes quality goods and has kept telling the dealer about it through THE GROCER for many years. He freely admits that the dealer has long since recognized his product as a standard in its particular line. Yet, lest the dealer should forget, and because he is anxious to interest the new grocer starting in business, he continues to talk quality.

In his opinion his talks are at one time or another utilized by the dealer in selling his article, and by using them the dealer's salesmanship powers are considerably developed; and at the same time he becomes more interested in his (the manufacturer's) goods.

"A Nimble Sixpence is Better than a Slow Shilling"

The sign that is prominently displayed in the purchasing departments of some of the largest retail stores in this country reads: "Money is made on turn-overs, lost on left-overs." It impresses buyers for the store to turn their stocks into money with the least possible delay. Quick "turn-overs" are as necessary as staple goods.

You can't be "nimble" with articles of questionable worth. They will stick to your shelves like a fly to molasses. You'll become heart-sick and weary with listing and re-listing them on your stock sheets year in and out. Read the brief details of three "nimble sixpence" sellers below.

"Thistle" Haddies

Known throughout the Dominion for the virtues of cleanliness, genuineness and the natural flavor of the freshly-caught and instantly-canned fish, just as they are taken from their ocean home. The "Thistle" brand is

A Quick "Turn Over"

You'll not find them lingering on your shelves, and they won't eat up interest on your invested capital. No slime, no dirt, no haste in canning. The "Thistle" brand gains in popular favor with each succeeding year.

Cox's Gelatine

As safe as a gold dollar to stock—as certain as sunrise to sell. The pure Gelatine that never, never, never disappoints the cook! In powdered or shredded form.

Coco Fruitine

The pure, palatable, rich and nourishing substitute that is rapidly crowding butter, oil and lard out of the race for the favor of economical cooks the world over. No water or moisture in it. It is because once used, it is never given the "go by." The demand grows constantly and thereby it follows in the footsteps of the established permanent trade it has won abroad.

A Quick "Turn Over"

Modern Methods Spell Increased Trade!

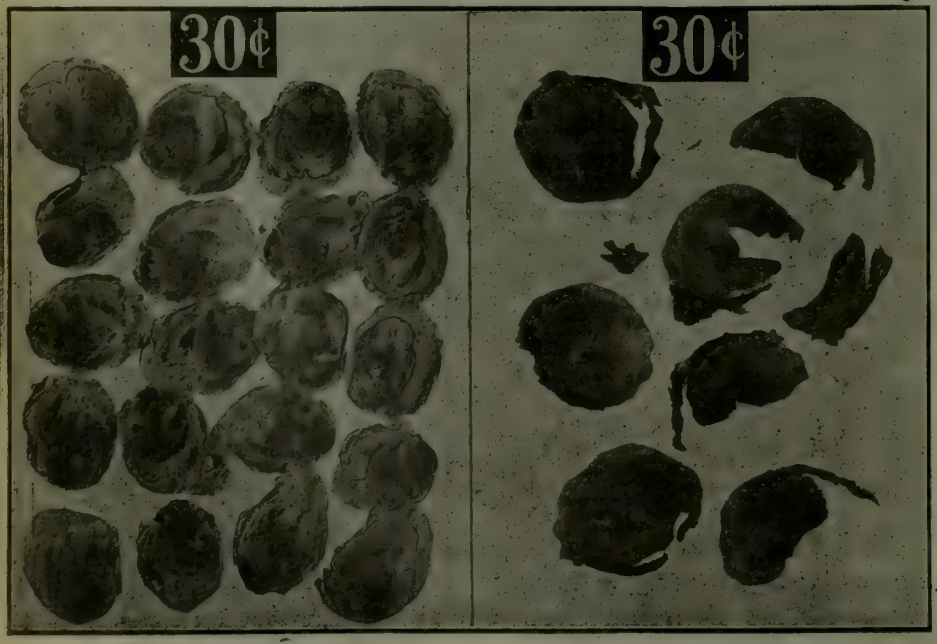
And one of the most profitable business bringers yet introduced into a grocery store is the

BERKEL Meat Slicer

This well-made and well-finished machine is both an ornament and attraction to your store, and it slices all kinds of boned meats with an ease and accuracy that is surprising. In the "Berkel" the knife is protected to prevent accident, and is fitted with automatic sharpener. It will positively cut at least twice as many slices to the pound as is possible with a knife.

Will Slice Boiled Ham and Bacon down to the last ounce.

Read what J. W. ISLAND, a leading Toronto grocer, says:



"We wouldn't be without it, and we wouldn't sell it for any money if we couldn't get another."

CANADIAN GROCER, of Dec. 30, 1910.

Look into the merits of the "Berkel" Slicer. It will surely increase your sales of bacon and ham, and incidentally put you in touch with a number of new customers.

Swiss Cheese

Your customers are becoming more and more particular about the quality and purity of their foodstuffs, and that is why it will pay you to recommend to them which is absolutely pure. Manufactured in the valley of Emmenthal, Switzerland, from milk of the highest quality and guaranteed unskimmed. It is so rich and creamy that it will please even your most particular customers.

Otto Wartmann's Emmenthal Cheese

IT IS SUPERIOR

to the Gruyere cheese, which is made of partly skimmed milk, and which, therefore, cannot have that delicious flavor which has done much to make the Emmenthal cheese famous. Further, the Gruyere loaves are 1-3 or 1-2 smaller than the Emmenthaler.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

Such has been the success and reputation gained by Emmenthal cheese that many manufacturers, both in Canada and the United States, have tried to imitate it.

Note:—We import ours direct from Switzerland, and in very large quantities, so that we are in a position to quote you the right prices.

Have Your Wife Try a Bottle

Mexican Vanilla Bean Gatherer

Take home a bottle of Shirriff's True Vanilla to-night. Have your wife use it for flavoring her sauces, puddings and cakes. Get her verdict. Then you'll know how pleased other women—your customers—will be when they have tried it on your recommendation.

Shirriff's

is made from first-quality Mexican Vanilla Beans. It is the REAL extract—aged until its strength, flavor and bouquet excel all others. Very economical—a little drop goes a long way.

You are doing your customer a good service in persuading her to try Shirriff's True Vanilla in place of extracts which are vanilla in name only. There is a good profit on each bottle of Shirriff's True Vanilla. Each bottle you sell is another step gained in the "good will" of your customer.

SAFE — RICH — PURE

Three sufficient reasons why every grocer should stock and feature

Canada First Evaporated Milk

SAFE, because it is canned in air-tight, sanitary cans, without the use of acid or solder.

RICH, because Government Bulletin No. 208 has found it richest in genuine food value.

PURE, because its preparation is one long tale of care, skill and cleanliness.

This Was No Joke

The other day over in the Town of G—, Ontario, Mrs. R. came into Mr. B.'s store and asked for a couple of packages of Dye. He only kept the old-style Dyes, and asked her if she knew what kind of cloth her goods were made of. Mrs. R. said she wasn't sure, so he advised her to go home and make the following test:—

"First to take a small piece of the goods and ravel out the threads each way of the cloth, then put a match to them. Cotton would be apt to burn freely with little odor. Wool might merely singe and be apt to give out a disagreeable odor, something like burning hair. Silk would burn less freely than Cotton and smell like burning Wool. Now, if it did not smell very much she was to use a Dye for Cotton, if it did she was to use a Wool Dye, but she was to look out to see that it did not smell too much or too little.

Unfortunately, Mrs. R. had a cold in her head at the time and could not smell anything, so she naturally thought that the goods were Cotton, and used the Cotton Dye. It turned out that her goods were really all Wool and naturally her Dyeing was a failure.

Since then Mr. R. has put in an assortment of DY-O-LA, the Guaranteed ONE DYE for ALL KINDS of cloth, which does away with all chance of using the wrong Dye for the Goods one has to color.

Mrs. R. is naturally much relieved, as well as Mr. B.'s other Lady Customers.

Leslie's Weekly Gives Some Points on the Selling Quality of Food in Packages——

"Few things have done so much for the health and comfort of the family and economy in its care as the putting up of food in packages, and from a sanitary point of view, it is one of the great achievements of the age. Under the old method of selling goods in bulk, the food thus sold was exposed to all sorts of contamination and infection, and in a large majority of cases to deterioration in quality. Almost all foods deteriorate quickly when exposed to the air, and their food value, as well as their palatability, is rapidly reduced.

Anyone familiar with the ordinary grocery store knows how goods sold in bulk are exposed in barrels, boxes or chests to dust, flies and the constant handling by hands that are at best not over-clean. If food thus sold could be bought at half the price of even the same quality of article carefully packed in air-tight packages, it would still be more expensive than the package goods."

Last year 23,087,810 packages of "SALADA" Tea were sold. That represents 23,087,810 purchases by people who know that "SALADA" represents the utmost in tea value and tea quality. It represents 23,087,810 sales by grocers who recognize that "SALADA" makes possible quick turnovers, small stocks, attractive display. It is quickly and profitably handled.

Dealer's Quandary as to His Profits

Correspondent Asks How Prompt and Cheerful Payment of Bills Would Influence Price of Goods he Buys—Some Pointers in the Securing of "Insidest" Price on Lines Where Competition Obtained.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Dear Sir :—This department has been of great interest to me and I have often been tempted to put in an oar.

By the way, I buy——'s gelatine in dozens at $1 per dozen. I wish to raise this question : How does prompt and cheerful payment of bills bear on getting inside prices ? I do a small business in groceries, crockery and shoes, $10,000 to $11,000 per year. Most of my grocery bills are paid by check to salesmen, and as soon as possible after they (goods or salesmen) enter my store I settle in full and if I have any kick it is done pleasantly. I am interested in store expenses, especially in a small business like my own. I figure on $900 expense, not counting my own labor. I figure on the following items of expense : Rent, salary, fuel, lights, watchman, taxes, insurance, horse-keep, telephone, interest, and less than $10 for incidentals. Last year sales were $11,227 ; expenses, as above, 8 per cent. of sales. I cannot figure more than 20 per cent. average profit on sales. Shoes and crockery run more, but groceries, on account of small profit on sugar, etc., run less. I might add that shoe sales were $4,000, crockery not known, but probably not more than $1,000. I am in a town of 1,000, seven selling groceries, and five selling shoes and crockery. Our combined manufactories employ not more than sixty hands, most all men. Who is doing better under like circumstances, and how do they do it ?

J. BLANK.

Concessions to Customers.

The "prompt and cheerful payment of bills" is of the first importance, not so much, perhaps, in directly securing lower prices as in establishing "bang up" credit. But this method of payment will enable any buyer to secure inside prices by insisting upon getting them. Look at it from your own standpoint.

If you have a prompt-paying customer you are willing to make concessions to him first of all. Not that you do it unsolicited—you are apt to think it's all right to get full figures as long as he's willing to pay such. But let him ask for some concession or other and you'll give him anything in reason and sometimes more. It's just the same with jobbers—they're human, you see. If you simply pay what they ask and make no complaint, why, they'll willingly let you do that, no matter how long you do business with them ; but, if you "wake up" some day and make a protest, you'll find them "Johnny on the spot" for making you inside figures. But the way to buy is not to kick. Do your kicking beforehand, with the salesman, or, if you order by mail, place a limit on what you'll pay for a given item.

Best Way to Sell.

I used to sell considerable goods to Charley Ott, who runs a big share of the great ——business, in ——. When I saw him he'd always look pleasant and say : "Good morning, Mr. Johnson."

I'd quote prices after the usual greeting and ask if he needed any goods. If he bought, I'd know my prices were strictly right. If he said : "No, I'm filled up to-day," and passed me a pleasant smile, I knew I was too high. He'd play fair—as all good buyers do ; that is, if I were right, I'd get the order without any bluffing. Thus I always felt safe to make a lower figure—give my "insidest" price, in fact, if I did not sell him on first figures. I sometimes, before I knew him well, used to ask him what he paid last. But he had always "forgotten," so I gave that up. But the minute I struck the proper figure he'd order ten or fifteen boxes.

Best Way to Buy.

Now, it's just so in buying. Know your market. Be familiar with the best price for which you can expect to get the goods anywhere. Then, if your salesman names you the correct figure, close with him. If he does not name the right price on an article on which there is no set price to the retail trade, don't argue or bargain with him. Just tell him you can't buy. He may ask the reason. Tell him, plainly, in so many words : "Because I can buy at a lower figure ; just the same goods, not 'just as good', and I must buy as low as possible in order to do my business justice."

Take that stand. Stay by it. Let everybody understand that that is just your position and you cannot deviate from it.

In order to be so posted you must read and listen ; ask questions ; be alert ; think. Think deeply of your business all the time. Try to find the short cuts and the lines of least resistance. In this way, imperceptibly almost, you will add a penny here and another there, gradually swelling the percentage of difference between cost and selling price, until you have materially increased your earnings. And that's the way profit will grow.

Not Enough to Estimate.

I'm not clear whether my friend is selling $11,000 or $16,000. He makes two amounts of it. If, however, he's selling $11,000 at 20 per cent. margin on sales and paying only $900 per year expenses, he's still doing very well. His own returns in this case would be $1,300. On such a business this would be a very satisfactory showing. If he's selling $16,000 on $900 expense, he's doing so remarkably well that few can hope to equal him and in his small town, with limited opportunities for wasteful spending, he should be comfortably well off in a few years. But is he only spending $900 ? Is he sure of this ? Is it not mere estimate ? He says he figures thus and so ; but does he do more than "figure" ? It won't do simply to estimate. He must KNOW.

Wants More Concise Figures.

I'd like much to hear more from this correspondent, for he is a thoughtful man with earnest aims and seems to be in a fair way to make a considerable success. If there's any way in which I can help him to better his success, I want to have the chance to give him an upward boost. I suggest that he send me accurate, actual figures. State rent ; give number of help employed and amount paid to each ; size of room ; items of fuel, light, watchman, insurance, horse-keep, etc. Thus I'll be in position to know something of what I am talking about and maybe point a lesson for many other readers at the same time. It's a comfort to me that so many of my readers are now perfectly certain that none of their figures or affairs will be exposed when they write to me. It makes work much easier for all of us and will in time make this department a useful one.

The Importance of Seeds as a Side Line

Profitable Line That Can be Taken up by the Grocer or General Dealer During Spring Months—Plans Should be Laid Early and Comprehensive Scheme Arranged—Importance of Quality, and Display of Goods.

One of the most profitable lines that the grocer or general dealer can take up during the spring months is seeds. Under present methods, this can be done by devoting only a small space in the main part of the store, and can be made to reap a fairly good profit, as there will be no left overs if this department is conducted properly. The merchant therefore should start at once to look to his seed stocks and to do his planning for the coming season.

The merchant who intends to make seeds a side line in the spring should get started in the work early. He should look after his purchasing before the winter is gone, as seeds usually advance in value as the seeding season approaches, and stocks shorten under the demand. And early buyers can make sure of securing good seed, and also have a chance to test it before offering for sale if they so wish.

Seed should be on exhibition long before the planting season arrives so as to get the farmer interested. They are always looking ahead and if you are the first to introduce the seed question to them, you have a greater chance to sell them their supplies.

Handle Only the Best.

As in all other lines, if the dealer wishes to keep trade in seeds, he must handle only the best. If you give poor seed to the farmer, it will not only destroy your seed trade eventually but it will break down his confidence in you in all lines as well. Poor seed will not make the farmer your best friend and will be remembered by him far longer than a little higher charge would be. Therefore take great care that your seed is of such a quality that you will not fear to offer it to any customer. Keep the kind that you would sow yourself if you were a farmer. Ocassionally you will find a person enquiring for cheap seed but you should do your utmost to convince him of the folly of buying cheap, and low grade seeds. The best will have to sell at a higher price, but by being able to explain to the farmer how it is the cheapest in the end, you will have no difficulty in making sales. You will also find that the selling best seed will result in repeat orders as the price is soon forgotten if the crop is good. Buy seeds of some reputable company whose goods are well known to the public, as you will find it easier in introducing them to your customers.

How to Sell Seeds.

In order to sell seeds, they must be well displayed and this should be started early in the season to get the best results. For garden seeds in packages, seed firms supply holders which makes their display easy. If you handle garden seeds in bulk it would be well to exhibit them in glass jars, with the name and price on each, for the information of the customer. Timothy, clover, alsike, and similar seeds can be shown in either the original containers, or in dishes, but care should be exercised that they do not become mixed. It might be wise to have a magnifying glass, that customers could examine seeds, but your guarantee of quality, backed by the belief that the seeds are the highest quality, should be the best selling power that a merchant could employ. It is well to have the display near the door so that it will catch the customer's eye when they enter the store. As the season for sowing approaches, it will also be well to have a window display of seeds so as to catch the passerby as well as those who enter the store.

Growing Exhibits.

The farmer may be interested in seeds by growing exhibits of the different kinds which is a strong point in convincing him of their germination. Small boxes may be filled with earth, and the principal lines in which he is interested, such as timothy, clover, alsike and corn, sowed. Nothing is of greater interest or more convincing to the farmer than a practical example of the productive powers of the seed you wish to sell him.

But, while proper display and good selling stock may interest regular customers, it will not get trade outside of that circle, and in order to extend, some advertising must be done. In most cases, the local paper is a good medium to use.

A BRIGHT WESTERN GROCERY STORE INTERIOR

This is an interior view of the grocery store of George Kerr & Company, Lethbridge. Note the tasteful manner in which the crated oranges are displayed in the foreground, and also the attractive piling of the packages on the shelves. A close scrutiny of the picture will reveal the fact that Mr. Kerr, in addition to the other equipment of the store, has installed a computing scale and store bins.

Quality the Keynote.

Quality should be the keynote of your advertising, and price the secondary consideration. Facts which will be helpful in advertising and in general selling talk, may be secured from the catalogues issued by seedmen. Merchants should acquaint themselves with all important facts in connection with seed. He should know how many bushels to sow to the acre, and the kind of land certain grains will grow best upon; he then can talk intelligently to the farmer.

Red clover, alsike, and seed corn, are ranging about the same in price as last year, but some grades show a slight advance. Timothy is considerably dearer, and sales, which are generally very large in this line will probably be decreased this year. This fact should also be taken into consideration when buying that the supply ordered will not be too large. Merchants should gauge their needs as nearly as possible and remember that it is best to run out than have any big quantity left over. As soon as supplies get low during the selling season, additional shipments should be ordered so that customers need not be disappointed when they come to you.

Retailers Ventilate Reciprocity Views

Lively Discussion at Their Association Meeting Pro and Con —Which Way Will Sugar Move the Question of the Hour— Newspapers Criticised for Their Accusations Against the Profits of the Dealer—Presentations to Retiring President and Secretary.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—That retail grocers are keenly alive to the questions of the day was amply demonstrated by the interesting discussion on reciprocity and other questions of interest to the grocery trade which came before the meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association at their monthly meeting on Monday night with President W. C. Miller in the chair.

A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation to Past President D. McLean of a beautiful oak china display cabinet, which was made by D. W. Clark, who spoke in complimentary terms of Mr. McLean's work during the past year. J. C. Beaumont, who for the past two years has been secretary of the association, was the recipient of a purse of gold, the presentation being made by J. S. Bond, who spoke favorably of the work which Mr. Beaumont had performed during his tenure of office.

The reciprocity question incidentally came up for discussion and the general opinion was that if it would be of benefit to the masses, it would be a good thing for the country. The association wished to know how it would affect them or their business, as it was impossible to find this out from the daily papers which were extremely on one side or the other, barely discussing the question from a national standpoint.

B. Snow believed that the proposed change in tariff would be beneficial to the consumer which was what the grocers wished. The cost of living has been high and anything that would relieve this, should be warmly welcomed by the grocer in the interest of his customers.

J. S. Bond believed that free exchange would give a better market to the Canadian producer, while the producer would not be affected by United States goods because they are brought in at a season when our own cannot be secured. If the proposed change would benefit the masses, it is what is wanted.

Opposition to Reciprocity.

Reciprocity was also championed by D. W. Clark and John Blood, but found opposition from Frank Johnston and F. C. Thorne. Mr. Johnston maintained that if the manufacturers' interests were injured so would be the interests of the people who depended on them for employment. Mr. Thorne contended that a high tariff wall was necessary if we were to retain the large manufacturing interests which had spread to Canada from the United States, and that reciprocity would mean the loss of many of these as well as the curtailment of further United States capital as far as Canada was concerned.

Uncertainty of Sugar.

Some discussion took place in regard to the present uncertain position of the sugar market. It was pointed out that some big dealers were purchasing heavy stocks, which would indicate that they believed the bottom had been reached. One opinion was expressed that it would be best to wait for the market to show an upward tendency before putting in their stocks; but it was recalled by a member that one year, sugar went up ten cents and everyone believing that the turning point had come bought heavily and when they had made some large purchases it dropped back 20 cents.

It was also pointed out that other years when raws were at the same price, refined was cheaper than it is at the present time.

The Retailer's Profit Again.
